Summonses, car crashes, and missing diamond ring

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Summonses

• A 38-year-old Hingham man is being summonsed to court for operating with a suspended registration, operating an uninsured motor vehicle and number plate violation following a traffic stop at about 8:46 a.m. on Tuesday (May 11) on King Street. Police said the 2001 dump truck belonged to a Hingham contractor. An officer was behind the truck and ran the plate that came back as expired and belonging to a different vehicle, police said. Police said the expiration date sticker on the plate had been changed with a Magic Marker.

The operator is also an owner of the business, police said. Police said they had to call in a heavy-duty tow truck to tow the vehicle because the standard wrecker could not handle it.

• A 52-year-old Scituate woman is being summonsed to court for unlicensed operation and failure to stop for a stop sign after an officer observed her 2007 Nissan Maxima roll through the stop sign at Border and Summer streets at about 6:48 a.m. on Wednesday (May 12). The officer stopped the car by Atlantica and a registry check revealed her license had expired on her birthday, March 17, police said. Her car was turned over to a licensed driver she knew and did not have to be towed.

MV crashes

• At 5 p.m. on Friday (May 14), a 1996 Buick Century operated by a 48-year-old Hingham man, rear-ended a 2003 Chevrolet van, operated by a 27-year-old Hull woman, on Forest Avenue by Cedar Acres Lane. The Hingham man told police he was distracted while trying to dial his cell phone and rear-ended the van that was slowing down. Neither vehicle was towed and there were no apparent injuries, police said. The man was cited for impeded operation (cell phone).

• At 8:07 p.m. on Friday (May 14), a 52-year-old Cohasset man was backing out of his Ledgewood Drive driveway when he backed into an unoccupied 1994 Chevrolet Blazer that was parked across the street from the driveway. There was minor damage, no injuries and no tows, police said.

• At 11:19 p.m. on Saturday (May 15), a 1995 BMW, operated by a 17-year-old Cohasset boy, that was headed north on Atlantic Avenue by Cunningham Bridge went around the corner too fast and hit a tree, police said. The BMW was totaled. The driver was cited for failure to stay in marked lanes and for not wearing a seatbelt, police said. His 17-year-old passenger was wearing a seatbelt.

Protective custody

A 16-year-old Cohasset boy was taken into protective custody after police stopped to talk to three teens, who were walking near Forest Avenue and North Main Street on Saturday (May 15) at about 9:35 p.m. A few minutes earlier at 9:08 p.m., police had investigated a reported house party on Beach Street but when they arrived the partygoers had all taken off. A neighbor, who was checking on the house for the homeowners while they were away, discovered the party and called police.

Of the three teens, the 16-year-old, who appeared to be intoxicated and looked much younger than 21, refused to cooperate with police and would not provide his name. He was placed in protective custody; police found 13 cans of beer in his backpack so he was also charged with being a minor in possession of alcohol. The other two boys were cooperative and were allowed to go home.

Diamond ring

Police are trying to help a 78-year-old Cohasset woman who reported that her 1.74 karat diamond ring, valued at $14,500, was missing last week. She is not sure where she lost it but thinks it may have fallen off when she was transferring her husband from the Life Care Center in Scituate to Sunrise in Cohasset. The woman reported the missing ring on Thursday (May 13).

Safe stolen

The owner of the Red Lion Inn reported to police that a safe weighing 4,000 pounds with a big handle and locking mechanism was missing from an upstairs office. The safe contains family heirlooms and personal papers, the owner said. Surveillance tapes are being reviewed and the matter is under investigation, police said. The theft was reported at 10:35 a.m. on Sunday (May 16).

Missing child

A frantic mother called 9-1-1 last week when she could not locate her six-year-old daughter. She then put the phone down, started yelling and hung up the phone, police said. When police arrived the mother had located her daughter inside the house but was not in a position to answer the phone when police called back.

Police explained that often a young child is located inside a house, which police always check twice. In once incident about a missing child, the little boy was found napping under a bunch of pillows on a couch.

Workbench missing

A 39-year-old Cohasset man, who purchased a house that was in foreclosure on Forest Avenue, reported to police last week that a $200 heavy-duty workbench with a vise that the previous owners had left was missing. Police, who said it is a civil matter, said he was under the impression that the workbench went with the house but it appears that the previous owners took it.

9-1-1 hang-up

Police checked all the rooms at Deer Hill School after receiving a 9-1-1 hang-up call from an inside line at the school last Tuesday (May 11) at about 9:48 a.m. Everything checked out OK, police said. Because of the school's phone system it is difficult to determine which room the call came from, police said.

Missing dog

A Jerusalem Road woman called 9-1-1 to report her Labradoodle was missing last Wednesday at about 7:23 a.m. She was told to call on the business line so her call could be transferred to the animal control officer. The animal control officer was able to help the caller, police said.

Speeding complaint

Police spoke to a Cohasset High student after receiving reports of her speeding on Atlantic Avenue last week from a concerned caller who provided the plate number to the 2003 Toyota SUV.

Loud goodbye

Police followed up on a complaint about people possibly fighting in a motor vehicle that was parked by the marsh on Summer Street at about 12:04 a.m. on Thursday (May 13). As it turned out the occupants were just talking loudly while saying their goodbyes for the night, police said.

Register of Deeds to hold office hours in Cohasset

Although the Registry staff cannot provide legal advice, they can provide answers to basic questions, give general information, provide Homestead Declaration forms and take a document for recording.

Norfolk County Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell will hold scheduled office hours in Town Hall, Room 2B, 41 Highland Ave., Cohasset, from 10 a.m. to noon, on Wednesday, June 16.

The Register and his staff will be on hand to answer questions or concerns about any Registry of Deeds matter. The Register will have information about the Massachusetts Homestead Act as well as an Internet computer and printer that can be used to confirm the status of a mortgage discharge, confirm that a document has been recorded, print out a deed, or demonstrate how the Registry's website works. No appointment is necessary.

This is a community outreach program sponsored by O'Donnell to make it convenient for residents who may have a Registry question, an interest in understanding the recording process or difficulty traveling to the Registry building in Dedham. Although the Registry staff cannot provide legal advice, they can provide answers to basic questions, give general information, provide Homestead Declaration forms and take a document for recording.

The Norfolk County Registry of Deeds, 649 High St., Dedham, is the principal office for real property in Norfolk County. The Registry is the basic resource for homeowners, title examiners, mortgage lenders, municipalities and others with a need for secure, accurate, accessible land record information. Registry land records back to the founding of Norfolk County in 1793 are available for online viewing. The Registry's online index is available from 1927 forward and continues to expand to include earlier records. The Registry of Deeds can be contacted via telephone at 781-461-6101, or on the Internet at www.norfolkdeeds.org.

BRIEFLY

School Committee meeting recordings

In the future, the School Committee may have a secondary means of recording its meetings beyond the meeting minutes.

Member Jeanne Astino brought up the possibility of video or audio recording the School Committee meetings at a recent meeting.

"I think it would be helpful for us to record the meetings as a reference point," Astino said. Especially when there are questions or clarifications needed as to motions, decisions or process. Astino added with the changes in the Open Meeting Law coming down on July 1 the minutes of the meetings have to be more detailed and capture the 'full essence of the motion and discussion.'

"I just think it would be helpful for many different reasons," Astino said.

Superintendent Denise Walsh said for the committee to look to having a neutral party to do the taping and archiving of the recordings, "I would not want us to have the responsibility."

Walsh said it might be appropriate to have the policy subcommittee have a discussion on changing the way meetings are recorded, or having a secondary means of recording.

"It would be really good for us to have something to go back to," said School Committee chair Helene Lieb.

Walsh to step down next spring

sionals payroll change, the decision not to show the Obama back-to-school speech and the prospect of providing more blended classes at the high school) as issues that could have been handled better by the superintendent.

"Families and the community are disengaged," member Jeanne Astino said.

School Committee member Linda Snowdale said she has heard from teachers who do feel inspired and there are others that feel stifled, "I think there is a lack of input asked for from teachers."

The de-leveling issue was a prime example, Astino said. "The teachers were very upset about that...and that really does need to be addressed," Astino said. "We need to make a decision on what's right for our community."

At several points during the discussion "a low teacher morale" was mentioned as an issue.

Lieb said communication is now heading in a "positive direction" after concerns were raised and needed to continue on that path.

Member Paul Schubert pointed to some positive communication and outreach that led to improvements within the school district. He said Walsh approached the Cohasset Education Foundation about several projects that are now integral parts of the curriculum and schools.

School Committee vice chair Alfred Slanetz spoke to Walsh's budget savvy, "(Walsh is) frugal and efficient. She wants the highest quality experience in the classroom, everything else she looks to be efficient and cost effective."

The committee members noted nearly all areas of the strategic plan, which was created five years ago, have been accomplished, or are the cusp of achievement.

In the area of assessment of the student achievement, School Committee members felt it was a strength.

"(In terms of accountability) this is really what Denise Walsh is all about: holding people to high standards," Walsh said.

Superintendent of Schools Denise Walsh will leave at the end of her contract in June 2011.

Public allowed to comment

In an unorthodox move, School Committee chairman Helene Lieb said she would go against legal counsel's recommendation and allow the public to comment at the end of the School Committee's discussion.

"I think it is very important to elicit feedback from the audience at the appropriate time, in an appropriate way," Lieb said.

School Committee members Paul Schubert and Alfred Slanetz expressed reservations at this decision.

"I have grave reservations to do what you are doing," Schubert said. "If something comes up that's libel, it could potentially (lead to a lawsuit)."

Slanetz said he didn't want the committee to take any legal risk, "you (Lieb) are the chair of the committee, but it is the committee as a whole that's responsible and we're are all representing the town."

Lieb established "rules" for comment stressing the need for respect for the superintendent and the people of Cohasset. Comments had to speak to the superintendent's professional role and not her character or reputation.

Member Jeanne Astino agreed with Lieb's decision to allow comment, "2100 people came out to voice their opinion (at the election) on what needs to change...we are here because we made certain promises."

Linda Snowdale, who was elected with Astino in April, said she was not opposed to allowing comment, but the committee needed to tread very carefully.

Seven members of the community weighed in on the superintendent's performance or evaluation process.

Slanetz spoke to the many budget efficiencies found over the last few years from sharing special education vans with other school districts to creating the program supervisor structure to facilitate more interdisciplinary learning (and garner a budget savings).

Schubert said presenting a balanced budget to the town for the last six years spoke for itself and was remarkable given the state of other local community and state finances.

"(Walsh has) come up with a lot of ideas that are original, a little different. She just needs to remember how those ideas are going to be implemented and get input from the involved parties," Snowdale said.

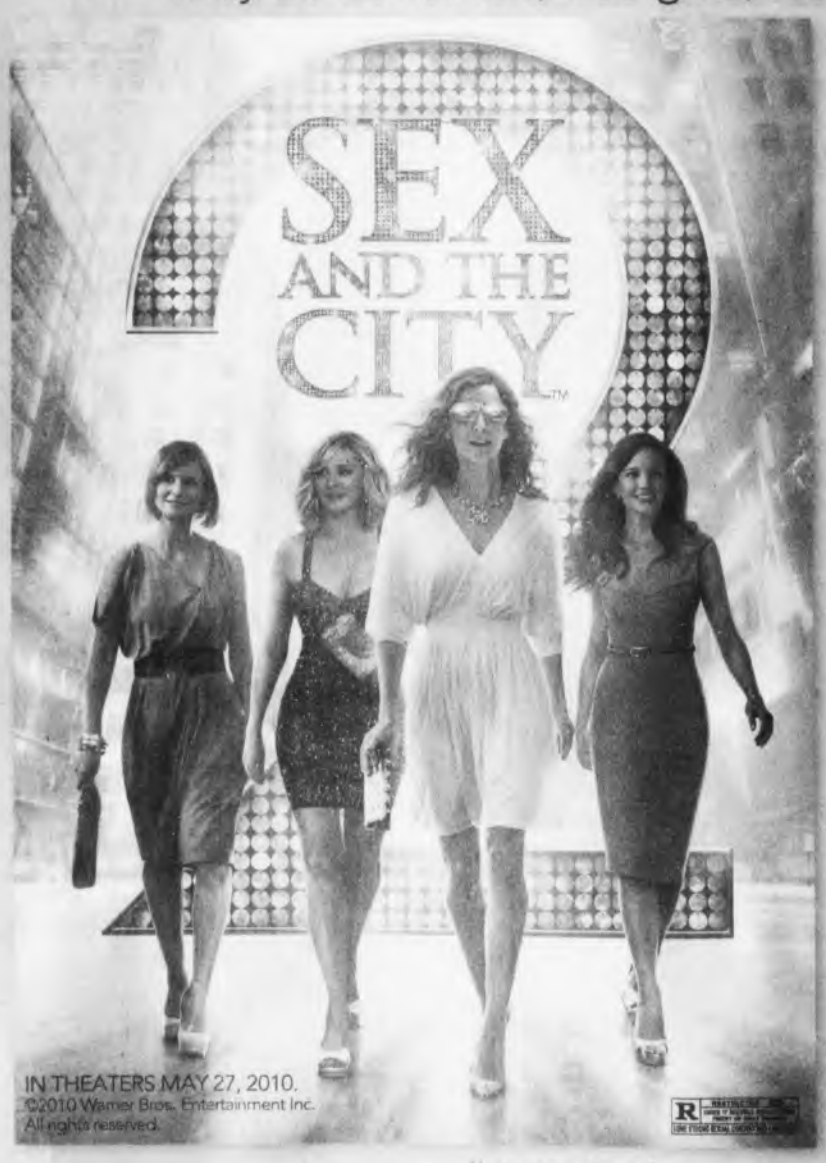
Some members expressed a need for more communication and tact in conflict-resolution situations to prevent the school department from spending hefty legal expenses.

"I hope that's an area we can work on to resolve contracts outside of arbitration," Snowdale said.

After just over two hours of the public deliberation on the evaluation of Superintendent Walsh, the School Committee adjourned to executive session where they drafted a written evaluation. The written evaluation is not a public record.

Don't overpay for deed copies

Some Norfolk County residents are still being solicited to pay a private company $59.50 for "certified deeds" they could get directly from the Norfolk Registry of Deeds for just $2. "It may be legal, but I still think it's outrageous," said William P. O'Donnell, Norfolk County's Register of Deeds, of a direct-mail solicitation thousands of Massachusetts homeowners recently received. "I am bringing this to the public's attention in response to a direct inquiry I received today from a Norfolk County resident who nearly fell victim to this scheme." WBZ-TV recently visited the Norfolk Registry, spoke to Register O'Donnell and highlighted this ongoing problem. To see the full news story, log on to the Registry's website's home page at www.norfolkdeeds.org and click on the related news item.



In an official-looking letter that includes the homeowner's Norfolk Registry Book and Page deed citation, National Deed Service Inc. writes: "The U.S. Government Federal Citizens Information Center website recommends that property owners should have an official or certified copy of their deed. If you don't already have this important document, you may obtain one now." The letter offers homeowners one certified copy of their deed for $59.50, and then appears to offer a bargain by charging only $20 for a second certified copy. The firm's letters do disclose that many of these records "are available free or at a nominal cost from government agencies," and notes that it is not affiliated with any governmental agency. That doesn't sit well with O'Donnell, however.

"I just want to warn all the residents and businesses of Norfolk County that this practice preys on those who don't realize how easy and inexpensive it is to contact the Registry directly to obtain a certified copy of a deed or any recorded document," said O'Donnell. "For just $2, our customer service staff will process your request and mail you out a certified copy of your deed."

The Norfolk Registry of Deeds, located at 649 High Street, Dedham, is the principal office for real property in Norfolk County. The Registry is the basic resource for homeowners, title examiners, mortgage lenders, municipalities and others with a need for secure, accurate, accessible land record information. The Registry land records back to the founding of Norfolk County in 1793 are available for online viewing at the Registry website, www.norfolkdeeds.org. A full service customer service staff is available over the telephone at 781-461-6101 or at the Registry's walk-in center to assist the public with certified copies or deeds, other documents or any Registry related matter.

Build a boat at CMI this summer

Patrick Sherbrooke of Cohasset pours the last drop of whiskey onto the first Swampscott dory that he has ever built thanks to the tutelage of Richard Wilmore.

Learn to build a traditional wooden boat. Sign up for the summer boatbuilding program at CMI (Cohasset Maritime Institute). Steep yourself in the historic sights, sounds, and smells of hand-planed wood as a participant in the building of a traditional plank-on-frame wooden boat. Bask in the ambiance of the newly restored historic Hagerty boathouse overlooking beautiful Cohasset Harbor.

About the instructor: Richard Wilmore has been a shipwright most of his working life. He returns to Cohasset after years of experience in commercial boatyards repairing and building wooden fish boats, tugs and other craft. He is uniquely suited to revive wooden boat building in Cohasset. At the NorthWest School of Wooden Boat Building he was revered by students because of his depth of knowledge, his easy-going style and his ability to teach both the novice and the experienced student the maritime arts and skills of the traditional boat builder.

Learn to Build the Swampscott Dory: The legendary John Gardner describes the Swampscott Dories as "the aristocrats of the dory clan not to be confused with their clumsier, more crudely built cousins, the working dories of the Grand Banks fishermen. True, in some features of their construction Swampscott and Grand Banks dories are similar, but in performance there is a vast difference." Adds instructor Wilmore, "it's a great first boat for students to learn to build. It has all the elements of traditionally planked boats, and it presents the beauties and challenges inherent in building rounded bottom boats. Plus, they're a lot of fun to row."

About the Program: CMI has rehabilitated Cohasset's historic Hagerty boat house as a center for traditional wooden boat building. The boat building program is geared for students of all ages and all abilities who share an interest in learning the fine craft of traditional wooden boat building. The program is divided into 10 weeks, and each week focuses on a different phase of boat building. The ten workshop modules are broken up into 3 hour segments of morning and afternoon instructional sessions, Monday through Friday, from 8:30-11:30 and from 12:30-3:30. Tentatively, Sunday afternoons will be scheduled for those with limited weekday availability. Each week focuses on different skills and different "tricks of the trade" demonstrated and explained to the participants by a master craftsman- and then the participants employ the skills to build the boat. Participants can sign up for the entire program, for particular weeks that best fit their needs, or for specific days of the week that best fit their schedules. It's the experience of a lifetime.

Sign Up! Enrollment is flexible. The Summer Boat Building program with Richard Wilmore begins June 28 and ends Sept 3. Visit the CMI website for details (www.rowcmi.com), or call Jack Buckley for more information at 781 383 0129. You can also drop in and visit Richard in action with his students on Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday afternoons, as well as Sunday afternoons.

HAPPENINGS

Hey there Cohasset, how is everyone doing? It is a nice time of the year, especially when the weather starts to really change. Graduations of all types are happening, getting ready for the end of the school year, beaching it, getting the pools ready and yes, some special birthdays as well. Home Instead SENIOR CARE

by Alan Carney, Director & Jennifer Moran, CSA, Community Liaison

GROCERY SHOPPING FOR SENIORS

Seniors living at home may need someone to do their grocery shopping for them. Typically, seniors live either alone or with their spouse. When buying groceries for seniors, all purchases should be easy to open and small in size. As they age, seniors do not have the strength to lift large, heavy bottles and containers. Items such as condiments should be purchased in small quantities. When selecting anything that is canned, pop-top cans are best since they eliminate the necessity of using a can opener. Perishables should also be purchased in small portions. Individual containers of fruit, puddings, and other snacks are preferable. Fortunately, grocery shopping is an important service that can be provided by a home healthcare aide.

Shopping for your own family takes a lot of time as it is. Shopping for your parents - especially with their special requirements - can turn a nuisance chore into an exhausting grind. You deserve help. Let us take some of the burden off your shoulders. Our home aides can help take care of everyday tasks for your parents, including bathing, grooming, and cooking, as well as shopping for food. Our services are flexible, to match your needs. That means that we can help out with occasional visits or provide full-time, round-the-clock care if that's what your parents need. Call 781-878-2994 to learn what we can do to make your life and your parents' lives easier. Our address is 145 Washington St., Suite 11. In-home help for Massachusetts seniors.

P.S. When grocery shopping for seniors, it's more about shopping for convenience and ease than saving money.

Global travel

CHS offers foreign exchange opportunities

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Cohasset Middle-High School foreign language curriculum is creating international travelers out of its students.

Three international trips are offered to students over the course of their foreign language study to provide them with the opportunity to immerse themselves in another culture and practice (and test) their speaking skills.

In April, 38 students — all of the eighth-grade French students — traveled to Quebec, Canada for three days to experience what for many was their first trip out of the country. High school students will have the opportunity to participate in two foreign language trips next year, both of which involve home stays with local families.

"It's really nice to take the students to France and give them that experience. For many it's the first time they've been to Europe," said Beth Marat, a French and Spanish teacher at the high school.

The French exchange is a two-way cross-Atlantic exchange. For six years Cohasset and Scituate high schools have enjoyed a relationship with Lycée Christophe Colomb in Sucy-en-Brie, France, about 20 kilometers outside of Paris.

Participation in the trip has nearly doubled over the past six years (the trip is offered every other year). In the first year, Cohasset sent 14 students abroad, this year a total of 22 Cohasset students will participate this year. The trip is a group trip with Scituate High School.

The trip not only creates a connection between Cohasset students to French students, but also (a little closer to home) a connection between Cohasset and Scituate students, Marat said.

Last week, the Cohasset students were awaiting the first letters from their French student counterparts so they could begin a pen-pal relationship.

"We do the best we can to match them up with someone compatible," Marat said. The students will likely create a Facebook page to communicate as they did in the past.

"By the time the French students arrive they already all know each other," Marat said.

In October, 43 French students and four teachers will arrive in Cohasset and Scituate to stay with local families for two weeks.

At last year's send-off of our French exchange students by the Cohasset and Scituate host families, there were at least 100 students and family members present who had been involved with the Exchange, Marat said.

COURTESY PHOTOS

Then, over February vacation, the 22 Cohasset students and 20 Scituate students will fly to France for 10-days. When the French students are here they practice their English and when the Cohasset students are in France they speak French to their families.

The students take away more than just pictures of the Eiffel Tower.

"I like the fact we met so many people and, if I go back (to France) I can give them a call and meet up with them," Kelsea Hindley, a Cohasset High senior heading to UMASS-Amherst to study French.

With the opening of the new language lab Marat the tools available will yield students who are better prepared to converse when they get to France.

"These students have a certain amount of courage to go to Europe and stay with a family you never met," Marat said. "But, all the students who have gone say they had a really good experience."

French students get a taste of francophone culture in eighth grade. The Quebec trip has become a staple of the eighth grade French curriculum.

"It's a nice first step into a real world experience for them. They really look forward to it," said Kathy Sanges, middle school French teacher and one of the trip's organizers.

While the students got to experience the French-Canadian culture and absorb the language around them, many of them had experiences when they tried to speak French, English was spoken in return.

"Once they saw us they spoke English," said eighth grader Lexa Grasz. The students also took part in a drama workshop where they became the actors in two different plays about Quebec.

When the students return from the trip they create a scrapbook of their thoughts and memories (in French, of course).

With the 2008 expansion of the foreign language program to the sixth grade students will have three years of study under their belts before hearing to Quebec.

The Notre Dame Cathedral in Paris provides the backdrop for this photo.

Spanish students travel to Guatemala

While there is no middle school trip for those students taking Spanish, a high school exchange is. Next year a group of Spanish students will travel to Guatemala during April vacation. They will stay in Antigua, Guatemala, named a United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) world heritage site for its beauty, Jordan said.

Students will get as close to a native experience as possible as they will live with local families in pairs, walk to a nearby language school for one-on-one language immersion and participate in a community service after school project at Common Hope.

The community has a local connection: many parishioners from the First Parish have donated money to build the center and make yearly trips to Antigua to help build homes, sponsor children and donate school supplies. Jordan organized a trip to Antigua in 2007 with five Cohasset High students.

"We had a wonderful experience living with the Guatemalans. They are fun-loving and very hospitable," Jordan said.

Jordan's aim is to make the trip a permanent part of the Spanish curriculum – and something the students look forward to experiencing in their high school years.

"Giving students an opportunity to see the world and experience it in an intimate setting as a house guest is a life-changing experience. Students who participate in this trip will hopefully become more enlightened and compassionate global citizens," Jordan said.

CONSERVATORY NOTES

SU D'AMBROSIO

COURTESY PHOTO

Summer Music Festival students rehearse from July 5-16 for their final performance on July 16 at 7 pm in the Jane Carr Amphitheater. The public is welcome to hear them for free.

Just take a drive up to the Conservatory any day this summer and you're apt to hear a free concert. We are so blessed to have the Jane Carr Amphitheater, an outdoor stage where our students can rehearse and spread their creative wings in a variety of programs. Throughout the summer, we will host students from around the state, who come together to enrich and extend their performing arts education. The public is welcome to take a peek during an open rehearsal, or attend a program's final performance free of charge.

Wednesday nights, starting June 16, our Flute Symphony students will begin rehearsing for their concert on July 28 at 7 p.m. Three levels of players from beginner through advanced will perform a variety of music all arranged for flute choir. Students will also form chamber groups and share their music at the final concert.

Summer Music Festival students will take over the amphitheatre from July 5 through 16. Two levels of wind and percussion ensembles will play all styles of music from classic wind band music to jazz. Our Festival Jazz Ensembles will add their own flavor to the SMF final concert on July 16 at 7 p.m. These groups will rehearse outside from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m. throughout the festival. Just close your eyes and it's hard to believe you're listening to kids play.

Trumpet Workshop is a new program that will follow SMF and run from July 19 through July 23. If you walk through our campus between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. you will hear some of the area's top trumpet students honing their skills and playing some amazing and challenging trumpet repertoire.

Summer Vocal Institute takes you into the world of vocal music and musical theater. From July 21 through July 30, hear singers of all ages work on solos, chamber music and ensemble pieces in all genres from folk to classical to Broadway. Their final concert on July 30, at 7 p.m., will showcase each SVI group, Primo, Mezzo and Canto, and bring all students together for a grand finale.

Summer Theatre Workshop combines all of the performing arts with a focus on drama. Drop in from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m., from Aug. 2 through 20, and see students age 4 through teen acting, singing, moving and gaining confidence on stage. Each week will end with a performance for friends and family. Younger students will share a "mini musical" inside Cox Hall at 11 a.m. and older students will perform at noon outdoors in the Amphitheater. This program provides a unique perspective into how the performing arts can come together and complement each other.

We invite you to come and observe during the week or attend any of the final performances. Bring a picnic and a blanket or sit in the pavilion and enjoy a summer of free music and arts.

For more information on South Shore Conservatory's summer programs and performances, please visit www.sscmusic.org or call 781-749-7565.

Assunta "Su" D'Ambrosio is the Conservatory's director of programs and curriculum. Known as "Miss Su" by SSC's preschool and kindergarten students, she is the classroom music specialist and teaches private recorder lessons and Drum and Sing class. She lives in Plymouth with her husband, Bob, and her two daughters, Maria and Rosa.

OPINION

Parlez-vous français?

It has been said that one cannot really grasp the culture of another country without knowing the language. For many Americans – who live on this side of the "pond" – learning a foreign language has been a challenge and therefore, many of us could be culturally "challenged" when it comes to other places.

On a personal note, I took as many years of French in our high school as were offered. I can still recite page one of the "French I" text:

"J'entre dans la salle de classe. Je regarde autour de moi. Je vois les eleves et les professeurs. Je dis 'bonjour' au professeur…"

I had the opportunity to live in Calais, France after college with my husband's job. A refresher course at the Berlitz Language Center in Boston and off I went with hopes of becoming fluent. My husband was part a small group of Americans on a special trans-Atlantic cable project for what was then Western Electric.

Once in Calais, I put a classified advertisement in the local paper and hired a tutor. I was determined to be able to speak French. At the end of our 2-1/2 years in Calais, I could have light conversation and get through a coffee with French friends without having a headache. I hooked up with some Calais-based, English expatriates and we spent a lot of time speaking French. I learned it was much easier to understand French with a British accent!

What was always embarrassing to all of us was finding out how many languages most Continental Europeans could speak. For example, in nearby Brugge, Belgium – a young tour guide delivered the program in several languages and could even speak English with both American and British accents.

For many Americans, lack of exposure to a foreign language adds to the difficulty in learning to speak one. Our ears are not adapted to hearing different languages. The other part of the equation is that most people – no matter where they are from – learn to speak at least some English. Therefore, we are not required to speak the language when we venture beyond our shores.

With all that being said, we think foreign exchange trips, field trips, excellent instruction and state-of-the-art language labs – all of which Cohasset Middle High School is employing – help a lot in learning a language.

We have always been envious of those who have the mental agility and verbal ability to speak a foreign language well.

Although more and more people speak English worldwide – it is still important for us on this side of the pond to understand and appreciate the different cultures. Learning the language is a great way to accomplish that!

TO THE EDITOR:

This year's Memorial Day Parade will be a little unusual. Somewhere in the parade you may glimpse several white-haired men marching behind a CHS '58 banner. They're coming from Florida, Tennessee, Colorado, Maryland and New England, and while I can't speak for them, I'd like to tell you a short story. I served as an armored reconnaissance commander in Germany during the height of the cold war (1963-1966). We were to be the "trip wire" the Russians would have to break if they attacked. Month after month we trained and patrolled along the Czech border waiting, watching, sometimes literally holding our breath for their assault and our almost certain death.

Summer, winter, fall, spring; six weeks in garrison then six weeks "in the field" we trained and maneuvered, working often over 100 hours a week. Broken bones, frostbite, and more serious injury were part of the deal. We stuck together, we protected each other, and we served each other and our country with pride.

My tour as an armored scout officer lasted three years, and when I returned in early 1966, except for my family, there were few smiles. American soldiers, particularly those returning from overseas, were objects of ridicule and scorn. Any military service was something intelligent people avoided.

Now things have changed. The country has begun to honor its protectors. We thought we would come back to march together, to honor our friends, our comrades, the ones who fell, our country, of course, and the little town we came from. The gray-haired men from your little class of '58; unbeaten in football, are still undefeated. Perhaps you'll see our banner. We'd appreciate your smile.

'Singing' student praises

TO THE EDITOR:

We are writing to "sing" the praises of the almost 100 Cohasset High School students who went on the chorus-band trip to Philadelphia last weekend. We accompanied the group as chaperones, along with teachers Bryan Marks and John DeWaal, and had a wonderful time. We could not be more proud of the way the students performed at the "Music in the Parks" festival and throughout the weekend. The students were respectful of and kind to each other, fun to be with, inquisitive (we had a guided tour of Philadelphia and the tour guides were very impressed), and filled with positive energy.

Cohasset High School students are very fortunate to be able to be involved in everything. These same students are excelling in school and on the sports fields, performing countless community service hours, as well as making beautiful music. The rich harmonies and very controlled singing of the chorus and the absolute joy that the concert band exudes in performance is inspiring. Our students are Cohasset's richest treasure.

Earth Fest to be rescheduled

TO THE EDITOR:

As many of you may have noticed, on May 8, Cohasset was hit by unexpected showers and thunderstorms Unfortunately, this meant the cancellation of Cohasset's first Earth Fest "Big Blue Goes Green." Currently, we are hoping to arrange a rain date so as not to let Cohasset citizens miss out on a day of great food, music, fun, and a chance to become more environmentally conscious.

In the mean time we would like to thank all those who supported us in organizing and allowing us to host the event. In particular, Ted Carroll and the entire town of Cohasset and the Board of Selectman for approving the project and allowing us use of the common, as well as the Cohasset Police Department for the permission to block off parking and the road in the middle of the town common. All those who assisted with the cube, Deer Hill School for the use of the basement for storage, and Mrs. Dickson especially for both helping us load and transport the structure. Mr. Bigley of "All the Best," thank you for being most dedicated to the cause by showing up early and prepared despite the inclement weather, along with all the others who showed for support. Finally, a special thanks to Mr. Buckley for being our mentor throughout the entire planning of "Big Blue Goes Green."

We will keep Cohasset posted on a rescheduled date that will hopefully bring fairer weather so that we may all experience the best Earth Fest possible. Again, we greatly appreciate all those who have assisted us – including the Mariner for promotion!

CEF and donors appreciated

TO THE EDITOR:

On behalf of all the foreign language students and faculty of Cohasset Middle High School, I wish to express our sincere appreciation to the Cohasset Education Foundation and its generous donors. Every one of our 700 or so middle and high school students now has the opportunity to make use of the state-of-the-art digital language lab recently installed at the high school through an impressive CEF fund-raising campaign.

With a second lab projected for the middle school in the very near future, all of our students will soon have daily access to the latest technology to explore global cultures and master second and even third languages.

As a firm believer that deep awareness of other languages, cultures, and worldviews is critical and fascinating to our students, I am grateful to the CEF for supporting global education in such a meaningful, practical, and effective manner. Merci and gracias.

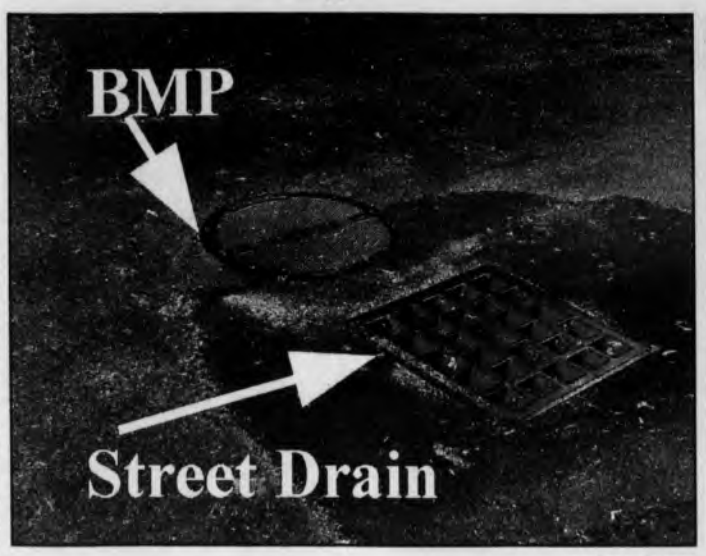
Stormwater alphabet: BMP, EPA and NPS

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

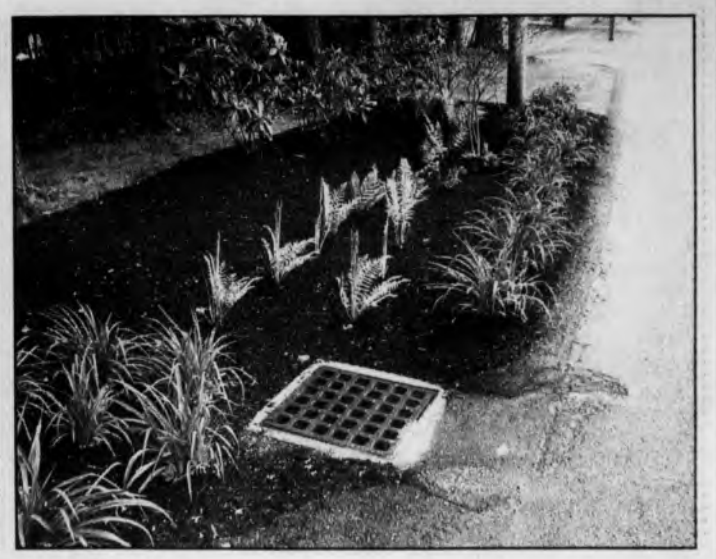
BMPs and More – From time to time we have spoken of stormwater BMPs that have been installed around Town. Let's back-up for a minute and refresh our readers regarding what BMPs are and what they do. It turns out that a BMP is not a single thing. It is an acronym that stands for "Best Management Practices." The EPA defines a BMP as a "technique, measure or structural control that is used for a given set of conditions to manage the quantity and improve the quality of stormwater runoff in the most cost-effective manner." That's really a mouthful. A BMP is a device for the treatment of storm water in order to improve the environment. There are a number of ways in which BMPs can be created to achieve their general goal of environmental clean-up. Functionally, the BMPs we have installed are designed to collect storm water from our roads, then remove the pollutants and release the cleaned-up storm water to a wetland or a body of water.



The pollution that our BMPs are designed to treat is called non point source (NPS) pollution. This is a fancy way of saying that the pollution does not emanate from a single source, but is general in nature. Roadway pollution is considered to be non-point source pollution. This road pollution can come from a wide variety of sources. Pollutants can consist of the sand and ice melting chemicals used to keep our roads safe in the winter. The trace elements that vehicle exhausts spew out also become NPS on the roads. Fertilizers, road debris, oil and grease in the roadways are also NPS pollutants.

BMPS have been installed in Cohasset by the Greenbush Railroad Project, via special grants to the Town designed to clean up critical bodies of water, or by Town projects such as the storm water component of the Little Harbor Project. In Cohasset, we have installed two basic types of BMPs, centrifugal vortex separators and plant/soil based separators. The centrifugal vortex separators are designed to add a spinning motion to the storm water so that pollutants are collected in the BMP based on the density of the pollutant. For example, floatables (plastic bottles, etc.) are collected in one chamber, oils are collected in another chamber and sand and grit is collected in another chamber before the storm water is released to its final destination. These devices must be maintained by periodically collecting the separated polluting material from their respective storage chambers. If the storage chambers are full, the excess pollutant will just be released to the environment. Typically, the centrifugal vortex separators are installed underground. They are generally invisible. As seen in the photo, the only sign that it exists is a manhole cover in the roadway that is used for inspection and cleaning. The rectangular grate beside the access manhole in the picture is just a street stormwater collection point that feeds storm water to the BMP.

The other common type of BMP is a biological cell that uses special soil and plants to remove pollutants before the water is discharged. We have included a photo of a biological BMP located on Norfolk Road at the corner of Cushing Road. The stormwater enters the BMP over the checkerboard grate and the sand settles into a chamber below the grate. The stormwater then passes into the special bed of soil and plantings and into a drain that is under the soil into the under the street drainage. Periodically, the sand catching basin needs to be cleaned and eventually the soil and plants will need to be replaced after they become loaded with various road pollutants.



There are, several BMPs that are or will be under construction in the Little Harbor Project area. When we do the paving, the grades in the roads will be adjusted near the BMPs to assure that the stormwater passes into them.

Little Harbor Project Paving – As we write this column on Wednesday, the South Shore Consortium is opening the latest bids for cold planing and related services. As soon as they analyze the bids we will know who will be surface grinding our roads in preparation for paving. Then, we'll get the contractor lined up and the prep work should start to flow, followed by paving. As we've mentioned Beach Street is first on our list, followed by Jerusalem and lastly Atlantic. The gas company is finishing up connecting the homes on Jerusalem Road into the new gas main. They expect to be completed with their work in a couple of weeks. So, paving preparation on Jerusalem will be able to get going right after Beach Street.

HEALTH NOTES

'Grit your teeth and set up a program'

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Get a partner. Exercising with a friend or relative can make it more fun.

Much talk abounds on healthy habits but nothing says that the exercises we used while we were kids to stay fit should be those one carries through life. Philosophising about doing work is always easier than just getting to it; so grit your teeth and set up a program. Now that we've survived a particularly wet and difficult spring, it's time to consider our fitness to tackle the challenges of a summer program and achieve enough conditioning to meet the demands of the new season. As our bodies age, those activities which we choose to adopt to stay healthy may need adjustment to the realities imposed on us by maturity. Don't wait for a muscle pull and a trip to the doctor to tell you you're exercising too hard.

Important considerations should be current regarding the type of exercise you select. Factors to think about: physical condition, general overall health, special circumstances: muscular condition, cost, the period of time necessary to get a good workout. It's a good idea to check with someone doing the exercise you're considering. (get advice).

Other Factors affecting the type of exercise — Choose something you like to do. Make sure it suits you physically, too. For instance, swimming is easier on arthritic joints. Get a partner. Exercising with a friend or relative can make it more fun. Vary your routine. You may be less likely to get bored or injured if you change your exercise routine. Walk one day. Bicycle the next. Think about activities you might not ordinarily consider; like dancing and racquet sports, and even chores like vacuuming or mowing the lawn. And keep at it!

Choose a comfortable time of day. Don't work out too soon after eating or when it's too hot or cold outside. Wait until later in the day if you're too stiff in the morning. Make exercise fun. Read, listen to music or watch TV while riding a stationary bicycle, for example. Find fun things to do, like taking a walk through Wheelwright Park. Go dancing. Learn how to play a sport you enjoy.

Finally, don't get discouraged. It can take weeks or months before you notice some of the changes from exercise, such as weight loss.

And Don't Forget the old aphorism "no pain, no gain."

While a little soreness is normal after you first start exercising, pain isn't. But, if you hurt or if you are injured, find out what's causing it. A few pains accompanying some types of exercise are normal, but many are a signal something's amiss.

Types of exercise — Aerobic exercise is the type that moves large muscle groups and causes you to breathe more deeply and your heart to work harder to pump blood. It's also called cardiovascular exercise. It improves the health of your heart and lungs. Examples include walking, jogging, running, aerobic dance, bicycling, rowing, swimming and cross-country skiing.

Choose an exercise that you will do on a regular basis. Walking is considered one of the best choices because it's easy, safe and inexpensive. In Cohasset, where you walk determines whether walking is aerobic but, chances are that it is. It's the hills that do it; that and walking on dry sandy beaches. There's a reason one finds so many trim healthy walkers on our streets. Brisk walking can burn as many calories as running, but is less likely than running or jogging to cause injuries. Walking also doesn't require any training or special equipment, except for good shoes. Also, it's particularly adapted to someone who knows where they're going.

So, get out and show us some activity; you'll be surprised how good it'll make you feel; hopefully tired but virtuous.

Economic Reorganization Bill falls short

HEDLUND REPORT

ROBERT HEDLUND

...it does nothing to reduce the high costs of doing business or the bureaucratic red tape that makes Massachusetts one of the least inviting climates for business growth.

Back in 2006, my colleagues in the Legislature passed a boondoggle of a bill that contained tens of millions of dollars in corporate welfare and established a number of new state business and trade-oriented offices and bureaucracies. The stated purpose of the bill was to "stimulate" our economy and help make Massachusetts more competitive.

One of my colleagues went as far as to claim that the bill would create "100,000 – 150,000" new jobs over the coming decade.

Well, it didn't happen. Even before the recession hit, Massachusetts had failed to recover the jobs lost in the previous recession, due to the growing number of companies that either fled the state to escape the restrictive costs of doing business in Massachusetts, or closed their doors altogether. And the state's unemployment rate today stands almost double what it was the day this "economic stimulus" bill passed.

Of course, the state's 9.3 percent unemployment rate has more to do with the deep recession this nation is struggling to emerge from, than with anything the Massachusetts State Senate did. But that just goes to prove that job creation and business development, ultimately, is influenced more by market factors on the national level than some complex string of government bureaucracies or corporate welfare programs for the industry du jour at the state level.

The recent Economic Reorganization Bill passed by the Senate seemed to recognize that the best thing government can do, in many aspects, is just get out of the way. The bill attempted something almost unprecedented in recent Massachusetts history: the elimination and consolidation of state bureaucracies. It would cut the number of business, trade and economic development offices, agencies, bureaus, and authorities almost in half, and make them more directly accountable to the governor.

The Senate also adopted an amendment I co-sponsored that attempts to rein-in runaway salaries at state authorities. Under our proposal, administrators and managers could not earn more than the governor's salary of $153,000 without direct approval from the governor's appointed secretary of administration and finance. Currently, more than 100 authority employees earn more than the governor.

However, I voted against the bill for several reasons, not the least of which is that it does nothing to reduce the high costs of doing business or the bureaucratic red tape that makes Massachusetts one of the least inviting climates for business growth.

The bill also continues the practice of allowing state agencies and authorities to conceal the names of businesses that receive state subsidies and the amounts they receive.

In addition, the bill also — whether intentionally or inadvertently — throws a life preserver to 40B developers should voters choose in November to repeal the law. The legislation contains a measure that extends all state and local permits and approvals granted between 2008 and 2011 for an additional three years. Under this language, if 40B is repealed, 40B developers could argue that their projects would be grandfathered in until 2014. I am currently working with my colleagues in the House on an amendment to carve 40B projects out from this inside deal.

It is critical that we, as legislators, focus on creating jobs. But it is also important that we realize that our only role is to create a competitive and healthy atmosphere in which businesses can grow and thrive, and we do this by keeping taxes low, maintaining an educated and skilled workforce, and removing costly bureaucracy.

State Senator Robert Hedlund represents the eight-town Plymouth-Norfolk District that includes Cohasset.

Elementary schools visit Holly Hill Farm

ens and fresh mint t[illegible] the goats and even got to see a freshly laid, still warm egg found in one of the chicken coops. The students waved as the farmers drove by on their tractors en route to till the fields. They harvested (and tasted) a fresh radish from the education garden, and snacked on fresh spinach picked right from the plant.

In between all these hands-on activities Belber teaches the students tidbits about the care of the animals, about weeding in the garden, about the parts of the plant and about the trials of keeping wild animals out of the farms crops.

Belber visited the first graders in their classrooms a few weeks ago to learn about seeds – and sow some of their own.

Belber tailors the field trip and learning to correlate with what the students are learning in the classroom. Deer Hill students were learning about consumers and producers in a social studies unit, so when they came to the farm Belber spent time in the main barn, where Holly Hill Farm sells its produce during the summer months, telling the students about the business of farming.

In recent years, Holly Hill has carved out space dedicated to farm education: a small hoophouse (greenhouse) and an education garden. Both afford students space to get dirty and tend to plants without interfering with the regular operation of the farm.

Holly Hill is working toward creating school gardens in the local community. In 16 schools this spring Belber has helped build school gardens of their own. The students, parents and teachers are sowing, growing and nurturing their own education gardens.

"There is a lot of enthusiasm from the students, the parents and the teachers," Belber said.

Belber made sure to invite the students who all seemed to love getting their hands dirty and seeing the many activities of the farm are always welcome to come back and visit.

During the summer, Holly Hill runs programs for elementary, middle and high school students. A summer registration open house is being held on Sunday, May 23 at 3p.m. For a complete listing of summer programs, visit www.hollyhillfarm.org.

Annual Plant Sale starts Saturday

Farm managers Ben and Hannah Wolbach and a team of volunteers have been hard at work preparing over 20,000 plants for purchase this weekend and next. The widely popular Holly Hill Annual Plant Sale is scheduled for Saturday and Sunday, May 22 and 23 from 10a.m. to 4p.m. and next weekend, Saturday and Sunday, May 29 and 30 from 10a.m. to 4p.m.

"We're chock full right now, we have no where to have all the plants," said Hannah Wolbach, standing outside the farm's greenhouses, which are teeming with young plants waiting to find a home in the ground.

The plant sale will have tons of variety. Wolbach said 26 varieties of tomato plants, which are always a popular item, would be available. Flowers (annuals and perennials) and a wide array of vegetable plants and herb plants are among the offerings as well.

New this year is members of the Friends of Holly Hill Farm will get first pick of the plants during a special window of time on Friday, May 21 from 4 to 6p.m.

Cindy Prentice, director of the farm, said the reason is in part an effort to get more members and to ease up the traffic congestion of Saturday morning. Memberships support the education and outreach programs at the farm and start at $35.

Future of CPC

Benefits reviewed, some suggestions for improvement

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Is there more work for the Community Preservation Committee (CPC) to do?

Drawing on its nine years of accomplishments, the CPC made its case to stick around for a little while longer.

The voluntary tax, a 1.5 percent tax surcharge, approved by Town Meeting in 2003 was revisited this week to see if it has run its course.

The informal discussion on the CPC's future was triggered in part by it being named as one of Selectman Lee Jenkins' agenda items at a recent meeting of the Board of Selectmen.

While the discussion did not reveal a groundswell of support to sunset the Community Preservation Act (CPA) in Cohasset, it shed light on what has been accomplished by the dedicated funds and produced some ideas on how to improve it, including establishing a local exemption regulation and keeping a closer eye on project spending after approval.

Since 2001 residents, nonprofit groups, and town employees have been among those who have sought community preservation funding for myriad projects around Cohasset.

In nine years, just under $5 million has been appropriated by Town Meeting through the Community Preservation Fund. The funds must be spent on three areas: open space and recreation, historical preservation, and community housing. About 47 percent ($2.35 million) has been spent on open space/recreation projects, 30 percent ($1.465 million) on historical preservation and 23 percent ($1.14 million) on the affordable housing.

Another reason the Selectmen saw fit to discuss the CPA is the drastic reduction in state matching funds over the last three years. For six years of the town enjoyed a dollar for dollar match from the state. But, two years ago, a slow real estate market (the state's matching funds is derived from a $20 fee on documents filed at the Registry of Deeds) and more towns adopting the CPA, brought about a lower state match. In 2008, the match was 65 percent and in 2009 it was 35 percent. This year's match is expected to hover around 30 percent.

With a less than 100 percent state match there were some questions as to whether the CPA was still worth the town's residents paying into it year after year.

"Some of the projects we've been doing lately have lacked the sex appeal, or large impact, as (the projects) once were," Stuart Ivimey, chair of the CPC, said. He added he saw both sides: the value of the CPC's projects and the value of every dollar taken out of a pocket for taxes.

Ivimey also cited the CPC's town meeting approval record is nearly perfect. Of 33 projects brought forward to the Town Meeting floor just one was not approved.

The thought of more proactive planning on the part of the community was suggested. Traditionally, projects are generated from members of the community and the committee doesn't know about them until a few months before a scheduled Town Meeting.

"I think it has been on the strengths of this committee that we haven't approached it with an agenda," said CPC member Al Moore.

Ivimey agreed, "I'm not a big fan of having a strategic plan (for this committee). It's not the function of this committee to steer this town."

CPC Susan Sardina said the funds really belong to the community and it's the committee's position to respond to that.

The results of CPC funding, both in community impact and in leveraging additional funding are significant, CPC member Sarah Charron pointed out. With approximately $1.3 million (spread out over several large projects) as "seed money," the town or other groups were able to receive addition money, to the tune of $2.8 million.

One of the prime examples was a $400,000 appropriation to renovate the 60 Elm Street senior housing apartments, which was then used as leverage to get $800,000 from the state to really make an improvement to the complex.

"I really believe we would have lost our affordable housing without CPC," said Taffy Nothnagle, a member of the Cohasset Housing Authority that oversees the apartments.

Charron said CPC serves a mechanism to do projects that otherwise would not get done. It also helps volunteers, who very often then spend hours on the projects, get their vision for the town off the ground.

"It has a very positive effect on engendering a sense of community. These really are quality of life projects," Ivimey said.

Constructive criticism

Reservoir Road resident Elsa Miller, who also serves on the Board of Assessors, presented to the committee the six-page application a property owner needs to fill out in order to be considered for exemption from the CPA tax.

"It's probably the hardest exemption to qualify for," Miller said. For those residents where the 1.5 percent additional tax is truly a hardship and need relief, it is very difficult to get it.

She suggested the committee, in conjunction with the Board of Assessors, consider establishing a local exemption option, which would be done through a town meeting article and vote.

Further, Miller proposed that perhaps a similar non-profit organization be formed that could take over similar community projects, "this town is very good about coming forward with private money."

Russ Bonetti of Parker Avenue requested that projects be given more scrutiny when going through the recommendation process, and the money followed to the completion of the project.

"We need to be spending money with a sharper eye on where money goes," Bonetti said. Particularly, he said projects approved under "historical" need to be monitored to ensure the project is done in a historical manner.

The Community Preservation funds are a combination of the property tax surcharge and a percentage of matching funds from the state. The CPC can use a small percentage of its budget for administrative tasks, such as appraisals. All uses of the CPC funds are approved by a vote of Town Meeting.

Buttowood Books hosts Coffee with the Authors

Buttonwood Books & Toys will present its Coffee with the Authors from 9:45 to 11:30 a.m., on Tuesday, June 8 at the Atlantica. Coffee will be served at 9:45 a.m., and the program will begin at 10 a.m. Attendees can enjoy a continental breakfast while three contemporary authors discuss their latest work. Featured authors will be: Randy Susan Meyers, "The Murderer's Daughters"; Sy Montgomery, "Birdology: Adventures with a Pack of Hens, a Peck of Pigeons, Cantankerous Crows, Fierce Felons, Hip Hop Parrots, Baby Hummingbirds and One Murderously Big Living Dinosaur"; Dr. Gail Steketee, "Stuff: Compulsive Hoarding and the Meaning of Things" by Drs. Randy O. Frost and Gail Steketee. Reservations, and tickets at $16 per person, are required. Call Buttonwood at 781-383-2665 to reserve a seat or order a signed copy of the book if unable to attend.

Meyers is the debut author of "The Murderer's Daughters," a novel about the aftermath of domestic violence. Meyers' story grew out of an incident from her own childhood.

Montgomery is the award-winning author of "The Good Good Pig." "Birdology" may be the title of her new book but the subtitle provides the true scope of her story, "Adventures with a Pack of Hens, a Peck of Pigeons, Cantankerous Crows, Fierce Falcons, Hip Hop Parrots, Baby Hummingbirds, and One Murderously Big Living Dinosaur."

Steketee completes the panel with her book, "Stuff: Compulsive Hoarding and the Meaning of Things" written with Randy O. Frost. The two scientists began their research 10 years ago. They offer insight into the reasons why a person moves from normal acquisitions to excessive stockpiling. Frost and Steketee's use of case studies to document, explain and profile hoarders provides the reader with information about this phenomenon.

Media storm over St. Paul School decision

Lesbian parents go to press with story

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

"Multiple media outlets on scene for ongoing situation at the school. Satellite trucks and news crews all over square area. Low flying helos (helicopters) also."

St. Paul School, the small, regional Catholic school in downtown Hingham, has been at the center of a firestorm of controversy over the past week regarding its decision not to admit a student whose parents are lesbians.

After learning of the school's decision to rescind its offer of admission in a conference call on Monday (May 10) — one of the boy's mothers took their story to the Associated Press — which awarded her anonymity to protect the child. Other media then quickly picked up the AP story and descended on Hingham Square.

A police log entry late last week noted: "Multiple media outlets on scene for ongoing situation at the school. Satellite trucks and news crews all over square area. Low flying helos (helicopters) also."

Hingham Selectmen Chairman Bruce Rabuffo, who is a former vice president of the St. Paul Parish Council, said security last week was his biggest concern. The town made sure there was a police presence at the school on Wednesday and Thursday to make sure that members of the media did not harass students.

"We wanted to make sure that the students and teachers were protected," he said.

Reached for comment about both the media frenzy and the school decision not to accept the boy, the Rev. James Rafferty, the long-time pastor of St. Paul's, referred all questions to the communication spokesman at the Archdiocese of Boston.

While it does not change the fact that the school decision to withdraw its offer of admission to the boy was largely based on the same-sex parental issue — what remains unclear is why school officials did not know the boy's parents were lesbians when the women applied to have their son attend the K-8 school. According to media reports, the boy is 8 and would be entering the third grade in the fall.

According to published reports, the woman said the school was concerned its teachings on marriage would conflict with what the boy sees in his own family.

One of the women told the AP they were not hiding their relationship and filled out both their names on the application form – which the AP story stated asked for names of parents rather than mother and father – paid their deposit and obtained order forms for uniforms. The mothers, whom the AP reported are not married, also attended an open house in February, an event that attracts about 200 people.

But the St. Paul School application form, which is available on the school's website, asks for detailed, specific family information on the applicant's mother and father including: father's name and mother's name, their address, mother's and father's employers, their phone numbers, religion, birthplaces and so on. There is no line for "parent or guardian" until the second page where there is a small check-off to indicate whether the child is living with: parents, mother, father or guardian.

In a May 13 press release, Mary Grassie O'Neill, Ph. D., Secretary and Superintendent for Catholic Schools for the Archdiocese of Boston, stated the Archdiocese does not prohibit children of same-sex parents from attending Catholic schools.

"We will work in the coming weeks to develop a policy to eliminate any misunderstands in the future," O'Neill stated.

Gail Besse of Hull, a St. Paul's parishioner, said she thinks the Archdiocese should have supported Rafferty's decision not to admit the child.

"Father Rafferty made a courageous, caring and pastoral decision. He acted in the best interests of the child and the school," Besse said.

"If the boy was admitted, what happens when other students question why he has two mommies?" Besse said. "Do teachers skirt around Catholic beliefs on marriage and family so he won't be confused? Why would these women put their child in this no-win situation when other schools are available?

"I'm appalled the Archdiocese hasn't publicly supported Father; he's being pilloried in the national press. The Catholic Schools Foundation, which the Cardinal chairs, threatened to cut funds from any school that followed Hingham's lead. It's beyond sad."

State Rep. Garrett Bradley, D-Hingham, who grew up in St. Paul's Parish, has been highly critical about the school's decision to revoke the child's acceptance based on the parents' sexuality.

Bradley, who attended Catholic schools, speculates that the boys' parents were seeking a Catholic education for its structure and discipline and were willing to accept some potential for negativity.

"I am a practicing Catholic and respect and love the church," Bradley said. "But when I see something wrong – I am going to speak out."

Bradley said he has great respect for Father Rafferty and the church as an institution. "But this was a self-inflicted wound," he said.

The Very Rev. Richard Erikson, who is Vicar General and Moderator of the Curia for the Archdiocese, described Fr. Rafferty as "an outstanding pastor who has done an exceptional job providing for the pastoral care of St. Paul Parish in Hingham.

"The Cardinal, I and the priests of the Archdiocese are very supportive of his ministry," he said. "We also appreciate Dr. Grassa O'Neill's leadership in arranging other Catholic schools for the student and in making a commitment to clarify the policy of the archdiocese going forward."

Terrence C. Donilon, spokesman for the Archdiocese of Boston, said the school and the pastor handled the media attention with great dignity and professionalism.

"We commend them for keeping the wellbeing and care of the students, teachers, and staff of St. Paul's at the forefront in dealing with media inquiries," Donilon said.

The Rev. Paul Sprecher of Second Parish in Hingham, who is chairman of the Hingham Hull Religious Leaders Association, which is a voluntary association of individuals committed to religious leadership in the towns of Hingham and Hull, said the association does not make policy decisions except by consensus among its members at one of their regular meetings.

"I don't feel it would be appropriate for me to comment on behalf of the Association," Sprecher said in an e-mail. "For myself, I can say that our thoughts and prayers go out to all of those involved in this situation."

Captain describes disaster at sea

Cohasset Historical Society hosts special event

Thirty-one men were lost and Captain Kelly, who was Relief Third Mate at the time, was one of three survivors.

On Sunday, May 16, at the Cohasset Historical Society a poignant and moving meeting of Captain Eugene Kelly and Mary Babineau and her daughter Suzanne, wife and daughter, of Second Officer Clayton Babineau who lost his life in the sinking of the S/S Marine Electric 27 years ago.

Society Board member Jim Campbell introduced Captain Kelly. Captain Kelly of Hanover, and a graduate of Massachusetts Maritime Academy spoke publicly for the first time on the sinking of the S/S Marine Electric a 600 foot bulk carrier on Feb. 12, 1983 during fierce Atlantic gale off the coast of Virginia on a trip from Norfolk, Va. to Somerset, Mass. with cargo of coal.

A fascinating and gripping book "Until the Sea Shall Free Them" detailing this event has been written by Robert Frump who at the time was an investigative reporter for the Philadelphia Inquirer.

Thirty-one men were lost and Captain Kelly, who was Relief Third Mate at the time, was one of three survivors. The other survivors were Chief Mate Robert Cusick, of Scituate and Paul Dewey.

Also in the audience were three classmates of Second Officer Babineau, Edward Lynch, Jack Cummings and Joe Gavin all Class of 1960 Massachusetts Maritime Academy.

Captain Kelly showed great emotion describing the conditions leading up to the listing of the boat to port side and then describing in graphic detail the terror of the ship rolling over and the smoke stack just missing him as he clung to a life ring in the cold stormy water and of trying to help other men onto a life ring. After spending several terrifying hours in the cold Atlantic without adequate protection, Coast Guard helicopters came to their rescue, which he described in graphic detail.

As a result of this tragedy and hearings before a Coast Guard Board of Investigation in Washington, D.C. all these types of vessels have been taken out of service and all vessels on North Atlantic routes are now equipped with survival suits and the Coast Guard has created a Rescue Swimmer Program.

Captain Kelly is now Assistant Principal/Director of Adult Education at South Shore Regional Technical High School and has encouraged several students to attend Massachusetts Maritime Academy in Buzzards Bay.

CAMP, SCHOOL AND ACTIVITIES
DIRECTORY

EVERY CHILD SHOULD BE ABLE TO ATTEND SUMMER CAMP

By Bette Bussel, Executive Director, American Camp Association, New England

One of the common misconceptions about summer camp is that it's a place – that you send your child to summer camp. Summer camp is a community, built by professional educators together with the children they supervise. Within that community, children learn to make decisions and take healthy risks in a safe environment. Summer camp is not about where a child is; it's what happens when they're there.

Kids learn best through experience, and summer camp is one of the best (and only) remaining hands-on learning opportunities available to them: developing social skills, playing both formal and informal games, living in a natural setting, and learning more about themselves physically and emotionally. At camp, there's no teaching to a test. Every minute doesn't have to be scheduled. There's time for teachable moments and exploration.

That time, however fleeting, has a lasting impact on campers. Many people find that the most critical people in their lives were those they befriended at summer camp.

Summer camp has never been more necessary. Academic and afterschool commitments add so much pressure to a child's life, and often take choices out of their hands. Time spent at summer camp allows kids to decompress and be themselves.

There's a common misconception that children are sent away by their rejoicing parents to summer camp, where someone else will do the work of supervising them. That's simply not the case. Many parents choose to let their children experience summer camp because they know of the value it gives and the genuine joy it can inspire. Camp contributes mightily to the development of a child's independence, responsibility, and skills. It supplements a child's education – and, for many kids who find school difficult, it can offer them a new venue where they might thrive and embrace learning. It allows them to try new things and enjoy favorite activities, all while creating lasting memories and lifetime friendships.

What better gift could you give your children than an experience that offers all that?

Summit meeting delves into water recommendations of the Water Planning Group, painted a grim financial picture of the water department to open the meeting.

"During the winter it became apparent that the Water Department was facing major deficits," Carlson said, naming the causes as including an ambitious capital spending program to upgrade the distribution and production systems all approved by town meetings, a very weak economy which caused potential major new users to pull back their construction plans, and bad weather.

"Regardless of the causes and relative weights one may apply to them, we are facing these deficits and we must pay our bills. Shortfalls in the Water Department must be covered by the town under the law," Carlson said.

With the combination of solutions — all of which are painful, he said — the committee expects the water department to operate on a break even or better basis for the next couple of years.

"The alternative is to default on our obligations, which would cause real chaos," Carlson said.

Recommendations

The Water Planning Group is making four broad recommendations as to how the town should address the most immediate financial problems facing the water department:

• Fiscal 2010 budget deficit

To cover what is looking like a water department budget deficit in the $770,000 range the Water Planning Group is looking to multiple sources. All are one-time revenue sources/savings.

First, the town is expecting a $100,000 payment from the Cook Estate development as they tie in to the water system.

Second, the town would receive a $335,000 settlement payment from Avalon Bay development once a building permit is issued, which could be in time for June 30.

Third, the Water Planning Group initially proposed seeking a two-month payment deferral of the American Water Company contract contingent on an extension of the contract. The current contract expires in 2012. The deferred payment would be paid sometime in the future with interest, but a current savings of $208,000 is possible.

In discussion on Monday and Wednesday nights, Town Manager Bill Griffin said that perhaps the associated cost of deferring two months payment might be too great. It would require an extension of the contract for five years, which would eliminate a level of flexibility.

Instead, the Board of Selectmen is recommending a $335,000 transfer from the stabilization fund to cover the remainder of the shortfall. The article will stipulate that the funds are expected to be returned to the stabilization fund through the second payment from Avalon expected when the first occupancy permit is given.

"In essence it's a loan," said Griffin. If all the articles are approved it is expected to put the water department fiscal 2010 budget $11,000 in the black.

• Override for Fiscal 2011

A $300,000 town operating budget Proposition 2-1/2 override for fiscal 2011 will be sought to cover the fire protection and hydrant maintenance throughout the town. This cost historically was in the town side of the budget, but over the years the water department began to see less and less of the amount as the town's budget got tighter. In 2007, the hydrant fee was moved over to the water users and became a line item on the water bills.

In addition, cost savings have been and will continue to be sought in the water department fiscal 2011 budget, the group said. Operating Expenses for fiscal 2011 will be about $340,000 less than the current year (fiscal 2010).

If the override fails to pass at the town meeting article level or at the ballot box, a water usage rate increase of 33 percent is proposed to cover the shortfall (with the override the increase in water usage rates is 10 percent).

No matter what the town is liable for the shortfall, Griffin said. If all the articles for increase fail, town departments (and possibly the school department) will need to be cut their budgets and/or reserves utilized.

• Rate increase

The proposal on the table is for the majority of residential customers to see a $75 per quarter increase in the "fixed cost" portion of the water bill, which will be re-named "capital recovery charge." For most customers it will be jump from $112 to $187.

Collection of this higher fixed rate charge, if passed, will begin retroactively on June 1. Town officials have checked with town counsel and the Department of Revenue to ensure this was possible, Griffin said. The collection of this increase over the four quarters of fiscal 2011 resulted in the removal of a proposal to implement a tier 3 water usage rate for high users.

The usage rate tied directly to water consumption is proposed to increase 10 percent for tiers 1 and 2. The rate increase tied to usage could not increase until the start of the next quarter on September 1.

For 87 percent of customers the new rate structure means a 50 percent or less increase in water bills. About half of the water department's customers will be in the 20 to 40 percent increase range. The amount of bill increase will differ depending on water usage.

A third rate tier was proposed for customers that consume over 5000 cubic feet of water, but on Wednesday night the Water Planning Group scratched tier 3 because the capital recovery charge fixed rate could be collected beginning June 1.

• Capital requests

A total of $300,000 in capital projects will be requested of Town Meeting for three projects. First, a new scheme for the sludge lagoons, which hold the waste products of the treatment process, is requested for $100,000. Water Commissioner Glenn Pratt said the new scheme would pay for itself in a year's time. Second, $50,000 is needed to implement a "phosphate program" at the water plant to improve the issues of discolored water.

And last, $150,000 is proposed to wrap up the remaining items of the Little Harbor project. More information was requested on this item, so it may not be recommended for a vote at Town Meeting.

The committee proposing paying for these capital improvements through an estimated $4 increase in the fixed rate for the next year (fiscal 2012).

• Amendment to enterprise fund

The Board of Selectmen voted on Thursday morning to add an article that would amend the structure of the water department enterprise fund to match the sewer enterprise fund's framework. The article establishing the sewer enterprise as an accounting system stipulated the fund was to be overseen jointly by the Sewer Commission and the town manager. That specific piece was left out of the establishment of the water enterprise fund.

The article proposes adding that language to facilitate more town oversight for the water department enterprise fund, Town Manager Bill Griffin said.

The Water Planning Group met Wednesday night to review the recommendations developed out of the meeting. The Board of Selectmen met Thursday morning to sign the warrant before it went to press.

Said on the water

"It costs as much to deliver a drop of water as it does a pool full of water."
— Chris Seebeck, water commission, arguing in favor of a higher fixed rate.

"There is no easy solution. Certainly every stone has been turned over and looked under. It's not a good recommendations, but it's the best recommendation that we can come forward with at this time."
— Karen Quigley, Board of Selectmen chairman

"The water department needs to be in receivership. It is in trouble and has been for years."

Phosphate in the pipeline?

Chemical could help with discolored water

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

After the phosphate helps to clear the corrosion in the pipes, the water quality is expected to improve overall...

The Water Department is at a crossroads both financially and in its efforts to improve water quality.

A Special Town Meeting is being held on Monday, June 14 to take action on the department's budget crisis, including an override proposal and a significant rate increase.

Among those items to be brought before voters is a small request in comparison: a $50,000 capital request to begin adding phosphate to the water. The chemical, which is used in other local water departments, is designed to combat two major water quality issues: reducing discolored water and lead that leaches from pipes in customer's homes.

Jared Hill, superintendent of the water department, said the addition of phosphate would help improve water quality in the long-term. In the short-term it is likely customers will experience increased discolored water.

There are two types of phosphate and each has a different role.

One type sequesters the manganese and iron keeping it in solution. The phosphate prevents the manganese, which is one of the main sources of discolored water around town, from precipitating out and coating the pipes. The build-up of manganese and the eventual flushing is what is causing the discolored water to spout from faucets all over town.

"If the manganese is kept in water we won't get the build-up," said Hill.

The other type of phosphate will inhibit corrosion and improve corrosion control throughout the distribution system. The phosphate forms a bond with the existing pipe forming something like a protective coating so lead or copper doesn't come off the pipe and into the drinking water.

This type of phosphate is largely aimed to improve the department's corrosion control program, a recommendation of the DEP. In the past few years, the department has exceeded the state's drinking water standard in lead content at several homes. The culprit suspected is old lead and copper joints in pipes connecting water mains to the homes.

"The state is requiring us at this point to add this chemical," Hill said.

The phosphate program is not a novel or innovative program, "20 percent of all municipal water departments use it, including a lot locally," Hill said, naming Weymouth and Aquarion (in Hingham, North Cohasset and Hull). He described the phosphate as technically a food additive.

The manganese, which is a naturally occurring mineral, will still be in the water.

"By no means is this chemical a chemical that removes these things from the water; it's not what it is designed to do," Hill said.

In a previous forum on the water department's manganese issues, residents raised concerns about the phosphate program only being a band-aid solution.

"This is not masking a problem. The manganese levels in the water leaving the plant are very low. With the combination of the minerals being sequestered it should keep those concentrations low," Hill said.

The downside

The downside of the program is for roughly two months customers system-wide will likely experience an increase in discolored water. After the phosphate helps to clear the corrosion in the pipes, the water quality is expected to improve overall, Hill said.

"There is an initial conditioning period (of about eight weeks) where discolored water can be a problem and can be disruptive," Hill said. As the phosphate works its way through the system it tries to bond with the already built-up minerals along the pipes, basically causing an accelerated cleaning of scale and tuberculation from the pipe surface.

The addition of the phosphate would be in small increments over a series of weeks and monitored throughout town during the process.

Ideally, Hill said, the department would begin the phosphate program after the department's annual spring flushing when the pipes are the cleanest. But, the funding has to be in place before the project begins, which means late June or early July (if voters approve of the measure).

"This is a means to an end," Hill said.

The estimated start-up cost for the phosphate program at the King Street plant is $50,000. If the program is implemented at the plant the recently revitalized Ellms Meadow well field, used only in the warmer months, would have to be taken off-line temporarily until money is available to make similar improvements there. An additional $125,000 is needed to create the infrastructure to add phosphate to the water coming out of that pumping station.

A public forum on the proposed phosphate program was held on Wednesday. Due to a conflict with the School Committee meeting the Mariner was not able to cover the meeting.

Need for longer-term solution

Given the time restraints of the end of the fiscal year the solutions being brought to Town Meeting do not address the broader management and operational issues plaguing the department. Several town officials discussed the lack of the long-term solutions as an issue.

Advisory Committee chair Sam Wakeman said the town was "asleep at the switch" for not getting enough information from the water department to see this coming before. Going forward he said monthly budget and finance reports are needed and realistic budget projections several years out.

"There has to be some real analysis of how the future of the water department is going to be structured. It's very important to voters that they see what is going forward with this," Wakeman said.

Selectmen Chairman Karen Quigley said presenting a long-term solution is and will continue to be worked on was essential, "if we fail to do that we will fail on the floor of town meeting.

"The general public is due a general apology in recognition of this terrible mess and they need to know it is going to be terrible to get out of it," Quigley said, adding she would push for a line-by-line audit of the department to ensure voter confidence in future long-term solutions.

"There's much more to be done beyond the (immediate) financial situation. It's not that this is more important than why it happened, but it is our fiduciary duty as a town to pay our bills," said Pat Waters, Water Planning Group member.

In dominant fashion

Laxers roll to three victories

By Sean MacCarthy
CORRESPONDENT

Boys' Lacrosse

After their second loss of the season came against Hingham on Tuesday of last week, Cohasset had one major goal: rebound from the loss. They did rebound from the loss and they did so dominantly.

Just two days after the loss to Hingham, the Skippers faced off against the Abington Green Wave who went into the game with a record of 7-5 losses.

Quickly, Abington's record was reduced to 7-6 as Cohasset routed them in a 15-5 win.

"We started off pretty slow," said Captain Ian Quinlan. "However, we were able to bounce back in the second quarter and get a solid win."

Dean "Doomsday" Driscoll had one of his best games of the season as he alone outscored Abington with seven goals. Three of those came from assist master Will Wise who has connected with Driscoll on so many different occasions, the stat keepers lost count.

Charlie Neaves, Ian Quinlan, Thomas Flibotte, and Kyle Livingstone each added a goal to help ensure Cohasset victory in a game they used to regain their confidence after the Hingham loss.

With plenty of confidence, the Cohasset team invited the Nantucket Whalers to come off the island and face the Skippers on Alumni field. The invitation to play lacrosse quickly turned into a one-sided clinic.

Relentless, overpowering, and, quite frankly, superior, the CHS Laxers won 21-3.

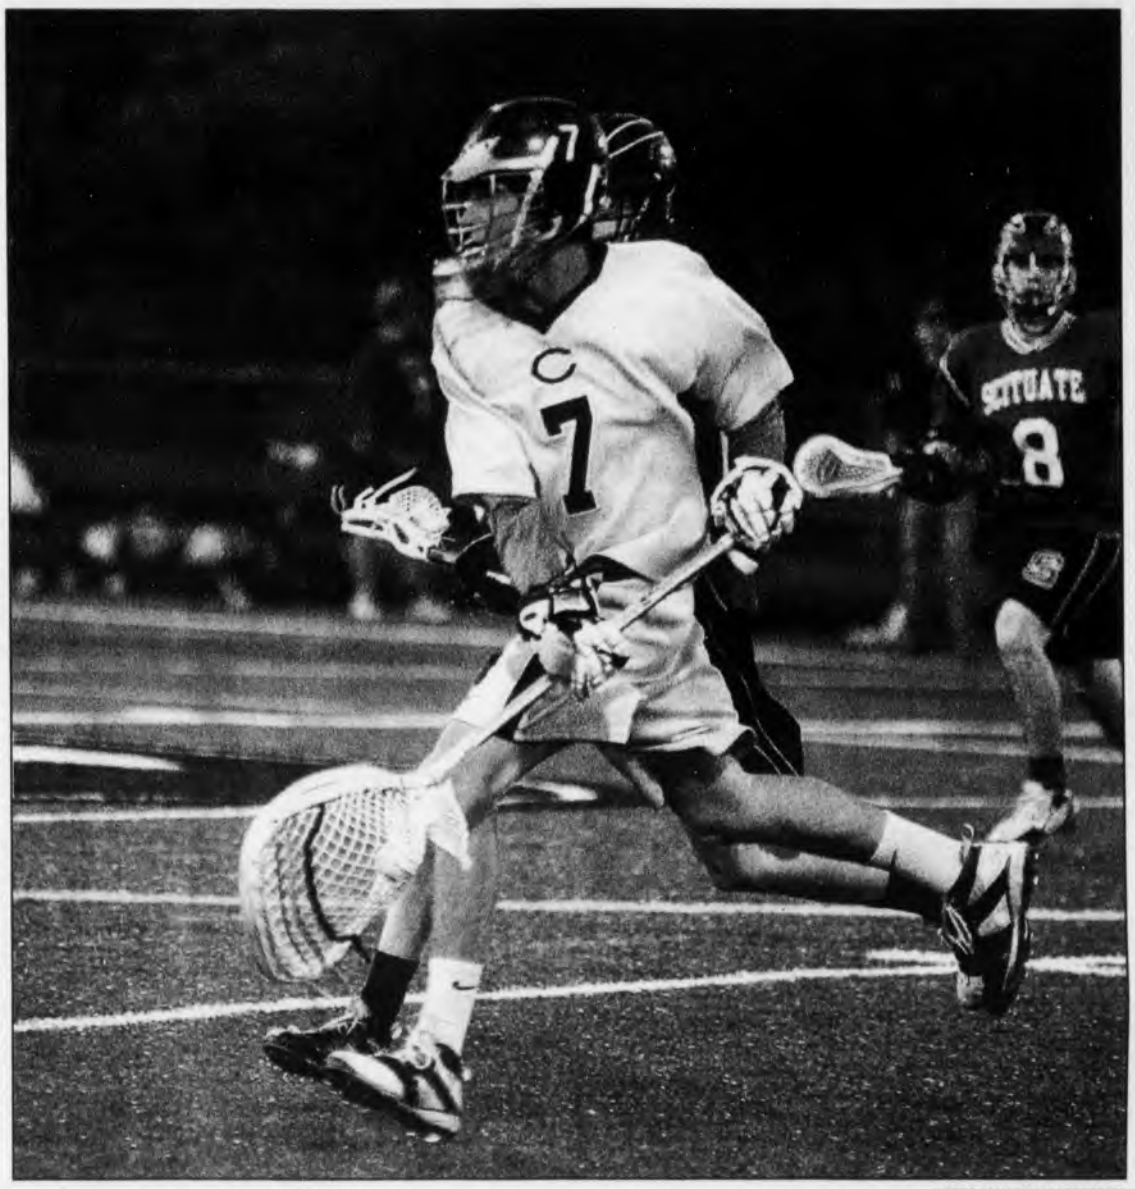
Captain Will Wise said it best.

"We executed really well early on and built a solid lead in the first quarter," he said.

From then on, there was no looking back.

The tremendous trio was, again, doing everything right whether it was putting balls in the net or distributing to some of the other players on the team. The defense also man-handled the Nantucket offense who could hardly get a shot off. When they did get a shot off, Jack Murphy was right there to keep it from reaching the back of his net.

The wins over Nantucket and Abington gave Cohasset a 13-2 record and a clear and replenished mindset. Their next test came on Wednesday, the day after the Nantucket game, against the Xaverian Hawks who went into the game with a 6-10 record.



Don't let the record fool you though. Xaverian is a still a very strong lax team with six of their losses coming against top ten ranked teams in Massachusetts lacrosse. Their very tough schedule would give them their seventh loss to a top ten team when they met fifth ranked Cohasset.

Driscoll opened the game up with two impressive goals. The second goal was assisted by Cohasset goalie Jack Murphy, who made one of his signature mad dashes to the other side of field. Xaverian scored with very little time left in what was a very evenly matched first quarter.

The second quarter was not so even as Cohasset scored six of the seven goals scored in the quarter. Driscoll dove out of bounds to get possession for Cohasset and then quickly assisted Thomas Flibotte. After Flibotte scored his second goal of the game with an absolute rip, defenseman Jake Kissick went coast-to-coast and scored an impressive goal on the run.

Flibotte capped off his hat trick to put Cohasset up 6-1. No more than 10 seconds later, Alex Kinnealey did what he does best, win face-offs, and sprint downfield. Quickly, he passed it off to Quinlan who scored an outstanding goal with his back turned towards the net. After Xaverian scored their second goal of the game, Wise took the ball from behind the net and passed it to Kinnealey who scored on the stunning one-timer.

As the first half came to an end, Cohasset, to the surprise of many, was up 8-2. It didn't stay that way for long as right out of the gates, Xaverian scored tqo quick goals making it 8-4. The momentum was building for Xaverian and it looked like they were making the Skippers sweat. To make matters worse, Cohasset was playing with two men down because of two penalties they committed. However, in what was the turning point of the game, Jack Murphy made three consecutive and clutch saves stomping out any momentum Xaverian had.

Cohasset goalie Jack Murphy makes a run up the field during a recent win over Scituate. Murphy made a similar play this week against Xaverian, bringing the ball up and making a pass for an assist in the 13-6 victory.

Wise helped swing the momentum back in Cohasset's favor by scoring a short handed goal. This was quickly followed by Wise assisting Quinlan to make it 10-4 in a man-up situation.

Flibotte assisted Kinnealey to close out the third quarter with Cohasset up 11-4. It was all over at that point.

Again Xaverian started the quarter with two goals but Wise and Dean each knocked another goal in before the game officially came to a close with a 13-6 Cohasset win.

Against Div. 3 teams, Cohasset is 7-0 and Norwell is 7-1.

When it was all said and done, Cohasset won the game 13-6 to cap off a week of dominant performances. Anyone who doubted Cohasset after the Hingham game was proved wrong by the three impressive victories.

"We came out today and played very well together and we executed when we needed to," Murphy said after the Xaverian game. "We need two good practices tomorrow and on Friday to prepare for our big game on Saturday against Norwell."

Norwell is ranked at the No. 20 team in the state. In Division 3 Lacrosse, they are ranked second behind Cohasset. The Skippers and Clippers are 3-0 in South Shore League play.

On the girls side, Cohasset is also qualified for the tournament with an 11-4 record.

In their most recent action, they lost 15-8 to Hingham on Tuesday, and played Norwell yesterday.

The girls are at Weston on Monday and host Plymouth North on Wednesday before opening postseason play.

Baseball

The Cohasset baseball team's successful season got even better this week when the Skippers beat Hull 22-1 on Monday to claim a spot in the MIAA Div. 3 South Sectional Tournament.

Jeff Cavanaro pitched four shutout innings to earn his fourth win of the season.

Cavanaro allowed two hits and didn't walk anyone.

Junior shortstop Anders Goetz was 3 for 4 with a single, double and a two-run home run, he finished with 6 RBI on the day.

Sophomore second baseman Jamie Faber was 2 for 4 with a triple and 3 RBI.

Senior Andy McKenna made his first start at first base and made several nice plays in the field, as well as going 3 for 4 at the plate, with two RBI and two runs scored.

Freshman outfielder Chris Murphy was 1 for 2 with a bases-loaded triple in the fourth inning that broke open the game. He also played solid defense in right field.

Five Skippers finished with mulitple hits.

Cohasset played Norwell yesterday in a critical South Shore League game.

Heading into the showdown, Abington, Norwell and Cohasset were all 9-3 in South Shore League play.

Basketball

This weekend, some of the top youth basketball teams in the northeast will be in the area as the Scituate based Seaside Sizzle will host the War on the Shore AAU basketball tournament at schools in Scituate and Cohasset.

The tournament is expected to bring between 25 and 40 teams to the area and includes the Sizzle, which has players from several South Shore towns including Hanover, Hingham, Norwell, Abington, Quincy, Marshfield and Scituate.

Three Sizzle teams from grades 5, 7 and 8 will compete, and there will also be another aspect to the tournament.

"My sister-in-law Eileen Weisslinger runs Mir Pace International, a small non-profit organization that takes high school students to different parts of the world that need help," Sizzle coach and tournament organizer Mike Sachitella said. "They've recently been to Guatamala and now she's trying to put together a group to go to Haiti to help with relief services. We're using this tournament as a fundraiser to help the organization."

Sachitella said having the players involved in something bigger than just basketball is a life lesson.

"It's a good way for the girls to know they're working for people who need help," he said.

Games will be at Scituates Gates Intermediate School and Cohasset's Deer Hill School, with games beginning around 8 a.m. and continuing into the

U15 Blue

A combined Blue/White/Grey squad traveled to Duxbury and came out flying, with Lexa Grasz feeding Kathryn Dunn for a score in the first 15 seconds of the game. Cohasset quickly jumped on top 3-0 before Duxbury notched a couple of scores to draw within one. The rest of the game was all Cohasset, as the girls worked some beautiful passing combinations and finished the half up 10-2.

Charlotte Allard, Morgen Montgomery, Annie McElgunn, Grasz and Dunn all had at least three points on the day and were very unselfish sharing the ball.

Hanna Cooper shook off a tough knee injury and made a couple of flashy saves to keep Duxbury off the board. Caroline Prescott, Megan Fitzgerald, Christina Tedeschi and Molly Fitzgerald smothered the Duxbury attack and allowed very few shots on net. The offensive stars of the first half moved to defense and Allard, Grasz and Dunn showed some serious D chops as they intercepted several passes and were like glue on the Duxbury players. Caroline Farren picked up two points in the second half along with single tallies by Madison Hagearty and Molly Fitzgerald. The highlight of the game was the first career goal for Carly Kinscherf, who took a feed from Molly Fitz and ripped a high heater into the top left corner to make the final score 15-4.

U15 White

U-15 White overpowered Duxbury 17-5 on Sunday in beautiful lacrosse weather - sunny, slight breezy with temperatures in the 70's. Cohasset started strong and immediately dominated the play with impressive offensive and defensive contributions from a wide selection of players. Taylor Frederick made three key saves and was well protected by the fearsome defense of Emily Robbins, Isabelle Cannon, Caroline Prescott and Caroline Farren who stripped Duxbury of the ball on most of their offensive attacks and moved it quickly back up the field. Duxbury managed just 8 shots on goal.

The midfield played excellent defense and moved the ball around with sharp passing to give White lots of time in the offensive zone. On attack, Kathryn Dunn notched 4 goals, Christine Guinee added 2 and Cailey Hart pounded one home. Erin Driscoll also added an assist. At midfield, Isabelle Dunne and Charlotte Allard each contributed 3 goals and 3 assists. Lexa Grasz and Annie McElgunn each nabbed 2 goals and 2 assists. White conducted a clinic in the offensive zone with expert positioning and ball movement. An excellent outing for Cohasset White.

U15 Grey

U-15 Grey fielded a team with some help from the other Cohasset teams, as some Grey players had game conflicts, to take on Pembroke away. The play started off fairly even with excellent hustle under bright sun by a thin squad with just 2 extra players. Strong defensive middie play and aggressive ground ball wins by Annie McElgunn, Grace Ryan, and Valerie Farren helped to combat a surging Pembroke offense. Isabelle Seal and others played excellent defense and generally kept Pembroke at bay. Christina Tedeschi stepped up in her debut at goalie and made several key saves, including a free shot. She exercised excellent field command and fired laser clearing passes to move the ball downfield. Cohasset's offense generated many scoring opportunities and shots on goal in the first half, but Pembroke's goalie played superbly and made some giant saves. Pembroke led 4-3 at half.

In the second half, Grey's tiring line held up and the offense came out firing more ground shots and generated a 4 goal lead. Scoring was contributed by many players including Ryan, McElgunn, Mikayla McGrath, and Isabelle Dunne. While the scoring advanced through the second half, Grey stayed strong throughout and managed to maintain a 3-4 goal lead. The hard fought contest ended with Grey taking the game 10-6 through an impressive display of grit, determination, and precision playing.

U11 White

Cohasset U11 White travelled for a second time this season to Norwell to take on their Blue Team. Cohasset was missing most of their 4th graders due to dance recitals and other commitments leaving it to a few remaining older girls to carry the game. The Norwell goalie (Goalzilla) showed up in eye black and towered over the Cohasset girls. Cohasset shooters couldn't get anything by her.

Several times she ran out of the goal cradling like a college player and cleared the ball full field. Cohasset's Leann Hayden was onto her after a few clears and put on heavy pressure to shorten the length of her clears—not a typical scenario for U11 lacrosse! Cohasset's slim bench was low on energy leaving the job to a few girls who carried the team on their backs throughout the contest—Margaret Norton, Meredith Julian and Leanne Hayden. Players who helped out on both ends of the field under heavy pressure at all times from a swarming Norwell team were Kate Nee, Sophie Swartwood, Julia Placek, Kate Fitzpatrick, Madeline Kerr, Eleanor Dunn, Ellie Arnold, Emma Stephens and Lucy St. Saveur. Cohasset's lone goal was by Hayden with an assist by Swartwood.

Annie Twomey played goalie in the first half making a key save. Jane Cavanaro stepped in for the second half and made save after save off of aggressive shots and rebounds. The game ended with Cohasset 1 and Norwell 8. This one will go down as a "character builder".

U11 Blue

U11 Girls Blue faced a strong Pembroke team on Sunday and came away with a 4-4 tie. Although Cohasset controlled the ball for much of the game despite only having 2 subs, Pembroke was able to capitalize on several transition plays late in the second half to even the score. Cohasset had their chances late to take back the lead but were stymied by a superb Pembroke goalie.

Scoring came from Hansen sisters, Lilly Patsos and Kristina Dietrich. Cohasset is fired up for their next contest against Sandwich on Alumni this Sunday afternoon. Hope to see you there!

early evening. There are nine games scheduled for each day.

Among the local players will be Hanover seventh grader Danielle Famamularo, a student at Hanover Middle School.

"I've been playing for the Sizzle since fifth grade," Famamularo said. "It was something I wanted to do since I was little. I've been playing basketball since I was in kindergarten."

Famamularo said she got her chance when her parents talked to Sachitella at a game.

"Mr. Sach watched one of my Hanover games," she said. "My parents knew he was an AAU coach and they went to talk to him and ask if there were going to be tryouts. He picked me to play."

Famamularo said playing AAU basketball is fun, but can be demanding.

"Sometimes we play two weekends in a row," she said. "But usually we play four games every other weekend."

She's excited about the idea of hosting the tournament.

"It's exciting," Famamularo said. "People will know it's the Seaside Sizzle. The games are going to be where we practice. Teams from all over the place are coming. I know the Connecticut Cobras are coming."

Famamularo, who plays forward and small forward, enjoys playing at the elevated level of AAU hoops, where some of the best players in the country play in all ages.

"It's great," she said. "I don't know many of the girls who are coming, but I know a lot are at or above my level. You really have to raise your game."

Teammate Kristen Whitney is from Hingham and goes to Hingham Middle School.

She's also excited about the tournament.

"I haven't been on a team that's hosted a tournament," Whitney said. "We've practiced a lot for this. It's awesome. It's going to be fun to have it right here where we practice. Usually my parents have to drive at least an hour or more."

Whitney's older sister Sarah is a well known golfer.

Kristen doesn't play golf.

Basketball is the sport for the 5-9 forward/center.

"I'm having fun," she said. "I enjoy basketball a lot. I enjoy going different places and playing different teams. The level of play makes you want to work on your game and constantly get better."

As for the family, Kristen said she hopes to be as successful as her sister.

"Of course a lot of people know my sister," she said. "But I wanted to go my own way and be successful in my own sport. With the Sizzle I get that experience and opportunity. I enjoy it a lot."

Fans are invited to come out and enjoy the action.

There is a $5 admission, with proceeds to benefit Haiti relief.

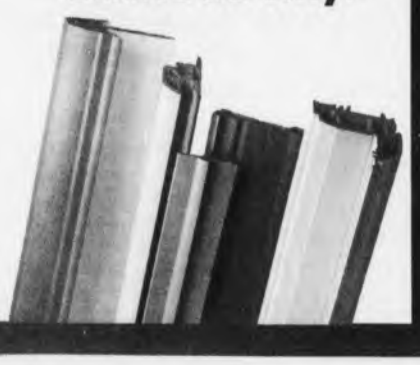
Renewal by Andersen
WINDOW REPLACEMENT
an Andersen Company

After 22 years in a Florida swamp, our window is as good as new.

For those who don't want to replace their replacement windows.



To ensure the durability of our patented Fibrex® material window, we've kept the same window frame submerged in a Florida swamp since 1988. To this day, our testing engineers inspect it every year, and there has been absolutely no change. Our other weather-testing sites in sub-zero Minnesota and the Arizona desert have yielded the same result: after 22 years in the worst conditions, the very same Fibrex® material has remained unchanged.

Why do we perform this crazy weather-testing? To build the best replacement window, that's why. Our practically indestructible Fibrex® frame keeps our glass from shifting and our insulating seals intact, even during drastic temperature changes. This is how we maximize your home's energy-efficiency, season after season, year after year.

- With the $1,500 Federal Energy Tax Credit ending this year, don't get the tax credit "run-around" from another company whose windows don't qualify.
- Our windows have glass that's up to 70% more energy efficient, saving you substantial money on energy costs.†
- 96.2% of our installations have begun and ended on time.
- Every installation finishes with a thorough cleaning with a EPA-compliant HEPA vacuum cleaner, removing debris as small as one micron from your home.
- Renewal by Andersen is the exclusive start-to-finish window replacement subsidiary of Andersen—the most recognized name in windows.

Fibrex® material is 2X as rigid and stable as vinyl

High school days are almost over

LIFE AT CHS

SEAN MACCARTHY

I'm like exuberant but at the same time I am a little sad. My fellow seniors and me will most definitely cherish this last week of ours in the CHS hallways.

Woah! Woah! Wowowowoah.....Woah! Since when is next Monday the beginning of my last week ever in high school? Instead of going straight to Part-B, I think I am going to take some time to Part-A. Wow...I hope you don't even get that joke because of how terrible it was.

Monday was the day that all of those musicalish kids came back to school from the Philadelphia trip. It was a good time. Fun bus rides. Went on some crazy roller coasters designed to make humans throw up. Sung a few songs. Won a large stuffed frog and a soccer jersey from some carnival games. Saw some fake sword fights. Ate a Philly Cheesesteak. Dropped a basketball from a fourth-floor balcony inside the building. Yeah...I'd say that sums it up pretty well.

Tuesday was a day full of surprises! False. You are wrong. Tuesday was not full of surprises. In fact, Tuesday was very uneventful. All day-long. Maybe I was just not feeling it so I wasn't paying attention to what was going on, but seriously, I cannot remember a thing on Tuesday. Now you probably think I am all on drugs...moving on...

I just tried coming up with an art pun involving Wednesday. It didn't work. So yeah, CHS Arts Night was on Wednesday. It was a blast. It is really cool to see some of the artwork kids have done. You never really notice who the phenomenal art students are until they display their art stuff together. Then you know. The Chorus and the Band also performed. In addition (connecting phrase), a few seniors were given awards based on how involved they were, whether it is in the painting field, chorus field or band field, in the arts throughout high school. Congrats to all those who took home a plaque with their name on it. Shame on those who stole a piece of wood from Mr. Lafountain's room and wrote their own name on it in sharpie.

Thursday was a sloo oooooooooooooooooooooow day. I'm not sure why but I specifically remember looking at the clock every 5 minutes as if I was being told to. That's how slow of a day it was. The Seniors finished signing the Goodwin Graphic design that will go on the back of their Senior shirts that they receive. I was in charge of getting people's names on there so I know how awesome it looks.

My last Friday in high school...ever...WHAT!?! Let's think about how absurd that is. I'm like exuberant but at the same time I am a little sad. My fellow seniors and me will most definitely cherish this last week of ours in the CHS hallways. Its going to be weird not waking up at 6:30 a.m. every morning to go to Cohasset High School 180 days a year.

With that being said, that means this is my second to last article! Feel free to use page 23 as a tissue to wipe up all your tears. I know you may be sad, but my replacement has been training for this moment since birth.

Speaking of which, here is my final hint before revealing who the replacement is next week. HINT: My replacement actually won an award because of how well she imitated a really old person.

Guess away my friends! I will see you next week for my big finale. I promise, I will go out with a bang. Let the anticipation build.....NOW!

Sean MacCarthy did not see himself doing any work the last 3 weeks of high school. Sean MacCarthy was wrong, unfortunately.

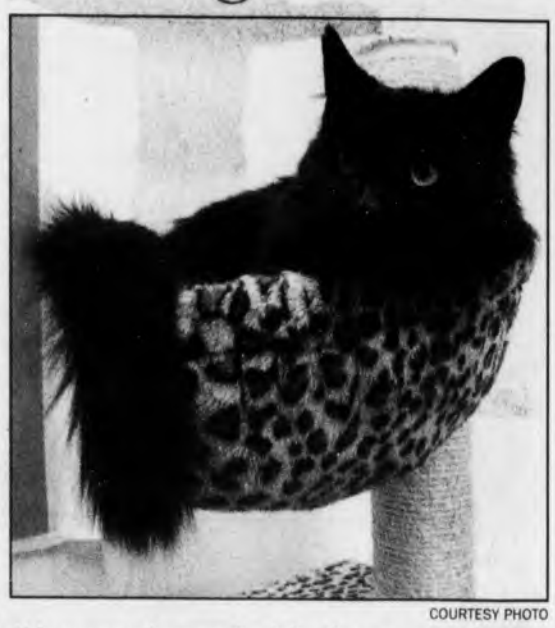
GIMME SHELTER

Neko is looking for love

This week, the Hull Seaside Animal Rescue will feature Neko.



Neko is currently being fostered. He is a young male, medium hair, all black cat. He was so unhappy at the shelter that we opted to foster him. He is doing quite well in the foster home. If interested, we can arrange a visit. We think Neko would prefer being an only cat. You can tell from his picture that he's quite handsome. His behavior has much improved since he's been fostered. With the right person, he should make a great companion.

The Hull Seaside Animal Rescue currently has 19 kittens, most of them will be ready to go between June 5 and 12. Five of them will be ready the second week in July. Eleven are residing at the shelter and eight are being fostered.

Visit www.hsar.org, if you're interested in any of the felines, give Shirl a call at 781 925 3380 for an appointment.

The Rescue is located at 50 L St., Hull; the mailing address is Hull Seaside Animal Rescue, PO Box 787 Hull, MA. 02045. The numbers are 1-877-378-1195, and to speak with Mary, the shelter manager, call 781-925-3121. Open hours are Saturday from 2 to 3 p.m. and Monday from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m.

An Open House/Adoption Day will be held on Saturday June 26, from 2 to 4 p.m. There should still have kittens available at that time.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF MAY 17, 2010

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Your Aries self-esteem level is high, as is your impatience to see more action come your way in the workplace. Good news, Lamb: It could start to happen sooner than you think.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Changing things now could upset a lot of people. But if you feel you're acting because you believe it's the right thing to do, others will understand and even come to support you.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A change of mind might not necessarily be a change of heart. You still want to go ahead with your plans, but you might see a better way to make them happen. So go for it.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) An old business dispute could re-emerge and possibly affect upcoming negotiations. Consider opening up the situation to include suggestions from others on both sides of the issue.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Some Leos and Leonas might find it somewhat difficult to get their ideas accepted or even considered. But that's only for a while. Things will soon return to the way you like them.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) The pace seems to be slowing down from the hectic on-the-job run you recently enjoyed. But be assured that you're still in the race to pick up new workplace-related goodies.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Seasonal changes create opportunities for busy Librans. However, be sure to balance your workload with your personal life so that you don't overdo it on one end or the other.

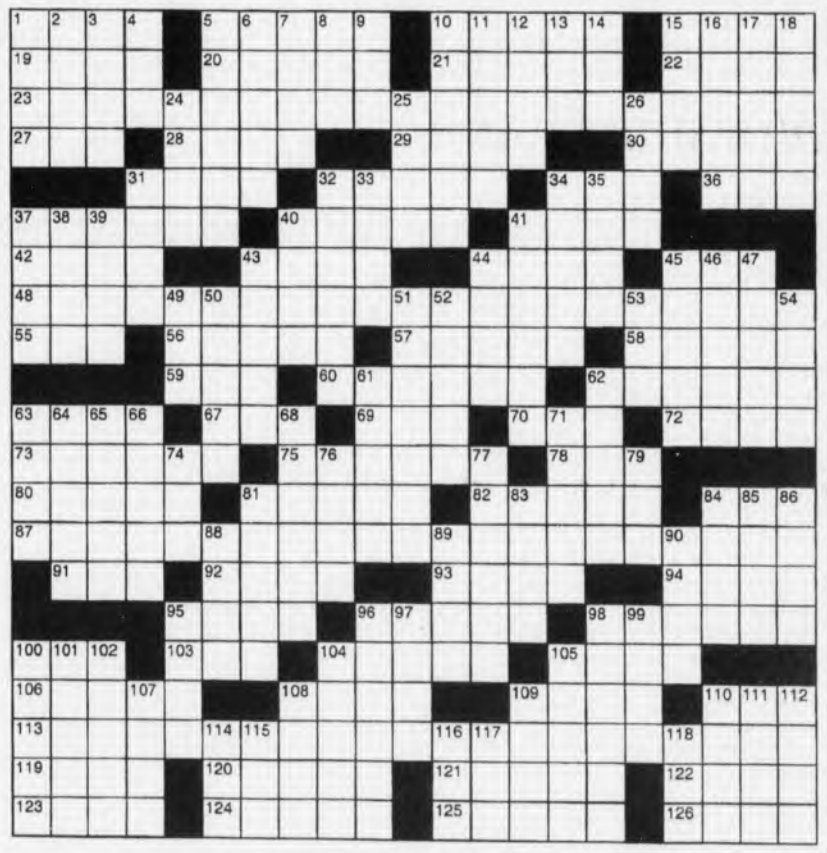
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A former critic could make a surprise turnaround and become a supporter. But if your Scorpion sense suspects a questionable motive, who are the rest of us to doubt it?

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Data on a new project seems less than dependable. But it might turn out to be just the opposite. Consult with someone who knows how you might best be able to check it out.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Capricorneans face many decisions this week, with the Sea Goat's kids rating high on the consideration scale, especially regarding vacations and upcoming school matters.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Showing that you care is what Aquarians do so well. It's your very special skill. And this week, you'll have several chances to show off that gift for a very special person. Good luck.

PISCES (February 19 to March 21) That streak of Piscean wariness should serve you well this week should you be among those who come up against a slippery character offering a fishy deal with nothing to back it up.



(c) 2010 King Features Synd., Inc.

BORN THIS WEEK:
You have an artist's sense of how to help others see, as you do, the beautiful things about the world.

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Movement disorders

An interfaith spiritual retreat for people living with Parkinson's disease, dystonia, tremor and similar conditions will take place at Glastonbury Abbey, 16 Hull St., Hingham, from 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m., on Saturday, May 22. The program is offered by the Spirited Movement Foundation, a Cohasset-based nonprofit dedicated to serving people with movement disorders.

"My team and I are thrilled to offer this retreat at Glastonbury Abbey. Cohasset Carillon recitals this summer

Cohasset Carillon can proudly claim the oldest continuing annual recital series in North America.

The 86th annual Cohasset Carillon Summer Recital Series will begin Sunday June 27, at 6 p.m., and continue each Sunday until Aug. 15. All are invited to bring lawn chairs or a blanket along with a picnic supper to enjoy on the Common while listening to the music of the bells. Free popcorn and lemonade will be available, thanks to the families of St. Stephen's Church. After each recital, a brief tour of the tower will be offered for those interested in seeing the instrument in the playing cabinet and the bells in the tower above.

Cohasset Carillon can proudly claim the oldest continuing annual recital series in North America. It is also the largest carillon by number of bells (57) in New England. The smallest bell weighs only 29 pounds, the largest five and a half tons, more than 11,000 pounds. It was the second carillon to arrive in the United States; Gloucester welcomed the first carillon in 1923.

Among the guest recitalists this summer season will be carillonneurs from the Netherlands and Denmark; the United States and Canada. The last recital on Aug. 15, played by Milford Myhre, Carillonneur Emeritus from Lake Wales, Florida, will honor Sally Slade Warner, Carillonneur at St. Stephen's Church from 1985 through 2009. Slade Warner died in December 2009 after a brief illness. Internationally recognized as an accomplished organist and carillonneur, she will be remembered by her many friends in the American Guild of Organists, the Guild of Carillonneurs of North American and in the St. Stephen's Church community.

Hollywood brings heat to summer with sequels, adaptations

By Al Alexander
GATEHOUSE MEDIA NEW ENGLAND

We're almost through the dregs of spring and it's time to start getting pumped about a summer full of blockbusters featuring big stories and even bigger stars. It all began May 7.

So, to get you ready, here's a sampling of just what you have to look forward to, beginning with:

May 14

Robin Hood: For their fifth collaboration, Ridley Scott and Russell Crowe venture deep into Sherwood Forest looking for an excuse for a bloodletting. Let's hope it's more "Gladiator" and less "A Good Year," but rumors of script troubles raise doubts. And who, pray tell, plays Maid Marian? It be Cate Blanchett, natch.

Letters to Juliet: Amanda Seyfried, who seems to be starring in every other movie this year, plays a woman vacationing in Verona, Italy, who tries her hand at matchmaking after being inspired by the story of "Romeo & Juliet."

Just Wright: Queen Latifah plays a physical therapist who draws the assignment of treating an NBA star played by Common ("Date Night"). But in easing his pain, he begins making her heart ache. Love and basketball presumably ensue.

May 21

Shrek Forever After: The fourth installment of the perplexingly popular cartoon finds the smelly green ogre embarking on his own version of "It's a Wonderful Life." Fed up with his humdrum existence, he is thrust into an alternative universe where he will learn to appreciate how much Fiona and the kids mean to him.

MacGruber: The popular "Saturday Night Live" sketch created by and starring Will Forte gets the big-screen treatment with Kristen Wiig and Ryan Phillippe helping MacGruber hunt down a stolen nuclear warhead.

May 28

Sex and the City 2: The female version of the Fab Four returns for its second go-round on the big screen. "Guest stars" include Miley Cyrus, Penélope Cruz, and Liza Minnelli. The big news, though, is that the story won't be contained to Manhattan. Perish the thought!

The Prince of Persia: The Sands of Time: Producer Jerry Bruckheimer taps a bulked-up Jake Gyllenhaal to play Dastan, the star of the popular video game on which this overblown fantasy is based.

The Killers: Ashton Kutcher and Katherine Heigl play a married couple fearing for their lives after they get word that someone is trying to kill them. Why is someone trying to kill them? Because Kutcher used to be a secret agent, of course.

Marmaduke: The cartoon world's most famous Great Dane makes the jump from the page to the screen in this comedy adventure melding live action and computer animation. Steve Coogan, Fergie, George Lopez and Christopher Mintz-Plasse try to keep this one from becoming a total dog.

The A-Team: I'm not sure why a big-screen version of the cheesy 1980s TV adventure series was needed. But with a cast that includes Liam Neeson, Sharlto Copley ("District 9") and Bradley Cooper, I must admit I'm intrigued. And I pity the fool who's not.

Get Him to the Greek: From the director of "Forgetting Sarah Marshall" (Nicholas Stoller) comes this sort of doped-out version of "My Favorite Year," with Jonah Hill playing the adoring peon assigned the task of having to get the oft-inebriated rock star Aldous Snow (Russell Brand reprising his role from "Sarah Marshall") from London to the Greek Theater in Los Angeles on time.

"Toy Story " opens June 18.

The Karate Kid: Jaden Smith (son of Will) stars in this needless remake of the 1980s classic from which we learned the beauty of "wax on, wax off." Please! Stop your snickering. Save it for little Smith and Jackie Chan, taking over the Mr. Miyagi role.

June 18

Toy Story 3: When Disney bought Pixar for about 8 zillion bucks a few years ago, the deal included Pixar Chairman John Lasseter agreeing to make a third installment of his wildly popular "Toy Story" films, a project he previously resisted. So, like it or not, here it is. But despite it being made under duress, early word is that this one more than lives up to its two predecessors. Yeah, right. Next they'll be telling us is that toys can talk. Hey, wait ...

Jonah Hex: In this adaptation of the DC Comic, Josh Brolin plays a disfigured bounty hunter mixing it up with John Malkovich and bedding Megan Fox.

June 25

Knight and Day: If the trailer for this shot-in-Boston spy thriller didn't get you psyched, the pairing of Tom Cruise and Cameron Diaz will. He plays a spy on the run, she plays his impromptu partner, and Peter Sarsgaard plays the government agent who wants to see them dead. James Mangold ("3:10 to Yuma," "Walk the Line") directs.

Grown Ups: Think of this one as "Wild Hogs" without the motorcycles, as Adam Sandler, Kevin James, Chris Rock, Rob Scheider and David Spade try to fend off the ravages of middle age by holing up in a lakeside cabin and behaving like imbeciles. In other words, it's just like all their other movies.

June 30

The Twilight Saga: Eclipse: Which side are you on: Team Edward or Team Jacob? Me, I'm on Team Apathetic, because I couldn't care less who the perpetually sneering Bella ends up with. But I also realize I'm in the vast minority, as the box office returns will prove after part 3 of the "Saga" hits screens, including some IMAX venues.

July 2

The Last Airbender: M. Night Shyamalan used to make creepy, unsettling movies. Now he makes unintentional comedies (I still say "The Happening" was the funniest flick of 2008.) This one, though, sounds like an even bigger chuckler thanks to a premise revolving around a 12-year-old boy with the power to control earth, wind and fire. Hey, I thought that was Philip Bailey's job.

Cyrus: Jonah Hill, never a stranger to offbeat roles, takes on his most daring one to date, playing a young man who loves his mother, played by Marisa Tomei. And by "love," I mean it in the most unwholesome way. John C. Reilly costars as mom's befuddled boyfriend in a film written and directed by mumblecore mavens Jay and Mark Duplass.

Restrepo: "Perfect Storm" author Sebastian Junger tries his hand at directing, as he and filmmaking partner Tim Hetherington head to Afghanistan to chronicle the everyday life of an Army platoon and all the monotony and dangers its members encounter.

July 9

Despicable Me: I've been dying to see this one ever since I saw the trailer for it last fall. And what's not to like, with Steve Carell and Jason Segel providing the voices for two of the globe's nastiest villains, who go head-to-head in a quest for world domination and ownership of the moon.

Predators: I'm baaack! No, not Arnold Schwarzenegger; I'm talking about one of his most famous nemeses: a dreadlocked jungle creature capable of making girlie men of all who try to stop him and his minions. But Topher Grace, Adrien Brody, Laurence Fishburne and Danny Trejo all say they're up for the challenge.

The Kids Are All Right: Julianne Moore and Annette Bening play a lesbian couple whose artificially inseminated children ("Alice in Wonderland's" Mia Wasikowska and "Bridge to Terabithia's" Josh Hutcherson) seek out the sperm donor, played by Mark Ruffalo. Lisa Cholodenko ("Laurel Canyon") directs.

Get Low: Robert Duvall plays a crazy Depression-era coot who decides to hold his own funeral while he's still alive. Bill Murray costars.

July 16

Inception: Christopher Nolan follows up his box-office sensation, "The Dark Knight," with a sci-fi thriller starring Leonardo DiCaprio as a delusional mental patient... Wait, wrong movie. I guess I'm not sure what he plays. Nolan is intriguingly keeping everything top secret. But given his track record, I have complete faith in what he has in store.

The Sorcerer's Apprentice: Every pothead remembers (excuse the oxymoron) Mickey Mouse's interpretation of the classic poem by Johann Wolfgang von Goethe in "Fantasia." Now Disney has decided to blow our minds further by teaming with Jerry Bruckheimer to give us a live-action version starring Nicolas Cage as the sorcerer and Jay Baruchel as the apprentice. Hopefully, magic ensues.

Salt: A lot of male sexual fantasies will be answered when Angelina Jolie comes packing heat of all kinds in her role as a government agent trying to prove her innocence when she's wrongly accused of plotting to assassinate the president. I just hope she's wearing tight leather. (Please, please, pretty please wear tight leather.)

Dinner for Schmucks: One of the great French comedies of the past decade was "The Dinner Game." I still chuckle just thinking about it. So Paul Rudd and Steve Carell have a lot to live up to in this American remake in which Rudd plays a brownnosing executive trying to please his boss by bringing the stupidest guy he can find to dinner. That would be Carell. Jay Roach ("Meet the Parents") directs.

Ramona and Beezus: Disney brat Selena Gomez and newcomer Joey King play troubled siblings in this adaptation of Beverly Cleary's 1955 kids' novel.

July 30

The Adjustment Bureau: Matt Damon and Emily Blunt delve into a sci-fi world created by Philip K. Dick ("Minority Report"), one where mysterious forces are keeping their madly-in-love characters apart. Where's Stephen Hawking when you need him?

Cats & Dogs: The Revenge of Kitty Galore: If you were among the two or three people clamoring for a sequel to "Cats & Dogs," your prayers regrettably have been answered with this talking-critter spectacle in which the felines and the canines join forces to declaw the evil Kitty Galore. Say, wasn't she in a Bond movie?

Aug. 6

The Other Guys: Will Ferrell, like David Ortiz, is in the throws of a terrible slump, having bottomed out (hopefully) with last summer's aptly tilted "Land of the Lost." Looking to bounce back, he's teamed with "Date Night" scene-stealer Mark Wahlberg in a twisted buddy picture in which they play inept cops forced to quickly get their acts together when a crisis ensues.

Cairo Time: While awaiting her husband's arrival in Egypt, a diplomat's wife (Patricia Clarkson) is escorted around Cairo by her spouse's good friend (Alexander Siddig from "Syriana"). But during their long walks and talks an unexpected romance develops.

Aug. 13

Eat, Pray, Love: This baby has chick-flick written all over it, as Julia Roberts plays surrogate to author Elizabeth Gilbert in her autobiographical tale about a woman who takes a break from her perfect life to discover who she really is by traveling the world sampling culinary and male delights.

The Expendables: Sylvester Stallone is a terrible actor, but he can be a pretty good director, as he proved with the last Rocky picture. So there's reason to get excited about this one, especially with a cast that reads like a hall of fame of action stars: Arnold Schwarzenegger, Bruce Willis, Dolph Lundgren, Jet Li, Jason Statham and Mickey Rourke. All are part of a team sent to South America to take out a dictator "Dirty Dozen" style. Man, I want to punch somebody just thinking about it.

Aug. 20

Lottery Ticket: The artist formally known as Lil Bow Wow is movin' on up after purchasing a $350 million lottery ticket. But as with Hurley in "Lost," the prize quickly becomes more of a curse than a blessing. Keith David, Ice Cube, Bill Bellamy and Mike Epps co-star.

Nanny McPhee and the Big Bang: Emma Thompson reprises her roles as a Poppins-ish nanny able to work magic and miracles in the lives of her employers. Maggie Gyllenhaal, Rhys Ifans and Maggie Smith join her on this adventure.

The Switch: What is it with beautiful women and artificial insemination? First J-Lo, now Jennifer Aniston? This one, though, is more subversive than "The Back-up Plan," and what makes that so is Jason Bateman, who plays a guy secretly pining for Aniston. Bateman secretly replaces her donor's sperm with his own. Move seven years ahead and he's forgotten all about the switch until he reconnects with the object of his affection and meets the young lad, who - shock - looks just like him.

Sandy Money

BEST BET

On Saturday May 22, local area grooves, Sandy Money, will perform an acoustic-electric show at the New North Music Hall located at 1 Lincoln St., in Hingham Square. Sandy has been compared to an evolved groove/blues styled rockers, from the Dave Matthews Band and Jack Johnson to The Why Store and Lenny Kravitz, blending roots with rhythm/blues, delivered with an introverted So-Cal sensibility. Scituate local and front man, Aideen Collins, will not disappoint in this more intimate venue, showcasing mostly original material and a few choice covers.
Opening the evening will be folk/Americana/grass-roots artist, Senayit Tomlinson, from New Hampshire who has nearly half a dozen CDs in her discography. Senayit's music weaves intricate lyrics and storytelling with an almost spiritual melodies and masterful acoustic guitar playing. Bowen sees Cohasset from space

Atlantis landed safely Wednesday

By Jill Michaels
CORRESPONDENT

It's a Hollywood rarity, but sometimes the sequel is much better than the original.

Cohasset astronaut Steve Bowen and his five STS-132 crewmates landed in Florida Wednesday morning after spending nearly 12 days in space. The mission was Bowen's second orbital flight.

STS-132 is slated as the final flight of space shuttle Atlantis. Only two more shuttle missions remain on NASA's manifest before the fleet is retired.

Bowen performed two spacewalks or EVAs (extravehicular activities) while Atlantis was docked to the International Space Station (ISS). The astronauts also installed the Mini Research Module 1 to the Russian segment of the space station.

The Cohasset Mariner had the opportunity to ask Bowen two questions early Sunday morning while he and his crewmates were floating inside the ISS with the orbiting outpost's six-member crew.

The first question was: From your perspective on orbit right now, what thoughts and feelings about your final shuttle flight and EVAs would you like to share with residents of Cohasset and the rest of New England?

Bowen playfully paused for emphasis, then said: "Hmm..." while the two crews laughed. When one astronaut joked about Cape Cod, Bowen said: "Well, no, actually, I saw Cape Cod, which is kind of neat."

"And I got to look down and pointed out to Piers where my hometown was, where Cohasset was and that was very exciting."
— Astronaut Steve Bowen

To answer the question, Bowen said: "Piers (Sellers) and I were up in the Cupola enjoying the views the other day, just for a few moments, and we happened to come up right over Cape Cod.

"And I got to look down and pointed out to Piers where my hometown was, where Cohasset was, and that was very exciting.

"So, as a memory from this flight — the opportunity to share the world with my friends here on board the space station. And really no matter where you are, you got friends you can share it with, so that's a great deal."

Later during the in-flight crew news

NASA astronaut Steve Bowen, STS-132 mission specialist, participates in the mission's first session of extravehicular activity as construction and maintenance continue on the International Space Station. During the seven-hour, 25-minute spacewalk, Bowen and astronaut Garrett Reisman (out of frame), mission specialist, loosened bolts holding six replacement batteries, installed a second antenna for high-speed Ku-band transmissions and adding a spare parts platform to Dextre, a two-armed extension for the station's robotic arm.

Honoring the fallen

Memorial Day events start Saturday

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

On Monday, amid talk of barbeques and the start of summer, the town of Cohasset will be reminded of what the holiday is truly about – the brave men and women who have fought and died in defense of the country.

All the pieces of a fitting tribute to the servicemen and women who have served are coming together.

For the past week over 400 red, white, and blue American flags have been waving in the breeze as part of the Healing Field. The field, which became a part of Cohasset's Memorial Day events in 2007, will be dedicated on Saturday at 1p.m.

On Monday morning scores of Cohasset veterans will gather to march and pay tribute to fallen heroes. They will visit the cemeteries and then march through the village and down to the harbor.

The Veterans Memorial stone monument provides the backdrop for the ceremony that will include featured speaker Secretary of Veterans' Services and Medal of Honor recipient, Thomas G. Kelley. He is one of only two living Medal of Honor winners in

Historical Society displays dresses from the past

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Sometime in the 1950s the prom tradition as we now know it began in Cohasset and across the nation. The dance, the dress, the tux, all make up what is a rite of passage as high school students prepare to graduate.

Cohasset High seniors will gather on the Common tonight (Friday) for the red-carpet pre-prom gala, a tradition that started in the mid-1990s.

At the Cohasset Historical Society's Pratt Building, they are celebrating the proms of the past in an exhibit displaying dresses once worn at the timeless event.

PICTURE THIS/Erick Amero

Name: Erick Amero.

Occupation: COMPASS Enrichment Program Director.

Best day of your life: Too many good ones to list but a really good one was a few years ago. I spent part of the summer volunteering on a tall ship called the Lettie G. Howard. We did a transit from New York City to Maine. When we went through the Cape Cod Canal, the Captain and First Mate wanted me to climb to the top of the main-mast and sit on top! The climb was a little unnerving but to sit on top of a mast and at the very top it's only as wide as a small chair! One of those amazing experiences you never forget.

I should also say the day I met my girl friend, just in case she reads this article.

Best vacation: Cross country road trip to the Canadian Rockies, Glacier National park, and B.C. I never saw so many HUGE animals. Elk, buffalo, rams, mountain goats, pronghorns, and even a grizzly from a distance. By far one of the most dramatic and beautiful landscapes I have ever seen.

Favorite season: October and September, especially in northern New England.

Favorite holiday: Red Sox Opening Day.

Favorite junk food: Cheez-its and French fries

Best book: "Let My People Go Surfing," "Three Cups of Tea," "The Lonely Land," and "John Adams."

Best movie or actor: "Master and Commander," "Invictus," and anything from Will Ferrell (except for "Land of the Lost").

Best TV show: "Lost" and "Northern Exposure."

The Mariner caught up with COMPASS Enrichment Program Director Erick Amero this week at Deer Hill School. The program is open to any children in grades K-6 in the Cohasset Public Schools, registration will be accepted throughout the year. Contact Amero at 781-383-8223 / eamero@cohassetk12.org for more information. For the latest COMPASS program news, see page 22.

Best music, group, or artist: Some of the local boys would have to be Dropkick Murphys and Mighty Mighty Bosstones. I am also a big fan of Flogging Molly, Great Big Sea, Dave Mathews Band, and Pearl Jam.

Pet peeve: When people talk on their cell phone at the gym.

Fun Fact: When I was 19, I hiked the entire Appalachian Trail by myself. It took me about five months and I had an incredible experience. But on that same journey I also had my most embarrassing experience. I was hiking in the Rone Highlands and was attacked by a gang of miniature ponies! I'm not kidding; these things were vicious! I still break out in a cold sweat whenever I get close to a pony.

Goal: To be on the U.S. Olympic curling team.

Person you'd most like to meet: Greg Mortenson. I would love to drink some tea with him and learn more about his work in Central Asia. I also think it would be fun to play a game of cribbage against Terry Francona and Pedroia, I hear they are very competitive cribbage players.

Biggest worry: Yankees will win another World Series.

Best part of Cohasset: Holly Hill Farm (that place is very cool!)

ARTHRITIS AT HOME
Home healthcare providers can help those who suffer from arthritis to manage their conditions. Assisting with a simple exercise regimen can keep individuals active in order to maintain muscle strength and movement in their joints. Using heated pads or hot water bottles can reduce stiffness in the affected areas. Swelling can be addressed with cold packs. Massage helps relax muscles and improve the blood flow. Providing well-balanced, healthy meals helps clients maintain their weight alleviating extra pressure on hips, knees and feet. If a client should require specialized assistance, an occupational therapist can help find new ways of doing things, which may include providing advice on special equipment and adaptations to the home.
If your parents are finding everyday tasks too painful because of arthritis - or for any reason - then you want to call our office for an appointment today. We place experienced and compassionate home aides who can help with the day-to-day chores that arthritis makes difficult, like cooking, grooming and bathing. Your parents deserve to stay in their home for as long as they want. Our companions can make that possible, whether they need occasional care or full-time assistance. POLICE BEAT

Door-to-door solicitor arrested for violating bylaw

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

In what is a first since the Cohasset bylaw regulating door-to-door solicitors was adopted four years ago – police have arrested a magazine salesman after receiving a complaint from a resident.

Police arrested a 34-year-old Chicago man who was selling magazines for a company that was warned about violating the bylaw last year. "They were warned they needed a permit and disregarded that," Lt. William Quigley said about the magazine sales company.

In fact, the man who was arrested made statements to police that the salesmen were told, if questioned, to tell police they did not realize they had crossed the town line into Cohasset. In this case the man was going door-to-door on South Main Street.

Quigley said the Chicago man had a lengthy criminal record and because of that would not have been given a permit. He explained that any willful violation of a town bylaw, such as the solicitation bylaw, is an arrestable offense. The four-year-old bylaw that was approved by the Attorney General's Office requires that those selling magazines, for example, must first register with the police department.

The Chicago man, who was arrested at about 7:45 p.m. on Monday (May 17), was arraigned in Quincy District Court the following day and fined $100.

Quigley said he thinks the magazine company may have gotten the message this time. "They are gone and I don't think they will be back," he said.

The solicitation bylaw has been effective in limiting the number of solicitors who come to town with the intention of getting in and quickly getting out, police said. It has also provided some comfort to residents that the people who are soliciting have background checks performed by the police department.

The licenses are good for a period to be determined by the police chief up to one year and are non-transferable.

The bylaw at a glance:

- Solicitors are required to register with the police, where they can apply for a $25 license.
- Solicitors are required to wear a badge, issued by the police, that includes their name and photograph.
- Solicitors have to provide police with their name, address, date of bi:th and height, weight and eye color, social security number; dates and times of canvassing activities; name and address of employer; and a brief description of the purposes of the solicitation.
- Exceptions to the bylaw are town, state or federal officers or employees on official business; minors under 18, unless in connection with a commercial activity; candidates for public office or campaign workers; those promoting political causes; and those soliciting for charitable organizations, unless those solicitors are paid.

Box truck

Police spoke to the operator of a 1996 Ford box truck who had been reported as speeding along Sohier Street, which is in a school zone.

A concerned citizen provided police with a plate number and reported the van "flew by him" at about 8:40 a.m. on Monday (May 17). The plate came back to a 56-year-old Halifax man.

Police located the truck at the post office and talked with the driver who was cited for speeding.

Road rage

A 52-year-old Cohasset woman told police about a nightmarish scenario from Scituate and then into Marshfield and along Route 3 southbound last week. She explained she had inadvertently cut a motorist off who then road her bumper as she traveled along Route 3 from Marshfield toward the Cape. She was unable to get a plate number. She was finally able to exit the highway and the white, four-door sedan continued on. She wanted to make police aware of the incident.

Cleaning crew

A commercial alarm about an unsecured door at the Cohasset Golf Club at about 4 a.m. last Tuesday (May 18) turned out to be due to the cleaning crew, police said. Police responded to the alarm and a few minutes later, another cruiser spotted a motor vehicle speeding from Cedar to Hull Street and pulled it over. The cleaning crew was in the car and had not secured the door, police said.

Foreign license

At 3:12 p.m. on Wednesday (May 19), an officer monitoring traffic near Route 3A and King Street pulled over a 1997 white Saturn that did not use its turn signal when turning onto King Street, almost causing a rear-end collision with the vehicle behind it. Further investigation revealed the 23-year-old East Boston man who was driving only had a Mexican license even though he has been in the U.S. for five years. He did not have a passport or other paperwork. He was summonsed to court for unlicensed operation and for failure to use a turn signal. His passenger was licensed and was able to drive the car so it was not towed, police said.

Expired license

A 26-year-old Norwell woman whose 1998 Jeep Grand Cherokee rolled through the stop sign at King and Beechwood streets at about 2:10 p.m. on Thursday (May 20) was summonsed to court for unlicensed operation and for failure to stop at the stop sign. Police said her license had expired on her birthday in April.

Police urge motorists to check the expiration date on their driver's license because the registry is not sending our reminders.

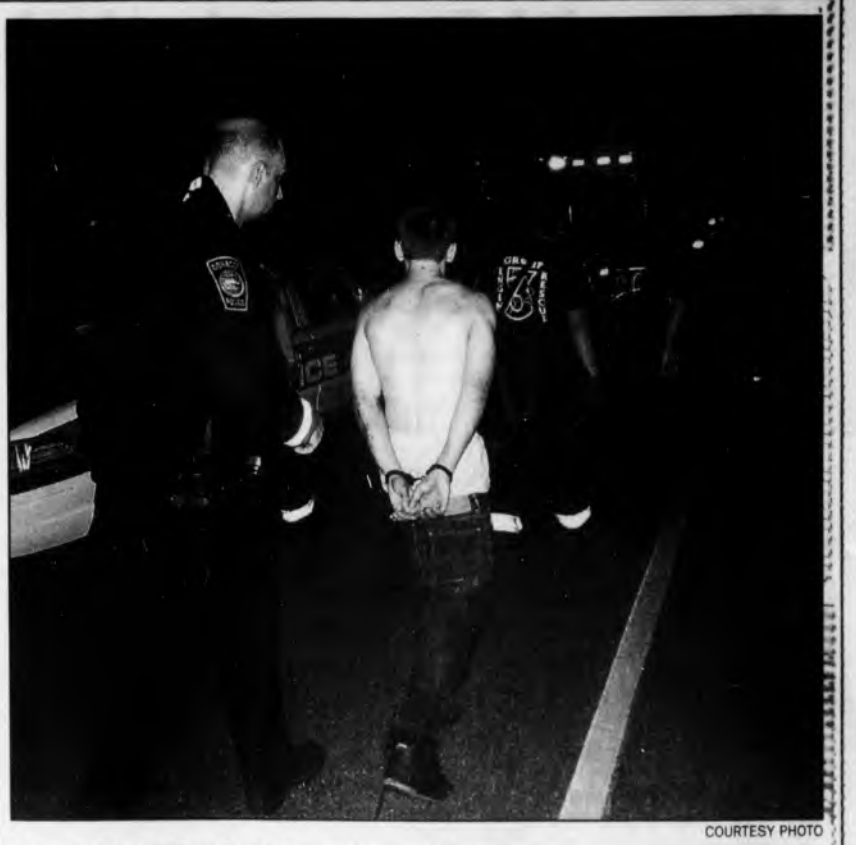
MV crashes

- At about 6:40 p.m. on Thursday (May 20), a 2004 Ford Sequoia operated by a 42-year-old Cohasset woman backed out of Spring Street across from the Pratt Building on South Main Street into the side of a parked 2007 Ford Expedition that was parked on S. Main. There was minor damage to the Expedition, police said.
- At 2:27 p.m. on Saturday (May 22), a 64-year-old Scituate woman reported that her 2009 Toyota Highlander had been hit by an unidentified vehicle while she was parked at Shaw's. There were scuffmarks on the door and side-rear bumper, police said. The accident was not caught on surveillance tapes.

Warrant

A 20-year-old Hanover woman who appeared to be upset as she was walking home to Hanover along Beechwood Street after having a verbal argument with her boyfriend was checked by police and offered a ride home at about 10:50 a.m. on Saturday (May 22). However, further investigation revealed she had an outstanding warrant for her arrest (for operating after license suspension) and she was placed under arrest on the warrant.

Peace restored



Police talked to two dog owners who had gotten into a verbal argument after one the dogs allegedly tried to attack the other person's dog on Sunday (May 23) at about 4:20 p.m. The incident occurred near Beechwood and Doane streets. The Animal Control Officer is going to follow up to make sure the dogs are properly licensed, police said.

Parking complaint

Police ticketed several cars after receiving a complaint about parking along North Main Street by the ball fields on Sunday (May 23) at about 5:14 p.m. Police said the area where parking is allowed or not allowed is clearly marked.

Terminated

Police responded to a possible domestic at about 8:40 p.m. on Sunday (May 23) in the Shaw's parking lot. As it turned out the boyfriend of the 17-year-old Scituate girl was trying to get her back into the car. She had just been fired from her job at Shaw's and was upset, police said. There was no domestic situation, police said.

Teen allegedly tries to steal pickup truck, then flees

"This is a great example of police departments working together to take a person with complete disregard for others, and their property, off of the street."
— Chief Mark DeLuca

On Tuesday, May 25 at about 2:45a.m, the Cohasset Police Department's emergency dispatch center received a 911 call from a home near the intersection of Beechwood Street and Bound Brook Lane.

A 45-year-old male resident was reporting that an unknown man had just attempted to steal his 2007 Ford pick-up truck from his driveway. The caller was also reporting that the suspect crashed the Ford pick-up into a 1999 Volvo that was also parked in the driveway. The suspect then fled into nearby woods before being confronted by the caller.

Cohasset officers arrived on scene and established a perimeter. Hingham Police K-9 Officer James Foss and his partner "Axel" arrived on scene and assisted Cohasset police with tracking the suspect through a marsh and swamp area. The suspect was subsequently cornered by "Axel" and the officers, but attempted to resisted arrest.

The suspect, Enrico Teruzzi, 19, of 21 Atlantic Ave. Cohasset, was contacted several times by the K-9 and received injuries. He was transported to South Shore Hospital by Cohasset Fire Department Paramedics while under police guard.

Teruzzi was arraigned on the following charges at Quincy District Court: larceny of a motor vehicle, breaking and entering a motor vehicle, vandalism, resisting arrest, and disorderly conduct.

Cohasset Police Chief Mark DeLuca stated, "This is a great example of police department's working together to take a person with complete disregard for others, and their property, off of the street. The Cohasset officers and Hingham officer did an outstanding job."

Teruzzi was released on $500 bail. He will be back in court for a pre-trial conference on a date to be determined, police said.

Massachusetts.

Kelley said he plans to remind those who come out on Monday what Memorial Day is truly about.

"Everybody needs to remember the sacrifices made by men and women in service of the our country. It should be foremost in people's minds," Kelley said. "The reason we honor these veterans is because they gave up all their tomorrows so we could have ours. I want everyone to keep that in mind."

Kelley is a retired Captain from the Navy, who spent 30 years as a surface warfare officer.

In 1968 he volunteered to go to Vietnam. A year later, as Commander of River Assault Division 152, he was leading a column of river assault craft to extract a company of US Army infantry when the Viet Cong opened fire. One of his troop carriers was having mechanical difficulties. Kelley, then a lieutenant, ordered the remaining boats to form a protective cordon around the craft. He then maneuvered his boat to the exposed side of the cordon in direct line of fire.

An enemy rocket hit and seriously wounded him, but he continued directing the other boats, despite being unable to move or speak clearly into a radio. He gave orders through one of his men until the enemy attack was suppressed, and the boats were able to complete their mission. For his actions he received the Medal of Honor, the highest military decoration awarded by the US government.

He was appointed Commissioner of the Massachusetts Department of Veterans Services in 1999 where he oversees programs for the half million Massachusetts veterans and their dependents. The position was upgraded to Secretary of Veterans' Services in 2003.

"The reason we honor these veterans is because they gave up all their tomorrows so we could have ours. I want everyone to keep that in mind."

— Thomas G. Kelley Secretary of Veterans' Services

Before the ceremonies at the harbor, veterans will gather at the American Legion on Summer Street for breakfast at 7a.m. Then spend the morning honoring fallen comrades at the four cemeteries in town.

The Wigmore Family, father Steven, American Legion commander, Tom Wigmore, Sons of American Legion commander and Tom's wife, Deirdre Wigmore, president of the American Legion Auxiliary spend countless hours organizing and preparing the town for its Memorial Day events.

"My father, Steven (Wigmore), myself and my wife, Deirdre challenge every veteran in town to come out and participate," Tom Wigmore said. "We really want all the veterans in the community to come out."

Wigmore said veterans do not need to have a uniform, only dark slacks and a white shirt.

"We want to see increased participation from our veterans and the townspeople this year," Wigmore said.

The parade arrives at the harbor at about 11:45 a.m. on Monday, but the day's events actually begin the night before. From 8 p.m. Sunday to 6 a.m. Monday, a Legion member will keep vigil at Veterans Park. At 7 a.m. the George H. Mealy American Legion Post 118 on Summer Street hosts the annual veterans' breakfast. From the Legion veterans march up to the old Paul Pratt Library building (now the headquarters of the Cohasset Historical Society) where they board buses for the North Cohasset Cemetery and honor roll.

The buses arrive at Woodside Cemetery (on North Main) at about 9:30 a.m. that includes visiting the Gold Star Mothers Memorial. Then it's on to Beechwood Cemetery.

The veterans then join the parade that includes local bands, scouts, a contingent from the Daughters of the American Revolution, and veterans at the Music Circus parking lot at about 10:30 a.m. From 10:40 to 11:10a.m. the Cohasset Carillon at St. Stephen's plays patriotic and American folk and show tunes before the parade makes its way to the village. The parade marches to Central Cemetery at Joy Place, then down North Main Street to the Common, the POW/MIA Memorial, and onto Elm Street and the harbor, arriving at about 11:45 a.m.

Cohasset's veterans agent Joe McElroy has spent a lot of time over the last year getting in touch with local veterans and their spouses to ensure they are getting their entitled benefits and are involved in programs, like Memorial Day.

"First and foremost our priority is to honor fallen service members. We cannot lose sight of that; it is the most important thing about Memorial Day," McElroy said.

Be a part of the parade

Flower girls: Girls age 4 and up are needed to be the flower girls at the Memorial Day ceremony. The group is meets at 11 a.m. on the Common across from the South Shore Community Center and march to Veterans Park on the harbor. Flower girls are asked to bring flowers. If your daughters, granddaughters or nieces are interested or if anyone has questions please contact Deirdre Wigmore, 781-740-8049.

Convertibles: Open top cars are still needed to help transport veterans and others in the parade. Contact Tom Wigmore at 617-697-2276, if you are willing to drive your convertible on Monday.

Avalon one step closer

Selectmen sign off on additional 20 units

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Citing his concerns over the amount of children the 20 additional units could bring, Selectman Lee Jenkins voted against the motion.

The next stop for Avalon is the state Department of Housing and Community Development.

On Monday night, Selectmen approved the apartment complex developer's application to become a local initiative project, or LIP.

The application will now go before the DHCD for approval before a final agreement is signed with the town.

The 200-unit apartment complex received a comprehensive permit from the Zoning Board of Appeals over six years ago. The re-classification as a LIP, which basically means the project has the support of town officials, enables Avalon to self-fund the project. Under the comprehensive permit scenario, funding sources from the state, which have dried up due to the economy, are needed.

The change also proposed an addition of 20 units to the already approved 200-unit rental complex to be cited off Route 3A.

Monday night's discussion of the Avalon project was the culmination of several conversations held over the last few months with the developers.

In recent weeks, the town's affordable housing consultant, Judi Barrett, reviewed the LIP application. Town Counsel went through a review of the regulatory agreement with Avalon's counsel.

Selectman Lee Jenkins expressed concern over the amount of children the complex could bring to the district, a subject that was discussed extensively during the ZBA's comprehensive permit process.

Jenkins said he did some research into similar Avalon projects in Shrewsbury and Sharon. Both complexes had children in 30 percent of the units. If that percentage holds true for Avalon Cohasset the town could see an influx of 60 students, Jenkins said.

"The reputation of the school system and its special needs programs could possibly be a magnet (for families with children) and draw more than 30 percent,"

Jenkins asked what the benefit of the additional units could be for Cohasset given this potential impact.

Scott Dale, Avalon vice president and project manager for the Avalon Cohasset, said he understood that without the 20 additional units, Cohasset would be susceptible to another large 40-B project. Under Chapter 40-B, the state's affordable housing law, towns must have 10 percent of their housing stock deemed affordable according to state standards.

Towns under the 10 percent threshold are susceptible to larger housing projects because 40-B allows development under flexible rules, if 20 to 25 percent of the new housing is affordable. Because the state encourages rental units, all the units in the Avalon complex will count toward Cohasset's 10 percent.

"Absent the 20 (additional) units, someone could propose another 250 unit project," Dale said. With the additional 20 units, the town will likely meet its 10 percent affordable housing quota for the next 10 years.

Still, Jenkins was concerned the additional students would strap the budget – and the property tax revenue from the project would not cover the cost.

Selectmen approved the LIP application and the regulatory agreement contingent on ZBA's approval as well in a 4 to 1 vote. Citing his concerns over the amount of children the 20 additional units could bring, Jenkins voted against the motion.

If everything goes as planned, Dale said they hoped to have a building permit by the end of June and be breaking ground on the project in the late summer. The tentative schedule has occupancy by summer 2011 and 95 percent occupied by the date of completion in early 2012.

Selectmen want voter input on CPA

The town's involvement with the Community Preservation Act could be on the chopping block at an upcoming Town Meeting (in November or March 2011).

Following a discussion with the Community Preservation Committee last week, a consensus of the Board of Selectmen said they wanted to put the question of whether to keep the CPA and its associated tax around to the voters.

"I think it is good to give the public the opportunity to see if they want to continue with this," said Selectman Lee Jenkins. "I still believe the projects done with CPC over the last 9, 10 years have been very good."

Selectman Paul Carlson said it is important to review items like these from time to time and "let the chips fall."

Carlson also suggested the Selectmen take the lead in bringing the article forward to ensure the language is accurate. With a citizen's petition the language cannot be changed once submitted.

If the CPC were to be repealed, Community Preservation Committee Chairman Stuart Ivimey requested it be done following the fiscal year schedule to ensure already appropriated funds from fiscal 2011 for projects would get the funds they need to be completed.

If the CPA is sunset, the town still has an outstanding debt obligation for an open space purchased.

CMI boatbuilding program produces 'Swampscott dory'

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

What started over two months ago as a pile of white oak and white pine has been transformed into a striking, sturdy piece of American woodwork.

The first product of the Cohasset Maritime Institute's revived boatbuilding program is in the final stages of construction. Items left to do include interior detailing, like seats and floorboards, and painting.

The 16-foot Swampscott dory was built under the tutelage of shipwright and Cohasset native Richard Wilmore. His first students, Patrick Sherbrook and Paul Berube, have spent the last nine weeks measuring and cutting, nailing and shaping wood.

The culmination of the hard work and long hours was the "whiskey plank" ceremony — a long-standing tradition among shipwrights — last Wednesday afternoon (May 19). The term whiskey plank refers to the final plank to complete the boat's hull. It is the most difficult of them all to fit and to celebrate whiskey is passed around and a toast is offered to wish the boat well in its future travels.

The building of a Swampscott dory is not an easy task for beginner boatbuildingers, Wilmore said.

"It is somewhat sophisticated compared to a normal dory, but not overly complicated. But, you wouldn't want to start out building it on your own," he said.

The wooden boatbuilding class teaches the skills involved in building a boat from the ground up.

"The skills take awhile to learn, but you learn tricks that can apply to all fancy woodworking," Wilmore said, offering jointery (fitting of wood together), geometry, woodworking power tools and a lot of traditional woodworking hand tools as examples.

Wilmore brings a wealth of knowledge to the boathouse classroom. He spent the last 30 years in Washington working a shipwright and a boatbuilding teacher.

"Rich (Wilmore) has a very patient and easy-going teaching style, which makes learning feel like a joint project rather than class instruction. His accumulated years of boat building and wood working skills are evident, and he has shared this knowledge willingly," said boatbuilding student Patrick Sherbrook, adding he is looking forward to building his next boat.

"By building one boat you only get a taste of it," Wilmore said.

Wilmore said the skills learned in building a boat translate well to other woodworking pursuits. Boatbuilders are often called on when there are projects that call for shapelier and curved woodworking, "it is kind of a specialized thing."

While in Washington Wilmore was called on to build an encasement in a Morman chapel for an organ, which was an odd shape and size.

For Jack Buckley, president of CMI, the first product of the boatbuilding program at CMI has been a long time coming.

"To watch Richard Wilmore and his students transform the boat and boathouse was a beautiful sight," Buckley said. "It was just an idea at one point, now it's the real thing."

The incorporation of a boatbuilding program into CMI's activities is the realization of a long-standing desire for the club. When it was founded over 10 years ago, it was the one of the key aims of the organization to revive the boathouse and the legacy of boatbuilding on the shores of Cohasset.

"This is the first of many boats of many types to come out of this boathouse," Buckley said.

As interest grows in the program they hope to expand offerings to appeal to a variety of interests in the community. Smaller projects, restoration projects, women-only woodworking classes, weeklong programs along with building a boat from scratch intend to be offered (interest driven) in the coming month and years.

"The boatbuilding program is open to older teenagers and adults, really anyone who has an interest in boatbuilding," Buckley said. "This is an activity that is conducive to multi-age classes...all students really need is a willingness and desire to learn."

The nearly complete Swampscott dory will be on display and raffled off at the South Shore Arts Festival in June.

To start up the boat building program CMI has received support from the Cohasset Rotary, the Community Preservation funding (to renovate and insulate the boathouse) and the 1772 Foundation, a charitable organization that supports New England antiquities and traditions. A new boat building session and a new boat will begin in the last week of June.

For more information, visit www.rowcmi.com or call Jack Buckley for more information at 781-383- 0129.

Patrick Sherbrooke, left, toasts his teacher Richard Wilmore, right, after they nailed "the whiskey plank," the final plank of the hull, on to Swampscott dory. It is a tradition to drink a taste of whiskey after nailing in the last plank to prevent the ship from capsizing, or some other sea-faring disaster. Richard Wilmore will be teaching a summer course, "Learn to build a Swampscott dory" at CMI this summer.

WEEKEND

Hello Cohasset, it is Memorial Day Weekend, the "unofficial" start of summer and a weekend in which we honor and remember all those who fought for our country. Please make sure to take the time to remember all in some way as they gave so selfishly to keep our country safe. The Healing Field, which is so beautiful and moving to see, is happening for the next week and the flags are flying in front and across the street from the American Legion. Also, on Monday is the annual Memorial Day Parade. As always, while you are enjoying this weekend, remember to use a lot of sunscreen, enjoy all that you can including family and friends and stay safe!

RED CARPET

The 2010 Cohasset High School Senior Pre-Prom Gala gets underway at 5:30 p.m. today (Friday) and all are welcome to come. CHAMPS

Here is a wonderful story about a really cool event, a very proud dad and two sweet girls from Cohasset. A weekend was had to celebrate the Massachusetts Beach Buggy Association's annual Spring Meet at Scusset Beach. The MBBA is a group of fishermen dedicated to beach access, conservation and preservation and is celebrating its 60th anniversary this year. Jim Dow, as the President of the Massachusetts Striped Bass Association (the biggest and oldest saltwater fishing in the state), was presented a plaque from MBBA President Tom Gagnon to commemorate the 60th anniversary this year. Jim's daughter, Christina and her friend, Maggie Czajak, both in 7th grade at the Cohasset Middle School, received a number of awards in different events and Christina received the Junior Sportsman of the Year Award. Congratulations to all of you on your achievements, a great story to share indeed.

COMEDY NIGHT

A wonderful event was held recently at the American Legion here with all proceeds being donated to the American Legion Scholarship Fund, which benefits children not only in Cohasset but in surrounding towns as well. The "Comedy Night" was held on a Saturday evening and the event was a huge success with a lot of eating, laughing, music and drinks as well. Raffles were held and so many people worked hard to pull this together and each one of you personally as well as several surrounding towns are in this list. Nancy Buchanan and Joni Conte want to thank everyone for their dedication and hard work, organizational skills and help.

Maureen Harrold, Jay Fiori and of course, Joni and Nancy you all out did yourselves. Tommy Dunham and Christine Hurley were hysterical and kept the room laughing all night long. The following is a list of people and businesses who made a donation and are sent a huge thank you: JJ's Dairy Hut and Junction, Mary Laugelle Snow, A Gift Basket, Lillian Murray Curley, A gift basket, Adrian Morris Salon, Talbots, Darilynn's Gift Shop, Wendy's Closet, Atlantic Bagel, The Red Lion Inn, Jamies Pub, DiNeros, South Shore Community Center, Wilburs North Ice Cream, Wilder Brothers, Fiori's Gulf Station, The Mill Wharf, TK O'Malleys, Ports and The Satuit Grill.

We Auto Know
by Gene Smith and Jay Gorman
BAD VIBES!
When drivers discern vibrating noises in their vehicles, the source can be difficult to trace since the automobile has rotating parts from front to back and vibrations can travel the length of the vehicle. One of the potential sources of this irritating problem rests with the engine mounts that are designed to isolate engine vibrations from the automobile frame. The mounts usually consist of rubber sandwiched between metal plates with studs that are bolted to the engine and the frame of the vehicle. Upon close inspection, it may be revealed that cracks or separation in the mount have led to failure of this component. Once the integrity of the engine mount has been compromised, replacement is necessary.
A cracked engine mount is just one of the possible causes for a badly vibrating car. At ATLANTIC TIRE AND ALIGNMENT, Our ASE certified technicians will take the time to listen to you and to your car. Then we'll perform a bumper-to-bumper check to find the source of the problem – whatever that may be – and fix it so that you can get back on the road quickly and safely. We can also provide the regular maintenance that will prevent things like a cracked engine count in the first place. Call 781-925-3200 for an appointment today. Our address is 25 Atlantic House Rd. If you've gotten in an accident, be sure to check out our sister store, Cohasset Collision Center, 179 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy., Cohasset, 781-383-3001.
Hint: Drivers should avoid the habit of looking over their shoulders to gauge the safety of a lane-changing maneuver.

Historical Society displays dresses from proms of the past

The Historical Society's "Prom Time" exhibit opened last week and will remain on display throughout the summer.

"I thought the exhibit would be timely and fun…and it mushroomed a bit," said Historical Society director Lynne DeGiacomo. Once the call went out for prom dresses with a Cohasset connection the society received several dresses that for years (and in some cases, decades) had been stored in people's closets.

The Historical Society's prom dress collection began with a light pink chiffon strapless dress worn by Suellen Orr to the Cohasset High 1959 prom. The dress has a beaded empire waist with a gathered top.

"That dress was the inspiration," DeGiacomo said. Five more dresses were donated and several more have been lent to the society for the exhibit.

"We know who wore them and they all have a connection to Cohasset," DeGiacomo said. All but one was worn to a Cohasset High prom.

Marsha Ford, now a Cohasset resident, who later married her prom date, Richard Silvia, wore her a sunny yellow dress with a lace overlay top in 1961.

The exhibit was put together in a joint effort with DeGiacomo, Martha Hurtig, the society's chair of the textile department, and Martha Fisher, who is working at the society on a grant.

Each one of the curators has their favorite dress, or style of dress.

DeGiacomo is drawn to the very full skirted, traditional dress, "the ones that make you feel like the belle of the ball."

Her favorites list includes a dress with a full yellow skirt and an extensively beaded flower top worn to the Cohasset High prom in 2006.

"It just looks like it would be fun to wear," DeGiacomo said.

Hurtig comes at the exhibit from two points of view. She adores the simplicity of the 1961 sunny yellow dress with the lace overlay top, "it was a style very popular in my era and it was clothing I would have worn."

In 1961 Ann Chatterton wore this light pink strapless dress with chiffon to prom. Many visitors have named it as one of their favorites of the exhibit.

But, she, too, is drawn to a more princess-style dress with the "poofy" skirt.

Fisher's favorite is a sky blue brocade taffeta dress, worn by Becky Bates in 1964, for its timeless quality, "it is simple and just classic," she said of the homemade dress.

Many visitors have been drawn to a deep pink dress worn to the 1985 prom with poofy half-sleeves and a sweetheart neckline with lace detailing and a tie at the waist.

What is telling is how little the dresses have changed over the past 60 years. Many of them are strapless gowns with a simple A-line silhouette.

"It's amazing how much they haven't changed," Hurtig said.

The evolution is noted in a dress worn by Carrie Muir to the 2006 CHS prom: a halter style dress in an olive color with flowing skirt embellished at the waist and neck with gold beading.

"I am glad we got the two dresses from the 2000s to show how the style has evolved," said Hurtig. The other dress worn in 2007 by Meredyth Evans is more traditional with a beaded top and full skirt.

To add interest to the dresses is the owner's yearbook entry. Visitors are welcome to flip through the yearbooks to get a glimpse of the past, and perhaps see some familiar faces.

"It really puts a personal touch on it," Hurtig said..

The curators of the exhibit tried to think of every detail, even setting all the clocks in the room to midnight, when proms traditionally end.

According to research done by the society, prom as we know it today did not begin until the early 50s. The tradition started as "tea dancing" in the early 1900s. An afternoon tea with music and dancing was held where students wore their Sunday best. In the 20s and 30s, the tradition expanded an annual banquet with dancing. Party clothes were worn.

As Americans had more money and leisure time the prom event got more elaborate, they found in their research. The earliest dress in the society's possession is from 1959.

The Historical Society's Paul Pratt Building will be open from 7 to 8p.m. tonight (Friday) for parents and families to come check out the dresses of proms past after the red carpet pre-prom gala event on the Common.

Check your personal archives

The Cohasset Historical Society is looking for specific contributions to their already extensive textile collection. They are still in want of donations of prom dresses from the 1970s, 1990s and the 2000s (the two gowns worn in 2006 and 2007 are only on loan to the society).

The society is also missing several yearbooks. The "Tessahoc" (the name of the yearbook, which is Cohasset spelled backwards,) is needed from the following years to complete the collection: 1991, 2002, 2005, and 2008.

Lisa Ward wore this handmade dress in 1985.

These three dresses are grouped together because they share one thing in common – lace. From left, the lilac dress was worn by Rachel Bates in 1966, the yellow dress with lace overlay top was worn by Marsha Ford in 1961, and the peach dress with the striking rear bow was worn by Leanne Ward in 1987.

Carrie Muir, CHS Class of 2006, wore this olive green with gold beading dress to prom. It is the only halter style dress in the Prom Time exhibit.

Recent grad Meredyth Evans, a member of the class of 2007, wore this intricately beaded dress to prom as a senior.

Gulf has a rich history

The season of summer will be celebrated on June 23, with a fundraiser for the Cohasset Historical Society's Gardens of the Gulf: Shall we Gather at the River?

The large tidal estuary to the south of Cohasset Harbor is familiarly called the Gulf.

Long ago Aborigines hunted and fished along its shores. More recently the Gulf was the site of saw and grist mills, a tannery and a place to harvest salt hay. In every season, the Gulf is a beautiful place and while skate-sailing and ice boating continue to be winter activities on the Gulf River, summer promises its own unique array of activities.

Lobster roll and strawberry shortcake tradition continues

The sale is held during the South Shore Art Festival on Father's Day Weekend, June 18, 19 and 20.

Lobster Lovers — it's time again for the lobster rolls at First Parish Church on Cohasset Common. The sale is held during the South Shore Art Festival on Father's Day Weekend, June 18, 19 and 20. First Parish has been offering these lobster rolls since Lucia Woods of Cohasset began the fundraiser in 2003. Nearly 1,200 rolls were sold last year.

Today Penny and Art Myles of Hingham continue Lucia's tradition as co-chairs by bringing together more than 60 volunteers for the success of this project. As Lucia always says, "Make it the perfect summer eating experience with a lobster roll from First Parish and a strawberry shortcake from across the common at the Second Congregational Church."

Order early and consider treating your office staff to a special toast-to-summer meal on Friday. Or celebrate Father's Day by bringing rolls home for friends and family on Sunday. Walk-ins are welcome as long as supplies last.

The sale is extended this year into Sunday afternoon by popular demand. The all-meat lobster rolls with a bag of Cape Cod potato chips are offered for $13. Preorders are recommended and may be placed by calling Penny Myles at 781-749-1989 or the church at 781-383-1100. Or mail your order to the Parish House, 23 No. Main St., Cohasset, MA 02025 with your check made out to "First Parish Cohasset." Preorders must be placed by 6 p.m. on Thursday, June 17.

Orders may be picked up at the Parish House, 23 No. Main Street, Cohasset:

Friday: 11 a.m. to 7 p.m.
Saturday: 11 a.m. to 7 p.m.
Sunday: 11 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Sharing a bright future, common bond

NDA Class of 2010 hails from 28 communities

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Long white gowns, gold-medallion necklaces, yellow roses, green lawn, and a brilliant sky overhead.

Even the moon made an early evening appearance during this year's Notre Dame Academy graduation.

The 157th graduating class from the Catholic girls high school in Hingham could not have planned it any better.

It is hard to recall a greener athletic field or an evening more perfect weather-wise, as the 142 graduates and their families and friends gathered at 5 p.m. last Friday (May 21) for the NDA commencement.

North Weymouth's Emily Kent, who was chosen via an anonymous essay contest to be the student graduation speaker this year, used Disney movies as a metaphor for life.

"To those who aren't ready to move on, I say 'Hakuna Matata.' Everything will work out, you've been given a great education, your are prepared, you don't have to worry about the future – just live it,'" Kent told her classmates.

While Kent noted that each classmate is unique in her own way – they will always share the common bond of being an NDA graduate "ready to face the world with faith, character and scholarship."

She cleverly wove the five most relevant animated Disney movies of their collective childhood into her address and the lessons learned from those simple stories, including the Lion King, Hercules, Pocahontas, Aladdin, and Toy Story.

"Though we find life lessons in every Disney movie we know, I think the most precious message we can take with us into the rest of our lives is that we will always have a friend, no matter where we go or what we do," Kent said drawing on the friendship between an astronaut and a cowboy in Toy Story.

"We may grow up and grow apart, but we will always have that connection of four years in the same school, living through the same moments," she said. "No matter what we do with our lives – how time passes, how hard we push ourselves, what people we meet, or where in the world we go – we will always have someone, we will always have a friend."

"We may grow up and grow apart, but we will always have that connection of four years in the same school, living through the same moments."
— Emily Kent, student speaker

Mary Carroll Sullivan, an NDA alumna and keynote speaker, who talked about the challenges the graduates will face in a polarized world, left them with a special wish. Sullivan, who is a member of the class of 1968, is a nurse-bioethicist-attorney.

"As you leave this ceremony, you will, in every sense, start your march to a life where you increasingly make your own decisions and where those choices increasingly impact lives behind your own," Sullivan said.

"My hope for you is that you can look back on a life of decisions that are consistent with all that you have learned and have learned to value from your families, your faith and from Notre Dame."

Notre Dame Academy is a Catholic, college preparatory high school for young women founded by the Sisters of Notre Dame de Namur in 1853.

Cohasset NDA graduates include: Katherine Baker, Kelly Voke, Erin Fontaine, Sydney Fortin, Meaghan Leong, Rebecca Dickinson, Kathryn Hillman, Courtney Culhane and Gabrielle Rodman.

Register now for tennis benefit

The annual Cohasset Tennis Benefit for Children's Hospital Boston is now open for summer 2010 registration. The tournament is scheduled for the weekend of July 23, 24 and 25.

The two-day tournament begins with an evening reception at the Lightkeeper's Residence on Cohasset Harbor on Friday, July 23, followed by mixed-doubles tennis played on private courts throughout Cohasset on Saturday and Sunday, July 24 and 25. Teams of all levels and abilities are invited to play and are matched with comparable players.

This year the tournament will benefit the Children's Hospital Pediatric Multiple Sclerosis program that helps children and teens afflicted with MS. The program is also a leading center for pioneering MS medical research.

The Cohasset Tennis Benefit is a tradition that began in the 1950s when the legendary Jesse Cox gathered family and friends for a weekend of tennis to benefit Children's Hospital Boston.

Tennis registration is taken on a first-come first-served basis and is $200 per team before June 15 and $250 after that date. For more information about the weekend or to register, visit www.cohassettennisbenefit.org.

WINDOW REPLACEMENT

After 22 years in a Florida swamp, our window is as good as new.

To ensure the durability of our patented Fibrex® material window, we've kept the same window frame submerged in a Florida swamp since 1988. To this day, our testing engineers inspect it every year, and there has been absolutely no change. Our other weather-testing sites in sub-zero Minnesota and the Arizona desert have yielded the same result: after 22 years in the worst conditions, the very same Fibrex® material has remained unchanged.

Why do we perform this crazy weather-testing? To build the best replacement window, that's why. Our practically indestructible Fibrex® frame keeps our glass from shifting and our insulating seals intact, even during drastic temperature changes. This is how we maximize your home's energy-efficiency, season after season, year after year.

- With the $1,500 Federal Energy Tax Credit ending this year, don't get the tax credit "run-around" from another company whose windows don't qualify.
- Our windows have glass that's up to 70% more energy efficient, saving you substantial money on energy costs.†
- 96.2% of our installations have begun and ended on time.
- Every installation finishes with a thorough cleaning with a EPA-compliant HEPA vacuum cleaner, removing debris as small as one micron from your home.
- Renewal by Andersen is the exclusive start-to-finish window replacement subsidiary of Andersen—the most recognized name in windows.

Fibrex® material is 2X as rigid and stable as vinyl

Memorial Day tradition

A few decades ago, there was a newspaper cartoon showing a pair of World War II veterans shaking their heads about public dissension over the war of the day. In 1941, there had been no doubt why American soldiers headed to battlefields across the ocean, no question about what they were to die for.

"We knew we were fighting for baseball and Mom's apple pie," one veteran told his buddy.

This was gentle humor, for obviously the stakes over there were astronomically higher than a ballgame and pastry.

Yet there was also a gentle truth.

What is more symbolic of the American way of life than baseball: the joy of cheering in the stands on a summer night, the ability of the American spirit to see the game through, to rejoice in a win and to deal with a loss by looking to the next contest?

What is more American than the family gathering around the kitchen table, sniffing the mouth-watering aroma of Mom's apple pie baking in the oven?

In World War II, Americans knew what they were fighting for.

Over the span of centuries since 13 colonies grew to be the United States, from Bunker Hill to Verdun to Normandy to Pork Chop Hill to DaNang to Baghdad to now, from all the killing fields between those points, sometimes the vision has been clearer than others.

Yet in each venue, our armed forces have risen to the challenge, conducting themselves with gallantry that put country and freedom above their own lives.

One young Marine has this biblical phrase tattooed on his upper arm:

"This too shall pass."

In the Afghanistan war zone, the words remind him that this battle will end.

For some of our soldiers, the day did not pass. The sun went down on them.

Over the years, during times when the vision shone as clean and pure as the North Star, and during times when the light was obscured, our military men and women have valiantly risen to the challenge and fulfilled their duty, going above and beyond what was asked of them.

Memorial Day honors all deceased members of our military.

For those who died long ago, a small flag flutters in front of a slate marker, and those who mourned have long since joined their loved one.

For those who were recently lost, Memorial Day is seen through a sheen of tears.

At 11:45 a.m., on Monday, the Cohasset parade will arrive at Veterans Memorial Park. Guest speaker is Secretary of Veteran Affairs and Medal of Honor winner Thomas Kelley.

Our Memorial Day service, music, and speeches are for the living.

The tears and reverent prayers, the eternal thanks when there can never be gratitude great enough to match the sacrifices made and the hardships endured, are for our veterans now at eternal peace.

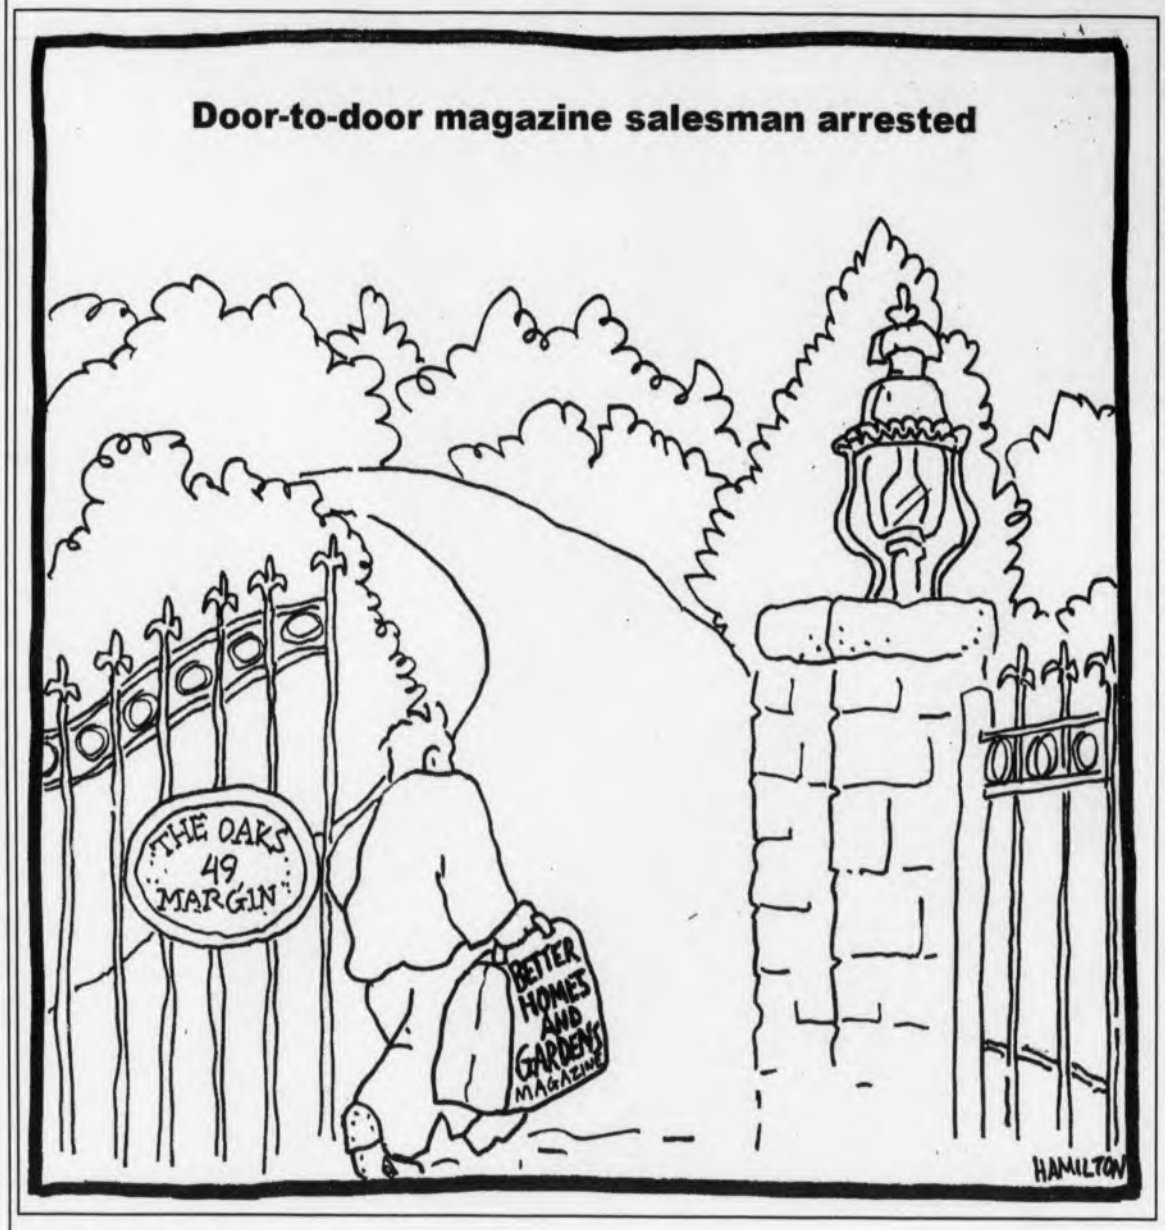
Our veterans deserve a 21-gun salute.

They deserve parades and praise and remembrance.

They knew what they were fighting for.

They fought for a way of life.

They fought for their families.



They fought for us.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

CEF extends an 'enormous thank you'

TO THE EDITOR:

The Cohasset Education Foundation would like to extend an enormous thank you to everyone who helped make this year's annual spring fundraiser another fantastic and fruitful event. Saturday's Tent Event II attracted close to 350 people to celebrate Cohasset's schools and continue the CEF's mission to provide long-term educational support in ways not covered in the town's budget.

Next month, the CEF will publish an ad thanking the many donors who helped this year such a success. In connection with the Tent Event II, special thanks go out to:

The legions of volunteers who spent hours collecting auction items, soliciting advertisers, baking desserts, setting up and cleaning up tent and working the night of the event. Particular thanks to Heather Peracchi and Donna Sanderson who have organized the 50+ volunteers for the day's festivities each of the past three years. Thanks also to Kate Linhart for spectacular management of the auction, Pam Turpel for decorating the tent to perfection, Tanya Carr for incredible cookie table-toppers, and Sue Hess for coordinating fabulous bakers for the night's desserts.

The businesses, teachers and individuals who advertised in the auction book and generously contributed over 150 auction items in a wide array of categories.

The South Shore Music Circus, Vince Longo and Scott Niski for allowing us to use their facilities and providing invaluable advice and support in planning and carrying out the evening.

David Burke and Millenium Printing and to Mary McGoldrick for their help producing the auction book and marketing materials, and to Goodwin Graphics and Ronnie Goodwin for designing this year's logo.

A Taste for Wine and Spirits in the Stop & Shop Plaza, the Boston Beer Company and Burke Distributing for their incredible generosity.

The Police Association and Cohasset Fire-Rescue, and especially Chris Peracchi and Rick Adley, for working with us to make the night successful.

The CEF was thrilled to see both its core of staunch supporters and a host of new faces in the crowd. With the support provided by all of you, the CEF raised enough funds to make a significant difference for our kids, our town and our future. Thank you!

More fully engaging the community

COMMENTARY

DIANE BENSON

A copy of this letter was provided to the Cohasset Mariner.

Open letter to: Dr. Helene Lieb, Chair; Dr. Alfred Slanetz, Vice Chair; and Members of the Cohasset School Committee

My husband and I have been residents of Cohasset since 1986. We have two sons attending Cohasset Middle School and I have been a volunteer in town and in the schools and PSO since our oldest son started kindergarten at Osgood. I have tried to attend School Committee meetings or at least to watch the video feed as often as possible. I give this background as a basis for stating my sincere feeling that the recent change in School Committee composition was a clear indication that parents and the community want their respective voices heard and input acknowledged. Going forward from this point, the School Committee now has a rare opportunity to more fully engage the community for the benefit of improving our schools.

In recent weeks I have been encouraged by the open, inclusive and respectful manner in which the meetings are now run. The recent decision by Superintendent Walsh to not seek renewal of her contract was perhaps a first step towards the change some concerned parents were working towards. The next step we take is an important one. To protect the interests of the community, the schools, students and our teachers, I respectfully recommend from this point forward and through the remainder of the Superintendent's term, that all future binding contracts, agreements, administrative salary increases or adjustments and personnel contracts, including hiring, terminations and extensions typically under the Superintendent's sole purview should not be enacted without the express and formal approval of the School Committee. As Dr. Walsh stated in The Mariner last week "I have concluded that it is time to move on." And so should we, by first ensuring that the only commitments made on behalf of Cohasset Public Schools are ones that the School Committee and the community favor. These actions I suggest are not punitive, but standard business practice in the private sector and in the best interest of everyone. Further, I would urge the School Committee to earnestly move towards forming a search committee for a new superintendent. We should also be prepared to name an acting or interim superintendent if the need arises.

One of Superintendent Walsh's initiatives last year at the High School was the elimination of "Department Heads" in favor of the "Program Supervisor" model for Humanities, Fine Arts and S.T.E.M (Science, Technology, Engineering, Math). I believe this was originally put forth as a money-saving restructuring, but many believe this model has been a failure, and its impact on the quality of teaching, communication among school staff, and overall morale has been detrimental. Returning autonomy to the departments, while building a model of collaboration between them, would likely bring a much more favorable result.

Notwithstanding my comments, I feel optimistic about the future of our schools and very proud of our students and faculty who strive to achieve and maintain our high standards. I believe my point of view is representative of many others in the community. Our school district is the envy of many and it holds the promise to be a greater model for others going forward. I am counting on the continued professionalism and commitment of our School Committee members to protect the interests of the town by promptly taking the legal steps necessary to implement the safeguards outlined above.

'One stop shopping' for paving project

MAKING TRACKS

Soon-to-be-gone rough section of Beach Street.

Beach Street Paving Ready to Go — We have written a few times about the delay in 2010 Little Harbor Project paving. The delay was due principally to the bidding and selection of a contractor for cold planing. The first bid was flawed, so the contract was rebid, with the subsequent loss of about three weeks in our schedule. The new bid results were recently announced by The South Shore Regional Services Consortium (SSRSC). The winning contractor was T. L. Edwards, of Avon. The choice of this contractor makes our paving a much easier process that it otherwise might have been. The reason is that Edwards also has the paving contract along with the cold planing. So, to do the initial road grinding and structure adjustment as well as paving we have "one stop shopping." If we had to use two different contractors, one for grinding and one for paving, the coordination between the two contractors would have been much more difficult and would have substantially increased the total time for the total paving job to be completed.

So, what is the schedule for Beach Street paving? First, our goal is to have the paving operation completed before the Cohasset Triathlon on Sunday, June 27th. Right now there are two projects underway on Beach Street that impact when we can start our paving operation. There is a major blasting operation in process for the construction of a new home on Beach Street. When the blasting in the area directly adjacent to the road has been completed, the gas company will install a new gas service in the road to serve that new home. As you might imagine, it is not good to be blasting too close to gas work, so the blasting near the road must be completed before the gas main can be installed. We also want the gas company to do their in-the-road digging before paving rather than after. In fact, after a road is newly paved there is a prohibition from cutting into the road for the duration of the paving warranty period, unless there is an emergency situation. So, there would be a multiple year delay before gas could be delivered to that home, if we waited until after paving. According to the various contractors involved in this home construction they will be finished with all in the roadwork by Friday, June 11th.

The Beach Street paving schedule calls for cold planing early in the week of June 14th, followed by the structure adjustments and any necessary road patching later in that week. We may need to do patching since we expect that we may find areas where the road has deteriorated so much that the grinding operation will totally remove the weak paving in some areas, leaving only bare soil. In this case, the area will be dug out a bit, and a new base coat of asphalt will be laid level with the newly ground surrounding roadway. By doing this, the new paving will have a good base. If this were not done, there would be thin spots in the new asphalt that just wouldn't hold up over time.

The following week, the week of June 21st, the road will be given a leveling coat of asphalt, followed by a new topcoat. If you look carefully at Beach Street, you can see that the road is not well shaped to encourage drainage. The road has numerous small dips and surface irregularities. The leveling course of paving is used to roughly reshape the road prior to receiving its topcoat of asphalt. So, if all goes according to plan Beach Street should have bright shiny new paving by the Cohasset Triathlon weekend. Like always, bad weather can mess up the most carefully developed schedule. When Beach Street is paved there are several side roads that were already base coated last year. These roads will receive their topcoat while the main portion of Beach Street is being paved.

The next Little Harbor Project paving will occur on Jerusalem Road. We'll keep you apprised as the schedule firms up. Also, keep in mind that the DPW will also be paving Sohier Street, from Fair Oaks to North Main Street, as well as sections of Pond and Beechwood streets that must be done during School vacation. So, the schedule for these other Town streets must be interwoven with the Little Harbor Project paving.

Ellms Meadow Well Field — Several years ago, the Cohasset Water Department re-established an old well field in the Elms Meadow area. (Ellms Meadow is named in honor of a Cohasset merchant, Mr. Ellms.) If you are not familiar with Ellms Meadow, it is the area between Cushing Road and the Greenbush tracks, bounded on by James Lane on one end and the dead end portion of Spring Street on the other end. Ellms Meadow well field includes the winter skating pond and the wooded area toward James Lane. The Ellms meadow well field is used to supplement our water supply and to provide an emergency backup water supply should anything catastrophic happen to the Lily Pond supply.

As you might imagine, the Ellms Meadow area is a protected water resource area. This means that we townspeople need to be particularly careful to protect the area. Yet, if you walk along Cushing Road sometime you will see where people have thrown debris into the wooded area. Let's all keep in mind that this feeds our drinking water supply and we should be very careful how we treat this resource.

Cell Service Quality in Cohasset — We have just learned that cellular phone service in parts of Cohasset may improve substantially in the near future. AT&T has just applied for a building permit to begin constructing the ground-based support apparatus for a cell antenna that will be added to the Bear Hill water tank. It is rumored that Verizon may not be far behind. Looks like cell service in the center of the Village may get a lot better.

Moody's chief of the boat

CALLING ALL VETERANS

RONALD WHEATLEY

COURTESY PHOTO

One of the submarines Frank Moody of Cohasset served aboard.

"There's a sea up there called Okhotsk where the Russians have some of their main submarine bases and now their missile bases," Frank Moody of Cohasset said as he recalled in a soft Kentucky accent some of his real time "Hunt for Red October" moments as a crewman in 1959 on the diesel submarine USS Spinax.

It was another bright sunny day as the submerged submarine continued photographing Russian ship maneuvers while listening to their constant communications.

"That was when we heard the Russian sonar pings growing louder and closing in, alerting us to the start of a dangerous game of hide and seek. Several hours passed before we escaped the constant sonar pinging and threatening depth charges from the Russian destroyers. After accessing the damage, the captain made the decision to return to Yokosuka, Japan for repairs," Moody said.

The story was never reported in any newspaper. Moody would have even closer — then super-secret — hazardous underwater encounters later in his career.

A Paducah, Ky., native, Moody joined the Navy in 1958 while studying engineering at the University of Kentucky. During extensive testing for submarines, he was selected for communications, submarine school and then one year of nuclear power training prior to reporting to a nuclear submarine.

"While waiting for my class to convene for nuclear engineering school, I was assigned to the diesel submarine USS Spinax. During the tour of duty on the Spinax, we were deployed for six months with the Seventh Fleet in the western Pacific, which included a patrol off the coast of Russia," he said.

In 1960, Moody entered nuclear power school in Vallejo, Calif., for six months of theory and then on to Pocatello, Idaho, for six months of training on a nuclear reactor. From there, he was assigned to the USS Swordfish, one of America's first fast-attack nuclear submarines that operated out of Pearl Harbor.

"I was responsible for all the communications inside the submarine, everything from control to emergency communications systems. My tour on the Swordfish lasted from 1961 to 1963," Moody said.

During a seventh-month deployment with the Seventh Fleet, the Swordfish made two intelligence-gathering patrols.

"At some point on one of the intelligence gathering missions of a Russian military operation, we were detected," he said.

This incident was reported almost a quarter-century later in the Chicago Tribune of Monday, Jan. 7, 1991: "The USS Swordfish submerged and was sneaking around a Soviet naval exercise in the Northwestern Pacific an area the Soviets consider their back yard . . . a Soviet vessel had spotted light glinting off the Swordfish's periscope. The Swordfish dived for cover and a number of Soviet ships spent the better part of two days dropping depth charges here and there as they pursued it off the Kamchatka Peninsula in 1963."

According to Moody, the two-day cat-and-mouse game yielded valuable information through the Swordfish's extensive monitoring of the Soviets' capabilities.

"During the depth charge attacks, they were close enough to shake the boat," he said.

A later assignment took Moody back to Pocatello as the senior instructor.

"I taught the nuclear controls and electrical systems to qualify sailors on nuclear subs," he said. "They had a prototype at the site in the middle of the desert that was the same as the ones on the nuclear subs. Adm. Hyman Rickover appeared in my class one day and stayed for about 15 minutes. Later that day, the admiral requested my presence."

Aware of Rickover's reputation as the father of the nuclear Navy and his penchant for critical and sometimes career-ending interviews, Moody thought it was over as he stood at attention.

"Rickover said, 'You did an excellent job. Keep it up; we need more like you,'" he said.

After three years of teaching submarine students in Idaho, Moody was assigned to the USS Whale.

"It was a state-of-the-art fast-attack submarine designed for intelligence-gathering," he said.

After six months on the Whale, he was "transferred to the USS Darter to address operational issues that plagued the sub during a military training exercise."

From the Darter, he was assigned to a yearlong series of specialty schools that included communications, surveillance and video systems, and was promoted to master chief (E9). At the completion of the extensive school, Moody was assigned to the USS Bancroft, a missile submarine operating out of Rota, Spain, with a home base at Charleston, SC.

Upon completion of Bancroft's qualifications, Moody was selected as the chief of the boat (COB) and reported to the executive officer. As COB, he was responsible for the 115 enlisted crewmembers, their watch assignments, their emergency assignments and the material condition of the sub. The Bancroft carried 16 fleet ballistic multiple re-entry vehicle missiles.

Moody spent his last tour at Great Lakes at the request of his commanding officer from the Bancroft who preceded him there.

"My assignment was to address training and maintenance concerns with the gas turbine propulsion systems being designed for a new class of Naval frigates," he said.

Working with the admirals responsible for the propulsion systems and the GE gas turbine division, Moody served in a critical liaison capacity, traveling between headquarters at Great Lakes and Washington D.C. His efforts resulted in modification of the frigates' monitoring systems and an increase in the crew training from five weeks to six months. For this three-year effort, Moody received the Navy Commendation Medal.

After his Navy career, Moody joined ITT to work with six European divisions on improving software programming worldwide. From there, he went into sales and marketing corporate enterprise technology systems.

"As an avid fly fisherman and fly tier, I always found room on a sub to carry a fly rod with a fly tying kit to tie flies while under way," he said. "Stalking trout on small streams was my passion for 45 years, but since moving to Cohasset, the pursuit of various saltwater fish has replaced the trout. Also since retirement, painting with water colors has developed into the same passion as my fly fishing."

Moody and his wife, Annjean, retired in 2003 and made their home in Cohasset. They have four children and five grandchildren living in California, Colorado, New York, and Hilton Head, S.C.

HEALTH NOTES

Progress made on worker safety

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

It's nearly Memorial Day. Time to commemorate our fallen. But perhaps, all our fallen. Sometimes called Decoration Day, May 27 nominally commemorates U.S. men and women who died while in the military service. First enacted to honor Union soldiers of the American Civil War it was celebrated near the day of reunification after the Civil War, and was expanded after World War I.

The alternative name of Memorial Day was first used in 1882. It did not become more common until after World War II, and was not declared the official name by Federal law until 1967.

After some initial confusion and unwillingness to comply, all 50 states adopted the measure within a few years. In 1978, Veterans Day was changed back to its traditional date on Nov. 11. Most corporate businesses no longer close on Veterans Day, Columbus Day or President's Day, with the day after Thanksgiving, Christmas Eve, or New Year's Eve often substituted as more convenient "holidays" for their employees. Memorial Day endures as a holiday, which most businesses observe because it marks the beginning of the summer vacation season. This role is filled in neighboring Canada by Victoria Day, which occurs either on May 24 or the last Monday before that date, placing it exactly one week before Memorial Day in the lower 48.

In addition to national observances, many individual communities hold memorial observance for fallen soldiers who were from that town by having a ceremony in a church or town memorial park. It is common for fire and police departments to remember and honor members lost in the line of duty. Cohasset holds a Memorial Day parade in honor of such residents. Participation in such a parade is by community organizations including members of local emergency services and their vehicles, Rotary Clubs, Boy Scouts of America, Girl Scouts, bands from the local high school or church groups, veterans associations, and high school JROTC or college ROTC programs.

Workers Memorial Day, April 28, was established to recognize workers who died or were injured on the job. It also encourages us to think of ways in which we all can help to achieve the goal of safer and healthier workplaces. Workers Memorial Day 2010 also will commemorate the 39th anniversary of the National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health in the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services and the Occupational Safety and Health Administration in the U.S. Department of Labor. (Thus NIOSH)

While much progress has been made in preventing work-related injuries, illnesses, and deaths since NIOSH and OSHA were created in 1971, more remains to be done. On average, 16 workers in the United States die each day from injuries sustained at work and 134 are estimated to die from work-related diseases. Daily, an estimated 11,200 private-sector workers have a nonfatal work-related injury or illness and, as a result, more than half require a job transfer, work restrictions or time away from their jobs. An estimated 9,000 workers are treated in emergency departments each day because of occupational injuries and approximately 200 of these workers are hospitalized. In 2005, workers' compensation costs for employers totaled an estimated $89 billion. The occasion of Workers Memorial Day encourages us to think of ways in which we all can help to achieve the goal of safer and healthier workplaces.

NIOSH sponsored studies have revealed between 1992 and 2001, 542 fatalities associated with trenching and excavation; carbon monoxide poisonings (CO) from open air exposures to operating motorboats, etc. Protective measures were recommended. According to NIOSH, persons in communities with lakes and rivers where boats congregate in large numbers should be aware of the dangers of open air boat-related CO poisoning. Manufacturers should improve emission controls to reduce consumer CO exposure. The risk for boat-related CO poisonings should be reduced by considering measures such as limiting the number of boats in certain areas; enforcing a "no idle" policy when boats are stationary; and warning vacationers of the signs and symptoms of CO poisoning and the hazards related to occupying the back of the boat any time the motor is running and the risk for CO poisoning in areas of boat congestion, especially during calm weather conditions.

NIOSH is also concerned about work-related cropduster pilot fatalities in agriculture.

Here Comes The Sun – Answers to burning questions about overexposure. Practicing sun safety can prevent skin cancer and other health problems. Following these tips will help everyone enjoy the summer months. Limit sun exposure when the sun's rays are the strongest—10a.m. to 4 p.m. If your shadow is shorter than you are, the sun is at its most intense. Refer to the daily UV index when planning outdoor events. The index indicates the risk of overexposure to skin-damaging ultraviolet radiation. Seek shade whenever possible. Trees block about 60 percent of the sun's rays. Wear a wide-brimmed hat, sunglasses and long-sleeved, tightly woven clothing. Sunglasses should block out 100 percent of UVA and UVB radiation. Use sunscreens that block UVA and UVB rays and have a Sun Protective Factor (SPF) of at least of at least 15. Sunscreens should be used every day, even when hazy and cloudy outside. Apply sunscreen liberally and evenly 15 minutes before going out and reapply frequently, especially after swimming.

Finishing up Older Americans Month

SENIOR SCENE

LOUISE MULLEN

It has been great to see so many at the Monday morning coffee hour. It is so relaxing to sit and enjoy a good mug of coffee while talking up a storm with old friends and new acquaintances. If you have not yet done so, why not drop in and perhaps bring someone with you. However, there will be no coffee on Memorial Day, May 31.

It has been a busy month for elders. On one Wednesday Laurie Mahoney of the Norwell VNA spoke about nutrition and diet, exercise, and keeping active. May is Older Americans Month, and Selectwoman, Karen Quigley, read a proclamation from the Town in recognition of this. She was accompanied by Town Manager, William Griffin. They both spoke of older role models in their growing-up years. Mr. Griffin said that his grandparents' home was always a safe refuge for kids. Ms. Quigley quoted a favorite great aunt, who said, "Never try to fit into a mold unless you are Jell-O." The attendees were invited to speak about role models in their lives.

At another seminar Judith Flynn, an elder-law attorney, presented a program on protecting our assets. Among other things, she explained estate documents, living wills, and guardianship.

Last week John Miller, founder of Home Care Services, spoke about aging in place and Veterans' Aid. He informed the audience about the many services his company provides for those still living in their own homes, such as housecleaning, doing laundry, meal preparation, and more.

The Senior Center at Massasoit College in Brockton presented its annual spring concert this month. They have a large choral group and orchestra. Two members of the choral group hail from Cohasset, Betty Marie and Joan Trask. A group from our town was driven in the senior van to hear the concert.

The Golden Living Center also entertained this month. Elders from the area were invited to tea and a delightful musical program performed by a young man and woman who sang show tunes, dressed in appropriate costumes.

Daffodils, tulips, forsythia, and lilacs have all made their fleeting appearances. Now we are enjoying rhododendrons, lilies of the valley, and beautiful iris blooms. We wait so long for them to blossom, and it seems like they come and go in the blink of an eye. Last week I watched a mother duck leading a large family of little ducklings across North Main Street. The little ones marched in perfect order behind their Mom. I think that perhaps they were on their way to Sanctuary Pond for their first swimming lesson.

Cohasset to hold blood drive June 4

The American Red Cross hopes the residents of Cohasset will take some time out of their busy lives to give the Gift of Life. A Red Cross Blood Drive will be held on Friday, June 4, at St. Anthony's Parish Hall, 10 Summer St., between the hours of 1:30 and 6:30 p.m. Childcare is available while you donate between 3 to 5 p.m. At this time, donations of all blood types are needed to meet the needs of patients in local hospitals as well as those throughout New England.

In order to give blood, potential donors must be at least 16 years of age, weigh at least 110 pounds and be in good health. Most medications and medical conditions do not prohibit a person from being a blood donor. Donors can give blood safely every eight weeks. To make an appointment to donate at this Blood Drive or if you have questions, please call Kevin or Ann O'Connor at 781-383-1290, the Red Cross Blood Services at 1-800-448-3543 or visit www.givelife.org. For more information on the blood donation process, current eligibility guidelines, or if you want to know if you are eligible to donate, you can call the American Red Cross nursing line at 1-800-462-9400 x2210 or please visit www.newenglandblood.org.

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. Beacon Hill Roll Call records local representatives' votes on two roll calls and local senators' votes on four roll calls from the week of May 17-21.

ALLOW DIFFERENT INSURANCE RATES BASED ON GENDER (H 889)

House 109-48, approved and sent to the Senate a bill that would allow Savings Bank Life Insurance (SBLI) to charge different rates based on a policyholder's gender. Current law prohibits this practice. The SBLI was created in 1907 by the state with the goal of providing low-cost life insurance. The Legislature in 1990 passed a law prohibiting SBLI from using gender to discriminate in policies.

Supporters of the bill said that SBLI is at an unfair competitive disadvantage as the only life insurance company in Massachusetts that is subject to this restriction. They noted that other companies can offer women lower rates because statistics show that women live longer and pay premiums over a longer period of time. They argued that allowing SBLI to use gender when determining rates would put the company on a level playing field with its competitors. Opponents of the bill said that it is outrageous for the House to turn the clock back hundreds of years by repealing a law that prohibits discrimination against women. They noted that the way to eliminate the competitive advantage that non-SBLI companies have is to prohibit all life insurance companies from using gender when setting rates.

The House in July 2008 approved the same bill on a vote of 96-57 and the Senate approved it on a voice vote. Gov. Deval Patrick did not sign the measure and it died.

Last week's margin of 109-48 includes enough votes for the House to override an anticipated veto by the governor if the bill makes it through the Senate and reaches his desk.

Eleven legislators who voted "No" in 2008 switched their votes and voted "Yes" last week. Three legislators who voted "Yes" in 2008 switched and voted "No" last week.

Switching from "No" To "Yes" were Reps. Cory Atkins (D-Concord), Bruce Ayers (D-Quincy), Thomas Calter (D-Kingston), Christine Canavan (D-Brockton), Sean Garballey (D-Arlington), Anne Gobi (D-Spencer), Lida Harkins (D-Needham), Peter Koutoujian (D-Newton), Stephen Kulik (D-Worthington), John Scibak (D-South Hadley) and James Vallee (D-Franklin).

Switching from "Yes" to "No" were Reps. Paul McMurtry (D-Dedham), Smitty Pignatelli (D-Lenox) and John Rogers (D-Norwood).

Both roll calls are listed. The first is from July 2008. The second is from last week.

ALLOW CONSUMERS TO USE COUPONS AND REBATES TO PURCHASE PRESCRIPTIONS (H 4689)

House 156-0, approved and sent to the Senate a bill allowing consumers to use coupons and rebate offers when purchasing prescriptions.

Supporters said that this would help lower the cost of prescription drugs for seniors and others who otherwise might not be able to afford them. They noted that the current law banning the use of coupons and rebates was designed to prevent drug companies from trying to induce customers into buying their drugs. Some said that the unintended consequence of the law is that it now prevents people from saving money on prescriptions.

(A "Yes" vote is for the bill allowing consumers to use coupon or rebate offers when purchasing prescriptions.)

APPROVE HEALTH CARE CHANGES (S 2347)

Senate 33-4, approved and sent to the House a bill making changes in the health care system, including expanding the powers of the Health Connector - the state agency that helps Massachusetts residents find affordable health insurance coverage and subsidizes the costs for some people who cannot afford the premiums.

A major provision assesses hospitals $100 million to help reduce health insurance rates for small businesses. Other provisions include imposing cost controls on the administrative costs of health insurance companies, requiring all insurance companies to offer at least one managed care product and allowing small businesses to band together and form associations in order to have leverage and group buying power when seeking lower premiums.

Supporters said that the bill takes a major step in the fight to control health insurance costs, particularly for small businesses. They argued that the measure would reduce health care premiums for small businesses by 15 percent to 20 percent and help create and retain jobs. Opponents said that the bill is seriously flawed and includes a $100 million tax on unspecified hospitals "to be announced." They argued that it unnecessarily expands the powers of the already too powerful Health Connector to impose regulations and requirements without legislative approval.

DO NOT REQUIRE PRESCRIPTION PLAN (S 2347)

Senate 4-31, rejected an amendment eliminating the requirement that a consumer have prescription coverage as part of his or her health insurance plan in order to satisfy the requirement that all Massachusetts residents have health insurance coverage or face a financial penalty.

Opponents of the requirement said that mandating the prescription coverage is putting health insurance out of the reach of many of the people that it was intended to reach. They argued that the Health Connector overstepped its bounds when it unilaterally ruled that all health plans must include prescription coverage.

Supporters of the requirement said that prescription coverage is an integral part of health insurance and should be a requirement. They argued that allowing consumers to buy plans without drug coverage is counterproductive to reaching the goal of broad health care coverage for all Massachusetts residents. Some noted that people's inability to buy drugs would actually result in more deaths, illnesses and hospital stays and end up costing the state more money.

(A "Yes" vote is for the amendment eliminating the requirement that a person have prescription coverage and therefore is against the requirement. A "No" vote is against the amendment and is in favor of the requirement.)

PROHIBIT CONNECTOR FROM ADVERTISING (H 2347)

Senate 4-31, rejected an amendment that would prohibit the state's Health Connector from advertising its services as a broker of health insurance plans for businesses.

Supporters of the advertising ban said that the original purpose of the Health Connector was to help find and subsidize health insurance plans for people who were having financial difficulty buying one. They noted that the Connector has expanded beyond that and is now inappropriately advertising and competing with private sector insurance brokers that find health insurance plans for businesses.

Opponents of the advertising ban said that competition from the Connector will stir things up and encourage private companies to lower their prices in order to compete.

(A "Yes" vote is for prohibiting the Health Connector from advertising itself as a broker of insurance plans for businesses. A "No" vote is against the ban and favors allowing the advertising.)

STRIKE $100 MILLION ASSESSMENT ON HOSPITALS (S 2347)

Senate 5-31, rejected an amendment that would strike the $100 million assessment on hospitals.

Opponents of the assessment said that it is nothing less than a tax increase on hospitals. They argued that the details of the assessment are vague and no one knows which hospitals will be taxed. Some noted that many local community hospitals are already struggling and would not be able to afford the assessment.

Supporters of the assessment said that the $100 million would be passed through the system and used to provide some rate relief on health insurance premiums for small businesses. They argued that the assessments would be made on hospitals that have money in reserve and can easily afford it.

(A "Yes" vote is for striking the $100 million assessment and therefore against it. A "No" vote is against striking the $100 million assessment and therefore favors it.)

Coach gets new deck, wheelchair ramp

BC High graduates pitch in for classmate

By Linda Fechter
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Boston College High School is known for the extraordinary education that it offers to its students and to those who attend the school, its excellence goes beyond what can be found on a transcript. There is a bond among the students and a dedication to service that is astounding. "Men for Others" is the schools mantra and can best be explained by the telling of Boston High Coach Matt McClune's story and what one Cohasset resident, with a little help from his friends, did for a guy he knew only as one of his classmates.

The story begins with a tragic accident last October in which McClune was traveling to the MBX gym in Norwell from his home in Dorchester. He was on Route 93 headed South towards his job as a personal trainer when his life changed in the blink of an eye. Matt decided to travel in the left lane, a simple decision made by people every day, but a massive pothole — just before Granite Avenue in Quincy — caused Matt's truck to go out of control.

Matt's neck was broken at the C6 and C7 vertebrae rendering him a quadriplegic. For the first 2 –1/2 weeks his family was not sure he was going to make it. He was on a ventilator after having surgery to fuse the bones in his neck. There were many complications to overcome, including pneumonia. Matt remained at Boston Medical Center until January, 2010.

According to all those who know and love Matt, he is a fighter, and he did just that. He pulled through and went to therapy as an outpatient at Braintree Rehabilitation Hospital during which time he also returned to working with his personal training clients. Then last April he was transferred to Shepherd Center in Atlanta for more intensive therapy.

Just about the time of the accident Cohasset resident Jake Morgan received a phone call Brian Lewis, the treasurer of a BC High Golf Tournament. The golf fundraiser, now in its 4th year, is organized by Jake and others who were friends of Paul "PJ" Trendowicz, a fellow BC High Student and Cohasset resident who lost his life in a swimming accident in 2002. An article from the Mariner in 2008 describes "PJ" as exuberant and friendly with leadership skills and constant smile that were a source of happiness for those who knew him. Lewis, also of Cohasset, was calling to discuss where the tournament should donate the funds of the 2009 event.

"I played high school football with Matt McClune in 2001. Then I heard about the accident from Steve Kiely, a teacher at BC High who coaches freshman football with Matt. It was one of the worst things I've ever heard. So when Brian called about the golf tournament proceeds we knew it should somehow benefit Matt," says Morgan.

Morgan who is just starting out with his own construction business, Morgan Building & Restoration, based here in Cohasset — decided to put his skills to work, with the help of Cohasset friend Tim Straughn and a friend from Hingham, Justin Eaton. They built a beautiful deck and ramp so Matt would have wheelchair access to his house upon his release from the hospital. Nearly all of the $8,000 golf tournament proceeds were used to buy materials to construct the project and the guys donated 100 percent of their time.

It took about six weeks to build and the biggest challenge was the weather. Last November was extremely rainy, and when it finally stopped, December came along and the ground froze. It was full of ice from the November rains and made for a challenging "build."

"Jake Morgan called us out of the blue and asked if he could talk to us about building the ramp for Matt," says Matt's mom, Joanne McClune. "It was important to him that this modification to Matt's home looked "natural" and not like a "handicap ramp." He was very cognizant of the "esthetics" of it and how it would make Matt feel when he first saw it."

According to Joanne Jake made a point to spend time with Matt during the process of building the ramp. Jake would go out and get lunch for the two of them and eat with Matt or stay late after he was done for the day to just sit and talk with him.

"The ramp means so much more to us than providing access into our home for Matt," says a very grateful mom. "It signifies is the spirit of "Men for Others" from our boys at BCH."

Matt McClune will be returning to coach the Boston College High Freshman Football team in September. At present, he is in the hospital being treated for pneumonia. For anyone interested his family encourages you to visit www.caringbridge.org/visit/matthewmcclune for updates on his status.

"After we built the ramp everybody would come up to us and say "wow, that is so amazing what you did," says Jake. "To which the response for all those involved is 'Not really, we were just doing what we were taught.'"

A fundraiser will be held for Matt McClune on June 5 at Boston College High School. All are encouraged to attend. Tickets are $75; Young Professional (21-25): $50. Donations are graciously accepted. Visit www.onestepformatt.com for details.

Cohasset astronaut landed safely Wednesday conference, the Cohasset Mariner acknowledged that the last time Bowen was on orbit, the seven-pane Cupola bay window had not yet been installed. How would he describe the view or his experience sticking his nose against the windows of the Cupola during this mission?

Astronaut Michael Good, Bowen's EVA buddy for the mission's third spacewalk, joked to him: "Did you get any noseprints on there?"

Bowen replied, with a grin: "The Cupola is an amazing facility, and really, I think Piers and Tracy (Caldwell Dyson) and Garrett (Reisman) proved its value with the robotic operations, which is the real purpose for its existence.

"But for those of us who aren't doing robotics, it's just the most amazing place to sit and watch the world go by. It's an opportunity to look down and see what the world looks like and reflect upon it."

Before the launch, Reisman told the Cohasset Mariner that all the hard work planned for the STS-132 crew would naturally result in a corresponding level of satisfaction after a job well done.

Speaking from space, Reisman elaborated on his pre-flight comment: "We've talked a lot about having fun up here, but I think the main reason we're all having so much fun is that everything went pretty smoothly on the mission, and we accomplished all of our objectives."

He quipped: "There's nothing like a little success to make you have a really good time. So, yeah, I was hoping that after all this hard work, not just obviously by us, but more importantly, by all the people on the ground that made it all possible and worked out all the engineering details, we had a lot of success.

NASA astronaut Steve Bowen, STS-132 mission specialist, works on the middeck of the Earth-orbiting space shuttle Atlantis during flight day two activities.

"That was what I was talking about before, that I was hoping to have this feeling. And I've got it!"

Reisman unfortunately had another reason to sing. Prior to launch, Bowen revealed that his first spacewalk — with Reisman (whom Bowen called "a hideous Yankees fan") — was scheduled for May 17, the same day that Boston would play New York in Yankee Stadium. The final score on the ground? Yankees 11, Red Sox 9.

NASA astronaut Steve Bowen, STS-132 mission specialist, is pictured in the Quest airlock of the International Space Station as the mission's second spacewalk draws to a close.

The Colbert Universe

In an intriguing round of the game "Six Degrees of Separation," Bowen's family grew up in Cohasset with the family of actress Nancy (Walls) Carell, the wife of Acton actor Steve Carell. Comedian Stephen Colbert was the actor's understudy at the famed Second City in Chicago.

Colbert and Reisman spoke during the astronaut's last space mission, ISS Expedition 17. So NASA patched the entire Atlantis crew to The Colbert Report early Tuesday.

Announced Colbert: "Morning! Greetings, spacemen, heroes all!" After introducing each astronaut, including STS-132 skipper Ken Ham, Colbert teased: "I want you to know how much I enjoy saying the words 'Commander Ham.' "

Reisman replied to Colbert's question about mission status: "The mission is going really well. We've accomplished all of our primary objectives.

"We've got a new antenna on the space station, a new six-pack of batteries, a new module docked to station and generally have defeated the forces of evil. So we're very happy about how things have gone."

"Congratulations!" replied Colbert.

At the end of the transmission, Colbert said: "Gentlemen, thank you so much for your courageous exploration of our final frontier. … We look forward to seeing you back on the good Earth."

Shuttle's Curtain Call

Earlier this month, Bowen said that he had been reflecting upon his last shuttle flight, STS-126 Endeavour, launched in November 2008.

"I've realized that we brought up so much stuff on my last flight that is now just an integral part of the space station: the habitation compartments, the water recovery system and the exercise machine. Just seeing all that stuff in place is going to be really interesting and cool.

"The SARJ (solar alpha rotary joint) actually rotates now, so I can look out and see those (solar) arrays rolling. The Cupola has been added, and Node 3. This time, those are things I definitely want to check out."

Bowen concluded: "I think the biggest part for all of us is to contribute to the legacy of Atlantis. She's done some incredible missions, and we want to be one more success for the vehicle itself."

Tracksters send big numbers to State Meet

By William Wassersug
WWASSERS@CNC.COM

For a small team, the Cohasset track and field team has put up some big numbers where it counts – the postseason.

Cohasset, in tandem with Hull, qualified 13 athletes to compete at the Div. 4 State Meet on Saturday in Seekonk.

"It's been a real good season," Cohasset coach Brad Mingels said. "The boys and girls both won two more meets than they did last year. The boys are .500. The kids have been working hard all season. They've put in a lot of effort. They've come a long way."

It should be an interesting experience, Mingels said.

"Even when I was in high school the States were always the day after the prom," he said. "I told the kids not to worry about the fact that they might only get two or three hours of sleep. Whenever I was tired I have better results. I wasn't thinking about it as much."

For Cohasset/Hull, senior Logan Breslow will be running the 100 hurdles and senior Tori Lehr will handle the shot put and discus.

Freshman Melinda Dignam qualified in the 100 hurdles and 400 hurdles. She'll run the 100 hurdles.

In the meet, athletes can only run one individual running event.

On the boys side, the team qualified 10 athletes.

Dave Allen will be running the 800 and will also be part of the 4x400 relay with John Currier, Paul Cardoos and Nick Boretti.

Currier will compete in the high jump as well. He'll be joined in the event by Calvin Servaes.

In the 1-mile, Brian Collins will have the honor.

T.J. Stokes will get to run just a little farther than Collins, taking his chances in the 2-mile.

Freshman Thomas Fogarty will give the 200 a run and Cam Washak and D.J. Weiss round out the party with Washak on the discus and Weiss throwing the javelin and shot put.

Track & Field

"D.J. Weiss is a senior," Mingels said. "I have to give him some spotlight. He's mentored a lot of kids in javelin. We've been calling him an unofficial assistant coach. He spends a lot of time working with the younger kids."

The captains this season are Allen, Stokes, Servaes and Terry MacCormack.

"The captains have done a tremendous job," Mingels said. "They've provided great leadership."

Mingels said it wasn't just the kids who qualified for States who have made an impression.

It was the whole team, from top to bottom.

"Every kid on this team has been a valuable contributor," he said. "They come to practice every day with a smile and they work hard. It's a pleasure to coach them. This season isn't over yet and I'm already excited about next year."

Along with the big qualifying group, Mingels said he has several athletes who were close.

"Natalie Dignam just missed the 800 by a half a second," Mingels said. "Julia Canney has done well. We have a lot of freshmen who have worked very hard. Meghan Kearney and Lauren McLellan were both close in the 1-mile, Sarah Fredey was strong in the 800 and Caitlin Mavilia did very well in the sprint events. Caitlin placed first in the freshman 100 at the South Shore League Meet."

Mingels also had praise for other team members.

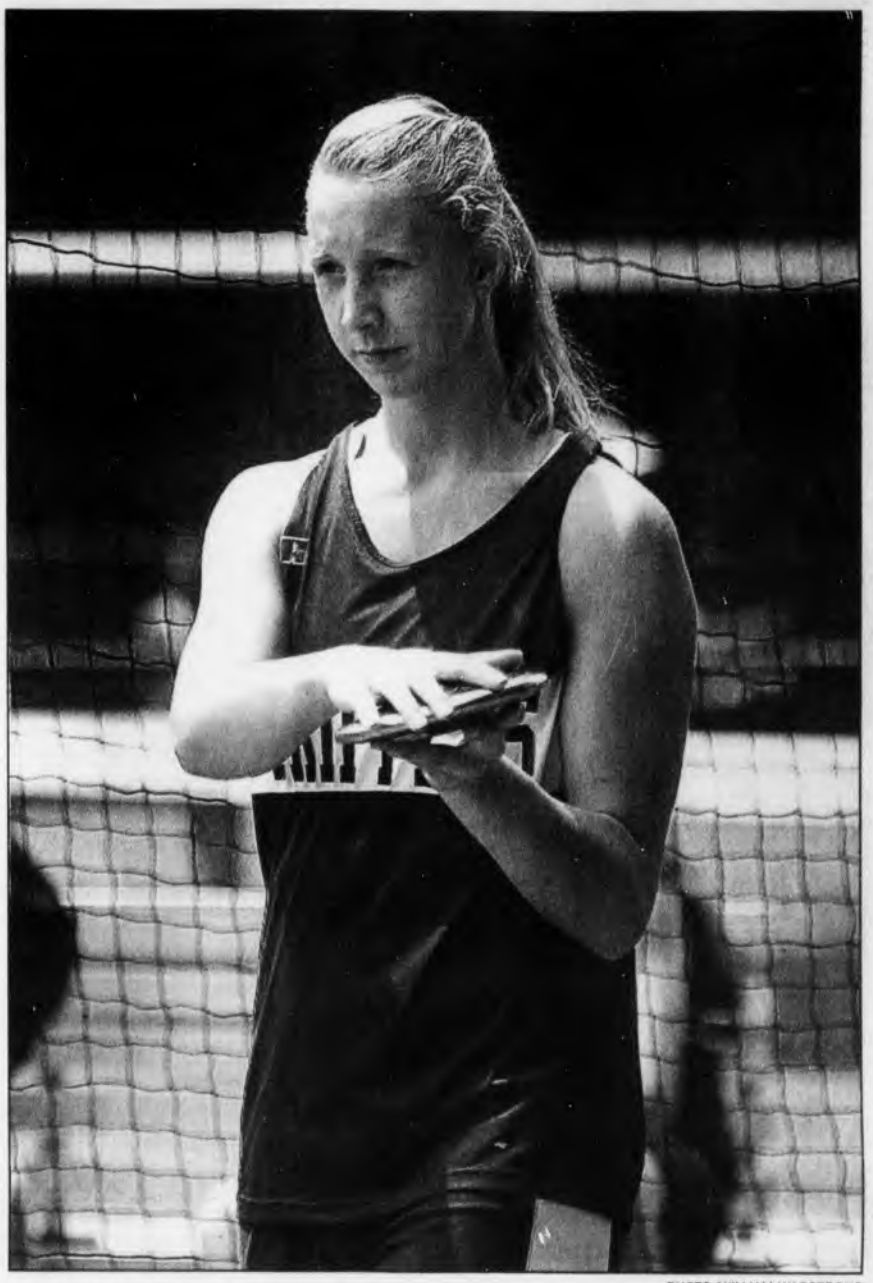
"Dominique Rioux is a senior captain," he said of his 400 specialist. "She's at practice every day working hard."

In the 800, Gabrielle Rioux was close to making it.

Captain Mackenzie Shanahan has done a good job this season in the 400 and 400 relay, and Melissa Campedelli did well in the 1-mile and 2-mile.

Mingels also pointed to Betsy Crawford as a team player.

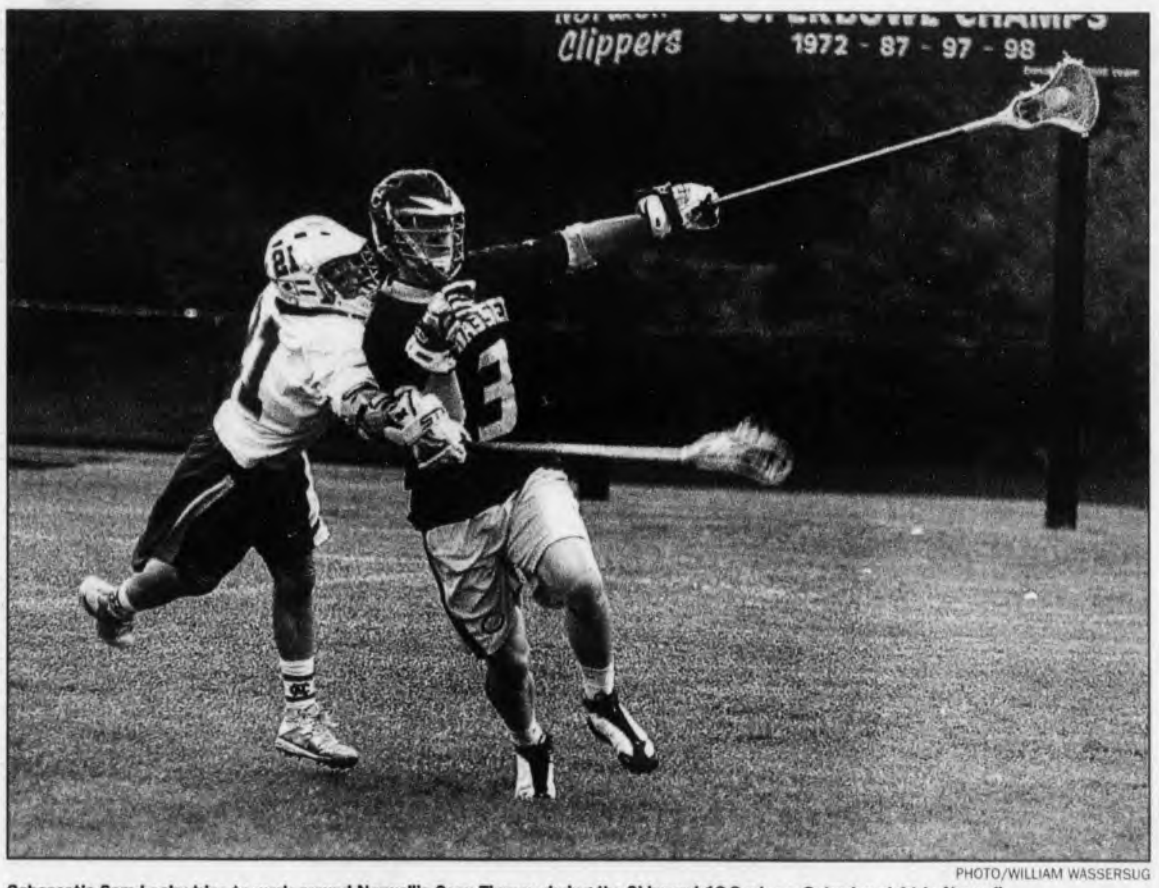
"Betsy was injured off and on the whole season," he said. "But she ran through some of it. She ran courageously. She put the team first."



First-year runner James Earl was also strong.

"James was a significant contributor to our success," Mingels said. "He's been a welcome addition to the team running the 2-mile."

Mingels credited his staff with the team's success.



"Betsy Callanan, Ed Burke and Bill Bradford are the other coaches on the team," he said. "Each one of us has an area of specialization. The kids responded well

Boys win South Shore League

By Sean MacCarthy
CORRESPONDENT

The past week of Skippers boys lacrosse was unusual but successful.

Cohasset's usual big time players were kept quiet so others had to step up and fill the void.

On Saturday night, under the lights in Norwell, the Skippers faced off against the Clippers. With a lot riding on the line this game, namely the South Shore League Championship, both teams came to play hard.

Boys Lacrosse

The first quarter was a rough one for Cohasset as numerous penalties prohibited Cohasset from playing their best. After Cohasset opened up the game with two goals from Thomas Flibotte and Jack Carrier, Norwell closed out the first quarter with three goals.

All three of the goals came from when Norwell's three different man-up situations after Cohasset committed some costly penalties. Cohasset was flagged 12 times, while Norwell was only called for three penalties.

The second quarter was dominated by Cohasset, which gave them the big lead they needed to ensure victory. The Skippers had seven straight goals in the quarter from the likes of Flibotte, Carrier, Justin Yeager, Alex Kinnealey, and Ian Quinlan.

Norwell scored one goal with about a minute left in the quarter making the score at the half 9-4.

"That second quarter was the turning point in the game," said goalie Jack Murphy. "It gave us a nice cushion to sit on for the rest of the game."

The cushion was needed as Cohasset, despite winning the game, lost the second half.

The Norwell goalies made an abundance of saves to keep the Clippers in the game as Cohasset made a few more costly penalties. They struggled to answer back to the Norwell scores and it wasn't looking too great for Cohasset, especially with Will Wise and Dean Driscoll being locked down.

Baseball claims SSL crown

By William Wassersug
WWASSERS@CNC.COM

The Cohasset baseball team has come a long way this season.

After missing the MIAA Tournament last season, the baseball team is back in the mix this season, not just as a qualifier, but as a South Shore League champion as well.

The Skippers won nine of their last ten games, including a 4-3 win over Cardinal Spellman on Wednesday afternoon at Cohasset.

The Skippers improved to 13-6 with the win and closed out the regular season yesterday against Sacred Heart.

The Skippers have found outstanding performances in all aspects of the game.

The pitching and catching have been outstanding, and Anders Goetz was hitting over .500 heading into the week.

More importantly, Cohasset has played error-free baseball and has been able to get the big out when needed.

In Wednesday's game, Jamie Faber allowed three runs in six-plus innings and Shane Haggerty picked up the save by inducing a bases-loaded double play in the seventh inning.

Baseball seeds will be announced on Tuesday, along with softball.

Girls lacrosse seeds came out yesterday and boys lacrosse seeds will be announced today.

Boys and girls tennis seeds will be released on Wednesday.

For Cohasset, the boys and girls tennis teams, along with baseball and both lacrosse teams qualified for the postseason.

The girls lacrosse team is 12-6 and beat Plymouth North 18-13 on Wednesday.

Jersey team helps power inaugural War on the Shore

Visiting Gym Ratz a presence at new local AAU tourney

By Bob Whitney
FOR THE SCITUATE MARINER

It was a warm, sunny, Saturday morning suitable for the usual youth spring sports – baseball, soccer, lacrosse but this past weekend the major youth sport event in the area was indoor and it was basketball – the competitive girls AAU variety.

Courtesy of Scituate's Mike Sachitella, whose vision of a competitive AAU event became reality with the inaugural " War on the Shore" Girls AAU basketball tournament, 40 teams from the Eastern Seaboard found their way to gyms in Scituate and Cohasset to display some impressive basketball skill.

Basketball

Most prominent in the field of 40 were the young ladies from the New Jersey Gym Ratz, the emerald clad, AAU club with the confident swagger from Bergen County NJ, which, by the way, is a free throw away from basketball's mecca, Madison Square Garden.

The founder of the Gym Ratz is the very youthful, GQ looking Danny Brown.

New England raised and a former star athlete at Div 3 powerhouse Ithaca College, he started the club as a hobby 20 years ago with six kids in a dingy gym in Teaneck, NJ and has built the Gym Ratz into a national AAU power winning a couple of

Sailing team wins Silver Division in its first Mass Bay League Championship Regatta

The Sailing Team competed in its first Mass Bay League Championship Regatta this week. The team sailed extremely well in trying conditions during the two-day competition against 58 other boats. The team had different boat pairings everyday. Most of the sailors had never sailed on Mercuries before or on the Charles River and the wind was very light and shifty. "The Nantasket Nor'Easters sailed with amazing consistency. It was a pleasure coaching from the shore for the past two days because it was always so easy to find our boats. We were nearly always towards the front of the pack and our boat handling stood out from the group" said Coach Broome.

Tyler Durant, Kelsey Diemer and Griffin Howard sailed against 53 boats in the Gold Fleet and the team's boat No. 42 ended up 6th over all!

Morgan McCarthy, Elise Quebec, Matt Dooley, Danielle Sookiasian, Cam Lucitt and Peter Callahan sailed two boats in the Silver Fleet. The Silver Fleet had 35 boats in it and the team's boat No. 67 won the Silver division with a total score of 28 points over 6 races. Their No. 73 boat tied for the 8th spot, but lost the tie breaker ending up in 9th for the day. "I'm very proud of this boat for continuing to push the envelope and being on the starting line with boat speed. This skill will win regattas in the future. I'm very proud of everyone that stepped up and sailed so well!

I'm looking forward to the Underclassmen's regatta which is next Wednesday at the same spot in the same boat. The League won't know what hit them!" beamed Coach Broome.

national titles and numerous regional and state championships.

Along the way, Brown personally financed and oversaw the construction of New Jersey's first private indoor basketball training complex which has propelled his program into prominence on the national stage.

He claims personal contact with numerous college coaches across the country which is why year in and year out Gym Ratz graduates continue to dot college basketball rosters from Div 1 to Div 3 programs.

Like most successful individuals Brown exudes an enormous passion for the sport and his fulltime work (8a.m.-10 p.m. seven days a week) but most importantly his greatest satisfaction is helping kids from Bergen County realize lifelong dreams – some that are quite lofty.

Just ask of a few of the stars on his U12 team – Izzy McMahon, Caitlin Roche, Lauren Saperstein and "Teddy" Gibbs – they name Gino Auriemmma's University of Connecticut dynasty and the ACC's Carolina Tar Heels as their college destinations.

Current coach, Sheree Clarke proudly notes, " they love what they do and they are smart kids; the sky's the limit." With Brown, Clarke and other supporters in Bergen County leading the way these kids have a lot to look forward to in the next few years.

Sachitella enthusiastically concurs.

" We were extremely fortunate to have a club with the national reputation as Brown's Gym Ratz help us launch our tournament," he said. "We look forward to having them join us each and every year in this special event."

Cohasset's Thomas Flibotte brings the ball up during the Skippers' 12-8 win on Saturday night in Norwell

FROM LACROSSE, PAGE 17

In the end, the score was 12-8 Cohasset. Even though Norwell was able to win three out of the four quarters, Cohasset was able to win the game. In doing so, Cohasset claimed the South Shore League Championship. In addition, Cohasset solidified itself as the consensus No. 1 Division 3 lacrosse team.

While their business with the South Shore League was done with, they had another game to attend to on Monday when they played Catholic Memorial.

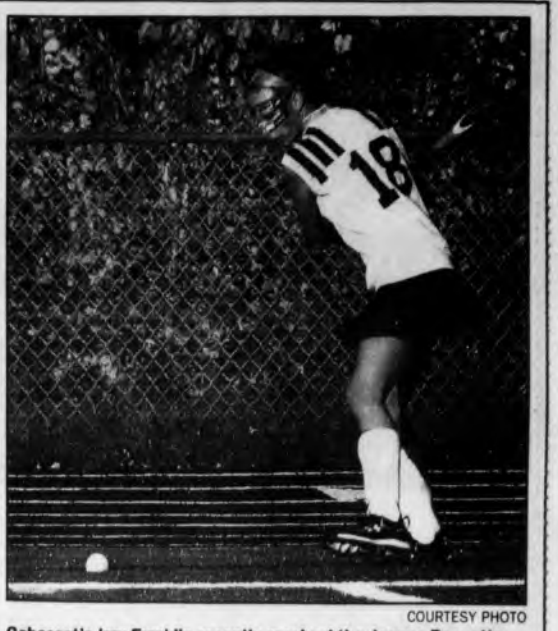
Cohasset met Catholic Memorial in the finals of the Chowda Cup Tournement.

Down for most of the game, Cohasset made a fourth quarter comeback to defeat Catholic Memorial and win the Chowda Cup. Needless to say, Catholic Memorial was out for revenge.

The revenge never came for them though. Instead of coming out amped up and highly motivated like most people expected, Catholic Memorial walked onto Alumni field flat and they paid for it.

The Skippers came out with a bang and outscored their opposition 6-1 in the first quarter alone. They nearly repeated the same dominance in the second quarter as Cohasset led 11-2 going into halftime.

Ahead by nine, Cohasset pulled their starters early in the second half. Catholic Memorial scored flurry after flurry of goals but the deficit could not be reduced to zero. The final score had Cohasset winning 18-14. Don't let that score fool you though as the game was dominated, for the most part, by Cohasset, especially when they had all of their starters in.



Again, star players Will Wise and Dean Driscoll were nearly completely shut off. With their two top scorers' cold, Cohasset had many bench players step up to the plate and take over. John McGoldrick, for instance, scored five goals in the game against Catholic Memorial. The two big wins over Norwell and Catholic Memorial showed how deep Cohasset is as a team. It certainly shows promise for the future and there is some great insurance on that bench if the stars of the team don't play up to par.

With the win over Catholic Memorial, the regular season was officially over. Cohasset finished with an outstanding record of 16-2. The Skippers high powered offense ended up being ranked third in the state averaging 14.11 goals per game. The tough and edgy defense came in at 34th in the state only allowing 6.44 goals per game.

Cohasset's top scorers of the 18 game regular season are Will Wise, Dean Driscoll, and Thomas Flibotte, in that order. Will Wise had 39 goals and 69 assists (108 points overall). Dean "Doomsday" Driscoll, on the other hand, had 74 goals and 31 assists (105 points overall). Last, but not least, Flibotte had 45 goals and 27 assists (72 points overall).

Also at the conclusion of the regular season, goalie Jack Murphy notched 242 saves over the 18 game period. That gives him an astounding 74 percent save percentage.

With the 2010 Cohasset Lacrosse regular season coming to an end, Cohasset looks forward to getting back to the Division 3State Championship game. Ranked No. 1 in Division 3 and No. 5 in the entire state, Cohasset is a heavy favorite to win it all this year.

Cohasset's Izzy Franklin recently received the Joanne Paquette Academic All-Star Award by the Mass State Field Hockey Coaches Association.

Cohasset's Franklin wins field hockey award

Isabelle Franklin, a senior at Cohasset High School, was recently selected by the Massachussetts State Field Hockey Coaches Association to receive the Joanne Paquette Academic All-Star Award. The award honors those players in their senior year who excel on the field and who as students, achieve academic success. A 2009 South Shore League All-Star, Isabelle is among only twenty-one field hockey players state-wide to receive this award. Nominated by their coaches, players are evaluated on playing ability, statistical performance, sportsmanship and character. Academically players must be named to honor roll their senior year and be ranked in the top 15% of their class. A four-year varsity player, Isabelle credits her passion for the game to her coaches, especially coach Laura Giuliano, whose support and enthusiasm for her as a player and a person sparked her confidence and drove her to succeed.

"Izzy is the total package when it comes to excellence in field hockey," Cohasset coach Laura Giuliani said. "She has speed, agility, stick skills, timing and playmaking skills that make her an excellent center midfielder."

High School Hockey at Rockland Rink 2010

The Rockland Ice Rink will host the South Shore Coaches League this summer. All area high school players are invited to participate. The teams will be coached by varsity hockey coaches.

The League will start on June 14th and will consist of 10 games on Mondays during the summer. The cost is $220. per player and applications can be obtained at the rink.

Applications will not be accepted by phone.

Cohasset's Chris Brown named MVP and All Star at Archies

This Cohasset native who plays Lacrosse for Archbishop Williams (18-2) was unanimously voted the 2010 Catholic Central League's Most Valuable Player and was selected to be a Catholic Central League All-Star all four years.

The Bishops captain is a 6'3", 195 lb. senior defenseman that scored 8 goals and added 8 assists from his backline position. He also led the team with 140 groundballs.

During the 2010 season Chris stepped into the position of goalie while the starting goalie was unable to play due to an injury.

While in net, he had 28 saves, a 5.11 GAA, and a 3-0 record.

On man up situations it was not uncommon to find Chris playing in the offensive zone with a short pole in his hand. Predominately left handed, he is equally talented shooting with his right hand. As a junior he took on the role of a faceoff specialist, a position he mastered in 2010.

Chris was chosen by the Patriot Ledger All Scholastic first team rooster and played for the Fighting Clams club lacrosse team in 2009.

Often you will find Chris at The Good Sport in Cohasset where he works part time. In the fall he will be attending Eastern Connecticut State University in Willimantic, CT where he will be playing lacrosse.

to them."

Mingels said he thinks his athletes can get to the next level.

"This is a big deal for us," he said of the numbers of players who have qualified. "For a team as small as ours to send 13 is pretty amazing. It's like a quarter of the team. I can't say enough about their work ethic and respect for their coaches. I think we'll have a pretty good chance to send some kids to All-States."

With that in mind, but also the season winding down, Mingels said he's excited for next season.

"It's been a great season," he said. "It's over for most of the kids, but they still come to practice to help out. The kids don't want it to end. It's been a fun season and next year we can be even better. We've got some up and coming sophomores and juniors who will do well."

SCHOOLS

Grand night, a grand finale!

THE ARTS

KATHRYN HILLMAN

On May 19, Cohasset Middle/High School hosted the High School Arts Night. The evening was a celebration of art, both visual and musical, presented by the Cohasset High School students. The upper lobby was turned into an art gallery to showcase the student's artwork. A few seniors had portfolios displayed: the featured students included Christine Conner, Paige Collins, Emily Bertovich, Amy Meikleham, Sarah Trahon, Tina D'Antonio, Mike Filbey, and Kevin O'Connell. The artwork showed a wide array of subject matter and media, including still-lifes, portraits, self-portraits, abstract designs, and even some decorated clothing. This showcased the students' artwork and gave the view a sense of the types of projects the high school students do.

The music portion of the evening was presented in the cafeteria. The concert began with the High School Concert Band, which opened with Beyond the Higher Skies, a swift, loose march. The piece highlighted the flutes and trumpets, with a strong percussion driving the rhythm underneath. The first theme was quick and upbeat, contrasting to the second theme, which was stately and featured the reed section. The French horn was highlighted beautifully, before the piece reverted to the first theme. The second piece of this set was a blend of two well-know classic movie themes, Star Wars/Raiders March. The trumpets opened the piece with strong tones, supported by the reed section. The flute trills added a nice dimension to the piece. The Raiders March portion of the piece was well performed, with the soprano instruments carrying the melody and the bass instruments moving the piece along. Both songs were exceptionally well performed.

Awards

After the band had finished its set, a number of awards were presented, Bryan Marks, the high school chorus director, briefly talked about the chorus trip to Philadelphia for a competition and thanked the chaperones who attended. Awards of Achievement were given to Will Wise, Ian Quinlan, Andy McKenna, Kevin O'Connell, Christopher Hayes, and Emily Bertovich for extensive participation in music. Then the High School Chorus performed their set of three songs, beginning with Furaha! The pieces in this first set were also performed at the High School Christmas Concert 2009, so first semester chorus members were invited to sing with the group performing tonight. The song, which translates as "We wish you joy," is mostly sung in Swahili. The piece is given texture by layering the different vocal parts, making it an interesting piece to listen to. The next piece, April Is In My Mistress' Face, is a madrigal dating back to the 1500s. Sung a cappella, the piece highlights and blends each vocal section by singing it in tight rounds, while keeping the beautiful, clear tone. The final piece in the set, Into the Night, tells the story of a person who goes to get wood for their fire on a winter night. The dynamics provided contrast and reflected the mood of the story it was telling. The set was exceptionally well-performed.

After the chorus had performed, some of the Gold Seal Music Awards were presented. The Outstanding Chorus Awards, given for long-time dedication to the chorus, talent, and extracurricular choral involvement, were given to Thomas Barrett, Elizabeth Crawford, Sean McCarthy, and Jennifer Magruder. An award for Outstanding Soloist in Concert Band was given to Ashley Howard, on flute.

The High School Band performed its second set for the evening, opening with "Celtic Voyage," featuring Ashley Howard on the flute. The piece began with an interesting effect from the horns, which sounds very much like sea spraying up against rocks or the side of a boat. The flutes began the melody after this, supported by the reeds. The trumpets were than layered in on top of that and picked up the melody. The percussion provided a steady, powerful beat, while also punctuating the piece with cymbals at times. The piece was exceptionally well done and emotional. Another round of Gold Seal Concert Awards were given for distinguished musicianship to Terry MacCormack, Austin Meyers, Mark Seraikas, and Andrew Littauer. The second number the band performed a medley titled Billy Joel, which began as a slow, brass-dominated piece, featuring the low brass and drum, providing a strong bass rhythm. The trumpets and flutes were layered over it, providing interesting affects and a bouncy melody line. The second theme of the piece was adapted from the well-known song "Piano Man," which changed into a relaxed jazz waltz. The final theme of the piece provided a major contrast, featuring an up-beat melody upheld by the trumpet section. The piece finished with the original theme featuring the low brass.

A number of other awards were presented, including a band award for distinguished service to Tori Lehr, and Outstanding Band Member Awards to Melissa Campedelli, Paige Collins, Megan Richardson, Charlotte Malone, and Jackson Dean. The High School Chorus than began their next set, starting with Stand By Me, performed by the Period two chorus. The small ensemble harmonized nicely while promoting the soloists: Betsey Crawford, Ruthann Barry, and Kate Slamp. The second piece, performed by the entire High School Chorus, was If You're Out There, which they will be singing with the Middle School Chorus in a concert on June 1st. The harmonies were stunning and the dynamics added a lot to the emotions behind the piece, which were mostly about solidarity. The final song of this set, performed by the Period four chorus group was "Circle of Life," a well-known song from "The Lion King." Soloists included Callie Piepenbrink and Julia Thompson. The faculty awards were announced: the music award when to Ian Porter, the Visual Art Award when to Sarah Trahon, and the Drama Award went to Mark Seraikas. The band members then thanked John DeWaal, who stepped in as band director while Ms. Stephanie Moriarty was on leave.

Jazz Band

The Jazz Band played their set next, directed by both Mr. DeWaal and Mrs. Moriarty, opening with Pressure Point. This year, the students themselves chose music they found interesting and that they wanted to play for the concert. A fast-paced piece, Pressure Point featured the trumpets and saxophones, which passed the melody line for most of this spirited, hard-driving piece. Garrett Canney performed the trumpet solo. The second piece in the set was The Sermon, a blues piece with distinctive southern influences. The piece featured the brass section nicely, with a trombone soli at the end. Soloists included Garrett Canney on trumpet, Terry MacCormack on clarinet and Devon Dickson on trombone. The band performed the classic jazz number Birdland, characterized by the dramatic dynamics and well-balanced harmonies. Mark Seraikas performed an excellent solo on the tenor saxophone. The piece was brilliantly performed and very well-received by the audience. The final piece for the jazz band's set was September, as recorded by the popular band Earth, Wind, and Fire. The piece was self-directed by the band, with both Mrs. Moriarty joining the band on the saxophone and Mr. DeWaal on the trumpet. The parts blended well and the piece upbeat, with a funk rock feel. Solos were executed by Anthony Nahill on the alto saxophone and Alex Kinnealey on bari sax.

Before the High School Chorus performed their final set for the evening, a few more Gold Seal Awards were announced, this time the Music Honor Award. This award is given for participation in all areas and genera in music, and is not necessarily given out every year. However, this year it was awarded to Ian Porter. The High School Chorus than opened their set with "The Lion Sleeps Tonight," as performed by the period one class. The piece included interesting harmonies and layering of the different vocal sections. Solos were performed by Jennifer Magruder, Emily Baumgarten, and Meghan Burke. The chorus' final song for the evening was the every-popular Don't Stop Believin'. The piece was dedicated to the seniors, who will be graduating shortly. The piece had powerful dynamics and a lot of emotion put into it. Soloists were Jennifer Magruder, Ruthann Barry, Robert Mahoney, Callie Piepenbrink, Julia Thompson, Meghan Burke, Emily Baumgarten, Elizabeth Crawford, and Tatyana Nakashima.

Before the High School Band performed their final set for the evening, the John Philip Sousa Band Award was presented. It is given to a person who is particularly dedicated to band; it was presented by Charlotte Malone, last year's recipient, to Terry MacCormack. Then the band began their final set, starting with America. The song opened with a lot of strong clarinet trills, before launching into the majestic march, blending the parts nicely. The brass was particularly strong at the conclusion of the piece. The final piece for the evening is traditionally Stars and Stripes Forever, and the tradition did not end this year. The piece was exceedingly well-performed, with powerful dynamic and an amazing piccolo solo performed by Ashley Howard. The piece got a standing ovation from the audience.

Showcase

The whole evening was a great showcase and culmination of the all the projects the high school band and chorus students have worked on this semester. John DeWaal, who has been directing the band since March in Stephanie Moriarty's stead, said, "It was a lot of fun. They helped make the transition from her to me very easy." The work they put into the music has certainly shown: both the band and the chorus went to competitions in Philadelphia, and both did very well, with the band winning first place and best over-all concert band for the Music in the Park festival. Stephanie Moriarty came back Monday and will be staying on in the foreseeable future. She said, "[This has been an] incredible group of seniors and their driven attitude contributed to the band's success." We wish the seniors good luck next year and look forward to seeing more from the high school band and chorus next year.

LIFE AT CHS

SEAN MACCARTHY

10...9...8...7...6...5...4...3...2...1...0. Initiate Life at CHS: Sean MacCarthy's Final Chapter.

That's it. It's all over. This is my LAST week of high school and this is my LAST Life at CHS article. Rejoice with me!

Monday was the last Monday at CHS ever for Seniors. Ever! Also on Monday, the Spinnaker staff tirelessly worked on the Spinnaker Senior Salute. Probably the best issue of the year, the Senior Salute includes a list of where everyone will be attending next year to give everyone a good sense of where there friends will head off to once they leave their beloved hometown of Cohasset. Monday was also the last day for Student Council nomination forms for joining the elite squad next year. Just a hint of advice, make sure you vote for the kid who understands how to have fun, not the boring/overly political kid who really has very little in common with your interests...unless of course you are a boring/overly political kid...woops...awkward...

Tuesday held the last Presidents' meeting for the tremendous class Presidents of this past school year. Not much discussed concerning the schools as all of the Presidents were finishing out their terms, but the Presidents were rightfully given free pizza and cake. And for old time's sake, I think Chicken ParmeSEAN needs to come back. OMG I Love freeeeee fooooooooooddd!!! And now Sean MacCarthy is back. Satisfied? I know I am.

Wednesday was the last FULL day for Seniors. We were all given ice cream for our services of wreaking awesomeness throughout the school year. That was cool. There was also an advisory meeting, which made all of the classes shortened. This wasn't your ordinary, "lets gather up in a circle and talk" advisory meeting and instead everyone had to take an 88 question-long survey. That's a lot of questions. A lot of dumb questions that really didn't even have to be answered.

Thursday...wow...my last day of high school. Really? Oh yeah! Oh my. I don't even remember this day because of how exuberant and antsy I was throughout it. I spent a lot of it anticipating my future and recollecting on how much great times I had at CHS. All of that thought was trampled on though as me and all of my fellow seniors paraded around the school at 11:30 as we got out of our final high school class. The administrators were nice enough to grill us up some food as, again, another token of appreciation for the seniors being so unbelievably awesome.

Friday. Friday will always be a mystery to me. Why? You must have forgotten! I am done with High School! Boooo yaaaa!!!!!

Prom is also on Friday. It's going to be so bomb. End of story.

Well...that's it. The final chapter of the Sean MacCarthy Life at CHS articles. I think I got to about 40 articles. Wow. That's a lot more than I thought.

I thank you all for reading my articles whether it be on a weekly basis or by accident. I enjoyed doing this and I hope you enjoyed reading these. And again, thank you for putting up with all of the nonsense that comes out of this mouth. I'm sure some day's I sound like the wizard or words and others I sounded like quite the opposite.

Now it's time to unveil the well trained replacement...NATALIE DIGNAM!

Well, all I know for sure is that you are all going to adore her writing. She is a good friend of mine and is always a pleasure to be around. I acted with her and took some classes with her and just by her awesome personality, I knew she would be the best option for my replacement. Say "hi" Natalie!.....She says "Hi!"...

And now I leave you with my final words of wisdom: Life is too short to take seriously.

Good night everybody and I wish you all the best of luck in your future endeavors!

Sean MacCarthy is DONE with High School. Providence College here I come!

Students study alternative energies

The COMPASS enrichment program just finished a very exciting month. The students have been learning about alternative energies and simple, everyday methods to reduce their impact on the environment. Many students got their hands dirty by learning how worms can be used to compost simple kitchen waste.

With equipment on loan from the New England Aquarium, students constructed their own working solar panels and competed to see who could design the most efficient wind generator. With good weather here and summer just around the corner, the COMPASS program will continue some of these activities into their summer program.

The program is open to any Cohasset Public Schools children in grades K-6, registration will be accepted throughout the year. Contact Mr. Erick Amero at 781-383-8223 / or eamero@cohassetk12.org for more information.

Brothers need home together

They're ready to go, have been tested, neutered and have their first set of shots.

Hull Seaside Animal Rescue hopes someone would like to adopt these two adorable kittens, Tiger (with white paws), and Moe, both male shorthair tabbies. Please call Shirl at 781-925-3380. These two cannot be separated and think of all the fun you'll have. They're ready to go, have been tested, neutered and have their first set of shots. We only have two orange males. We have an assortment of kittens, mostly black and a few gray.

If you're interested, you can download an application from our website. The others will be ready to go on the 11th or 12th of June. We strongly suggest when considering adopting kittens, that you adopt two. Preference will be given those who adopt two. Visit www.hsar.org.

The Rescue is located at 50 L St., Hull; the mailing address is Hull Seaside Animal Rescue, PO Box 787 Hull, MA. 02045. The numbers are 1-877-378-1195, and to speak with Mary, the shelter manager, call 781-925-3121. Open hours are Saturday from 2 to 3 p.m. and Monday from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m.

An Open House/Adoption Day will be held on Saturday June 26, from 2 to 4 p.m. There should still have kittens available at that time.

Patti and Ani Koziol are a happy mother-daughter pair shopping for plants at the plant sale at Holly Hill this past weekend.

Spring plant sale continues at Holly Hill

There is a lot happening at Holly Hill Farm in Cohasset this spring. The spring plant sale continues this weekend on Saturday and Sunday May 29 and 30 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

The farm stand is open both days at 11 a.m. with fresh asparagus, green garlic, salad greens and more. Brown Boar Farm from East Wells, Vt. will be selling heritage breed naturally raised pork from 1 to 3 p.m. on Saturday May 29. In addition to plants, you can visit the information table at the plant sale and find out about all that's going on with the Friends of Holly Hill Farm, the non-profit 501(c)(3) that uses the farm as an outdoor classroom. If you become a new member of the Friends at the plant sale, you'll be supporting the education mission of the farm and you'll receive a free tomato plant.

Sign your children up for a summer program where they will learn about growing healthy organic food and have fun outside, unplugged from the TV and the internet, doing farm chores like planting seeds, caring for plants, making compost, caring for animals and will use food grown on the farm to prepare a meal. Preschool age programs begin June 7 and programs for school age children begin June 21 and run through Aug. 12.

Mark your calendar for a nutrition workshop for the whole family, "Good Nutrition for Physical, Mental, and Behavioral Health" on Thursday June 3, at 7 p.m. led by Registered Dietitian, Kerry Hnath. During this interactive lecture, participants will be able to identify healthy from unhealthy fats, learn to make healthy snacks, read food labels, obtain a list of references and resources, and more.

And don't forget about the Spring Organic Gardening Workshop on Saturday, June 12, from 10 a.m. to noon. Come find out how to control invasive bugs, how to organically prevent weeds from getting established and how to maintain and care for your plants so they will survive and thrive. Further plans for the garden and how to reap the benefits of the harvest will also be discussed. For information about all these programs, visit www.hollyhillfarm.org or call 781-383-6565.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF June 7, 2010

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Still operating under a full head of self-esteem makes you want to tackle a matter you had shied away from. OK. But be sure to arm yourself with facts before you make a move.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) That smart move you recently made caught the attention of a lot of people, including some with financial deals to offer. Use your Taurean wariness to check them out thoroughly.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Shyness might keep you from asking for more information on a potentially important matter. But your curiosity grows stronger by midweek and gives you the impetus for data-gathering.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Taking on too many tasks may not be the wise thing to do at this time. You might overspend both your physical and emotional energy reserves, and have to miss out on some upcoming events.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Try to keep your spending at an affordable level. Splurging now — especially on credit — could create a problem if your finances are too low for you to take advantage of a possible opportunity.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) You might not approve of a colleague's behavior during much of the week. But don't play the judgmental Virgo card here. As always, check the facts before you assume the worst.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Coping with an old issue that has suddenly reemerged could take a big toll on your emotional energies. Decide whether you really want to pursue the possibilities here.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) For all your skill in keeping your secrets safe, you could be unwittingly letting one slip out by the way you're behaving in that new relationship. Are congratulations soon to be in order?

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Good old-fashioned horse sense could help you get around those who unknowingly or deliberately put obstacles in your way. Ignore the confusion and follow your own lead.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A puzzling attitude change in a colleague from friendly to chilly might stem from a long-hidden resentment suddenly bubbling up. An open and honest talk should resolve the problem.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) This week, many ever-generous Aquarians might find themselves feeling an acquisitive urge. If so, indulge it. You've earned the right to treat yourself to wonderful things.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Expect to get a lot of advice on how to go about implementing your plans. But once you've sorted it all out, you'll probably find that, once again, your way will be the best way.

BORN THIS WEEK: You enjoy the quiet times of your life, but when you're in the mood, you can throw a party everyone will want to go to.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

NRAS Festival of the Arts: Welcome to the Neighborhood

By Jennifer H. McInerney
CORRESPONDENT

On a quiet, unremarkable day in 1981, a knock on Alden and Connie Mitchell's door changed their annual Memorial Day weekend plans…indefinitely.

On their doorstep stood Willard Robinson, an animated man with traces of paint on his fingertips and an unusual request: could we borrow your barn for our arts festival?

The "we" was the Mitchells' new neighbor, the North River Arts Society, which had just moved its headquarters into the G.A.R. Hall, directly across Old Main Street in Marshfield Hills. At that point, the NRAS had been staging an annual Festival of the Arts for six years on the Grace Ryder School lawn, across from the Marshfield Fairgrounds, but the organizers had visions of a cozier, homier setting for the event.

Fortunately for the NRAS, the Mitchells—along with several of their neighbors—said "yes," and the annual arts festival has taken over the neighborhood during Memorial Day weekend ever since. This year, the North River Arts Society celebrates its 34th Annual Festival of the Arts, on May 29 and 30, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., with juried art, sculpture, and photography exhibits, live entertainment, creative kids' activities, one-of-a-kind artisan wares, delicious food and refreshments.

Initially, the Mitchells' barn housed the children's arts and crafts activities, and later, the photography exhibit. For the last few years, it's been home to the Festival Art Sale.

"We thought it was a wonderful idea for them to use our barn, and we were happy to do it," recalled Connie.

Alden, her late husband, was quick to suggest that the NRAS borrow the Mitchells' side lawn as the central entertainment venue. A few years later, he offered their front lawn when the arts society needed a spot for its information booth.

"He really enjoyed seeing and talking to all the people, and being right in the middle of it all," she said. "I love being able to see all the beautiful juried artwork right across the street inside the G.A.R. Hall."

While the Mitchells' house is very much at the Festival's epicenter, the exhibits, activities, and artisans' booths extend all the way down Old Main Street and around the corner onto Pleasant Street—essentially bookended by the Marshfield Hills General Store and the Clift Rodgers Library. Limited parking is available in the neighborhood; a shuttle bus will travel frequently between the Festival site and a satellite parking lot at the Eames Way Elementary School throughout the weekend.

This year's event will feature a number of new offerings as well as a stellar lineup of live performances, including Jaju; Bob Norton and Billy Mulligan; Kent Corsin and Cranberry Lane; Vision jazz ensemble; The Celtic Ks; and the Marshfield High School and Furnace Brook Middle School jazz bands.

Visitors to this year's Festival will notice additional tents set up in front of the G.A.R. Hall, where the NRAS will be showcasing its revitalization plans for the Hall and the adjacent firehouse. As part of this presentation, Duxbury sculptor Craig Bloodgood has created a special interactive sculpture that collects dollar bills of all denominations in any of 16 slots and then moves them kinetically through the structure, which rocks like a buoy—making the art of donating fun for all who participate.

Admission to the 34th Annual Festival of the Arts is free. For additional information, visit www.northriverarts.org.

And don't miss the Preview Gala on Friday night, May 28, from 7 to 10 p.m. This outdoor soirée offers a sneak peek at this year's selection of beautiful artwork, plus live entertainment by Swing Set and The Gathering, dancing in the street, cocktails, and hors d'oeuvres. Admission to the Preview Gala is $20.

Back to Connie: will she continue to share her property with the North River Arts Society and all of the Festival's visitors for years to come?

"Sure I will. And I'm going to live a long time, they tell me."

Class of 2010 is 'extraordinary'

CHS seniors graduate Saturday, 1:30p.m.

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

By all accounts, the Class of 2010 is one great group of kids.

Academically gifted, athletically talented and full of character to boot, the 90 students that comprise the graduating class of Cohasset High have a lot to be proud of over the last four years.

On Saturday, the Class of 2010 will celebrate those accomplishments and look forward to the new chapter ahead.

Commencement exercises will begin at 1:30p.m. under the green and yellow big top of the South Shore Music Circus.

"They are an excellent group of students that have worked very hard in the classroom and, at the same time, have a lot of character."
— Principal Joel Antolini

Armed with digital cameras and wearing proud smiles, parents, siblings, grandparents, aunts, uncles and friends will arrive early to stake out the good seats right in front.

Members of the school administration, as well as valedictorian Christine Coner, salutatorian Cameron Lucitt and class president, Sean MacCarthy, will leave the Class of 2010 with some parting words of wisdom.

Middle-High School Principal Joel Antolini said the senior class set a positive tone throughout the school all year long.

"They are an excellent group of students that have worked very hard in the classroom and, at the same time, have a lot of character," Antolini said. "They are strong, positive students."

Class president Sean MacCarthy said the first word that comes to mind about his fellow classmates is "extraordinary." Valedictorian Christine Coner said her class is "very well-rounded and accomplished."

"We did it all very well. Throughout our 12 years in Cohasset Public Schools we've just given off a good energy," MacCarthy said.

As an example, he said the senior class helped to revitalize the Homecoming dance this year and made it one of the best-attended dances in Cohasset High history.

Call for reform

Water Planning Group makes recommendations

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

On June 14, a Special Town Meeting will convene to decide the financial fate of the water department.

Weighty questions include requests for a $300,000 Proposition 2-1/2 override and steep rate increases.

The articles in the town meeting warrant address the shorter-term financial issues of the water department, but according to the committee, the measures are only the beginning of a long road to financial recovery.

To start the process of planning for long-term financial stability, this week the Water Planning Group finalized a set of "reform recommendations" for the water department. It is a list of nine items they would like to see accomplished to help get the water department and enterprise fund back on track financially.

These reform recommendations will be presented at the Water Forum being jointly sponsored by the Republican and Democratic Town Committees next Tuesday, June 8 at 7p.m. at the Cohasset High School auditorium and at town meeting (Monday, June 14, 7p.m.).

Some of the items address the question of how the department ended up in this situation and several address ways to ensure it never happens again.

The first is to hire a qualified auditor to look in-depth at the financials and practices of the water department. The specific areas include: verifying the department's financial reports from 2008 to 2010, analyzing the capital spending program from 2004 to the present, reviewing the operating and billing systems, reviewing the management structure of the department and making recommendations for improvements.

Increasing oversight to the water department by the Town Manager, Board of Selectmen, Advisory Committee and Capital Budget Committee is also one of the recommendations. A recommended reform is to provide more detailed budgeting and reporting. re

The Water Planning Group also recommends establishing an "enterprise fund oversight committee," a Selectmen-appointed committee to help

PICTURE PERFECT MEMORIAL DAY

Hundreds pay tribute to those who served

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

"...behind each name is a story — a high-school football hero, a talented guitarist, a loving father, the platoon jokester. Left in each of their wakes is a family marked with a permanent scar, unfulfilled dreams and a vacant place at the dinner table."
— Thomas G. Kelley, keynote speaker

It was a Memorial Day to remember, in more ways than one. A crowd that represented the young and the old and every age in between came out to Veterans Memorial Park in their red, white and blue to honor those who have paid the ultimate sacrifice for the United States.

The patriotic ceremony was marked with gratitude, honor and hundreds of American flags.

A stiff southwesterly breeze helped the flags at the Healing Field and the state flags surrounding Veterans Memorial Park show off their colors. For the first time this year the Fire Department used one of their engines to fly a large American flag over the Healing Field topping off the already striking display.

Folks, many dressed in America's signature colors, arrived on foot, on bike and pushing strollers. They chatted with neighbors and friends while waiting for the parade to arrive at the harbor.

Massachusetts Secretary of Veterans' Services Thomas G. Kelley, who was awarded the Medal of Honor, the highest military decoration our country bestows, was the keynote speaker for the ceremony.

Looking out at the rows of veterans, most of them uniformed, Kelley said he wouldn't dare to try on his Navy uniform, but the sight of his fellow veterans in uniform "(did) the heart good, believe me."

The veterans felt the same about the strong showing from the community. Upon arrival at the harbor one veteran commented to another, "it is amazing for a town of 7,000 how many come out."

The Rusty Skippers arrived at the harbor playing "Stars and Stripes" and the Cohasset High School band followed shortly after with its rendition of "Yankee Doodle Dandy." The parade, stepped off at the Music Circus had wended its way from Central Cemetery down North Main Street and through the village, with several stops to pay tribute at memorials along the way, included were contingents from the Daughters of the American Revolution, boy scouts and girl scouts.

American Legion Commander Stephen Wigmore welcomed the crowd and in particular the veterans who came out to march and be a part of the ceremony.

Relay For Life moves to high school practice field

By Nancy White

Cohasset Relay For Life volunteers light luminaria along the Cohasset High School's track during last year's Relay. At the foreground are luminaria bags that have the names of those who have cancer. The location of this year's event has been moved to the practice field behind the high school.

This year the Relay For Life is moving on up – to a new location.

The new spot is just a few hundred yards and a staircase from the location it has called home for the past 14 years. The practice field behind the Cohasset Middle-High School is slated to host the annual overnight event this year.

A fundraiser for the American Cancer Society, the Relay For Life in Cohasset will take place on Friday, June 11 beginning at 3p.m. and continue into Saturday, June 12 at 10a.m.

The change in location is largely due to last summer's installation of a synthetic turf field at Alumni Field, where the Relay has traditionally been held. The surface of the turf does not allow tents (for overnight walkers to catch some shut eye) to be pitched and spilled food and drink could harm the field.

"With the exception of the new location, the event will be exactly the same," said Harry St. Onge, Relay for Life chairman.

That means Relay highlights like the survivors' lap and Luminaria Walk will still take place. It means hundreds of participants will still come out to walk into the wee hours of the night and there will still be a sense of community and positivity — and thousands of dollars will be raised to support the American Cancer Society.

"Everyone loves having the event in Cohasset, so we wanted to find a way to keep it here," St. Onge said. Although the event takes place in Cohasset it draws participants from the neighboring communities of Hull, Scituate and Hingham.

The Relay organizers have had to make adjustments and improvise on some of the logistics to make the event work in the smaller space. A track will be striped on the field for participants to walk on throughout the 19-hour event.

Pedestrians, visitors, and those with light loads are asked to use the stairway on the right side of the middle-high school, near the gymnasium, to access the back field. Participants unloading tents, or unable to climb the stairs, are asked to access the field from the left side of the building (the middle school side).

Volunteers will be on hand to help direct participants and visitors.

This year's Relay For Life/American Cancer Society theme is to celebrate more birthdays. To follow suit, the organizers have planned a host of entertainment, food and activities. However, St. Onge said, during planning they stayed aware of impact on the neighboring homes.

"We're very cognizant of noise and neighbors," St. Onge said, the bulk of the activity will be kept on one end of the field. Portable lights are being brought in to ensure the safety of participants.

For St. Onge, a cancer survivor, the Relay has a three-fold purpose. First, it is to raise awareness about cancer and the work the American Cancer Society does. Second, it is to get as many people involved as possible.

"We want people to come up and experience the Relay and hope that they want to come back the next year," St. Onge said. "It's a great supportive event for all those touched by cancer."

The third purpose is to raise money for the American Cancer Society. In recent years, the Relay for Life in Cohasset has been able to raise around $100,000.

"We can provide the venue, everyone that come provides the celebration," St. Onge said. "Every year it always works and it is always a great event."

Home Instead SENIOR CARE®

by Alan Carney, Director & Jennifer Moran, CSA, Community Liaison

CAREGIVERS

A non-medical caregiver provides a valuable service to those seniors who have made the decision to "age in place" by remaining in their homes. A provider of quality home care services assumes several roles. They act as the care provider, friend and advocate, and they offer their interpersonal and professional skills to assist in promoting the client's health, sense of belonging and general well-being. Typically, non-medical home care providers offer services that include personal care, cooking and light meal preparation, light housekeeping, transportation to appointments and companionship. They may attend outings and events with the client. They may read and play games with them, assist them with hobbies like gardening and help them with correspondence.

If you've been thinking of hiring a professional caregiver to help your parents stay in their house for longer, please call our office today. We are proud to place compassionate and experienced caregivers who can help take some of the burden off your shoulders. We screen and train our home aides, so you know your parents are getting professional assistance. And we never use independent contractors. Call 781-878-2994 today to learn about our wide variety of services, from occasional overnight respite care to full-time live-in care. We know nobody likes to think about these things, but we're here when you need us. We are located at 145 Washington Street, Suite 11. In-home help for Massachusetts seniors.

P.S. Home care services involve a caregiver coming to the senior's home at set, agreed-upon times.

To you, it's about finding a trusted partner. To us, it's personal.

B&E suspect faces charges

On Saturday, May 29, at about 10:20 p.m., Cohasset Police officers were dispatched to Bia Bistro, 35 South Main St.. A 911 caller was reporting that employees of the bistro had just interrupted a break-in, and a suspect had fled from a locked storage room located in the cellar of the restaurant.

When officers arrived, they spoke to employees who reported that they were cleaning the restaurant after dinner service. One of the employees entered a liquor storage area to replace a keg of beer. He found the room to be open – which was out of the ordinary. It was at that time he encountered an intruder hiding behind a door holding two bottles of liquor. The intruder discarded the liquor and ran from the business down South Main Street. The employee was able to give a complete description of the suspect, including physical features and clothing.

The intruder discarded the liquor and ran from the business down South Main Street.

Other Cohasset officers' soon encountered a male later identified as Michael Jones, 47 years of age, 87A Elm St., Cohasset, a short distance from Bia Bistro. After questioning and a positive identification by witnesses, Jones was arrested and charged with: B&E nighttime with the intent to commit a felony, larceny from a building, and attempting to commit a crime. Jones was held overnight at the Cohasset Police station and later bailed. He was arraigned in Quincy District Court on the above charges on Tuesday (June 1). A pretrial date was scheduled.

Sun glare factor in pedestrian accident

The Cohasset Police Department responded to a report of a female that was struck by a truck in front of the Cohasset American Legion Post located at 98 Summer St. at about 6:45 p.m. on Friday, May 28.

On arrival, officers found a 49-year-old Scituate female lying on the ground approximately 20 feet from the crosswalk. A male, who was later identified as Robert E. Bennett, 52 years of age, from Quincy, was reporting that he was traveling North on Border Street in his 2008 Ford pickup truck when he was blinded by the sun. Bennett went on to say that he was traveling at only about 5 to 10 MPH, then heard a "thump" followed by screaming. He stopped and realized that he had struck a pedestrian that had been crossing the street.

Cohasset Fire Department paramedics treated the victim, who sustained non-life threatening injuries, on scene. She was transported by ambulance to the South Shore Hospital where she was released hours later.

The driver of the truck, Mr. Bennett, was issued a $200 citation for failing to stop for a pedestrian in a crosswalk.

Scituate police said there is a possiliby that sun may have been a factor in a pedestrian accident in Scituate Harbor on May 24 that critically injured a 69-year-old California woman in a crosswalk at First Parish Road and Front Street.

POLICE BEAT

Identity thief racks up $5K in charges

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

A 59-year-old Cohasset man reported to police that his identity had been stolen to open charge accounts in his name for several stores including Target, J.C. Penney, Lowe's and Belk. The resident, who reported the crime at 3:16 p.m. on Friday (May 28), said he received a call from account services at a Target store in Virginia asking if he had made purchases that day. He explained he had not, that he was not even in Virginia but was in Massachusetts. He notified the credit bureaus and filled out an identity theft packet, police said. Upwards of $5,000 had been charged to the different stores, police said. The man, who received a letter a few months ago from another retailer about their computer system security having been breached, believes his personal information may have been compromised at that time.

MV vandalized

A 45-year-old Cohasset woman reported last week that her 2003 Toyota Highlander SUV had been vandalized in her driveway. Police said an egg had been thrown on the door and the side-view mirror had been ripped off and thrown down the street. Police located the mirror. The incident is under investigation and may have been a random act. The woman, who lives on Jerusalem Road, reported the incident at 6:52 a.m. on Monday (May 24).

Disturbance

Police responded to a call about a disturbance on Beechwood Street at about 12:44 a.m. on Tuesday (May 25). Upon arrival, police found a 22-year-old Scituate man, who was staying at the home on Beechwood, and two 19-year-old Scituate girls in a van, listening to the radio. The man had an open container of liquor. He was sent inside the house and police called the parents of the two girls to pick them up.

OUI/alcohol

A 21-year-Hull man is facing a drunken-driving charge following a traffic stop at 12:38 a.m. on Tuesday (May 25) near the intersection of Forest Avenue and Jerusalem Road. An officer clocked the 1999 Ford Explorer on radar as traveling 64 in a 30 mph zone. The officer stopped the vehicle and detected an odor of alcohol on the operator's breath. The operator failed field sobriety tests and was arrested and charged with OUI, police said. He was also charged with negligent operation and speeding. Police also found a bottle of rum in the Explorer, which was towed.

Unlicensed

A 29-year-old Weymouth man, who is formerly from Cohasset, was arrested and charged with operating without a license following a traffic stop at 9:11 p.m. on Sunday (May 30) near Forest Avenue and Cedar Acres Lane. Police said the man was stopped for traveling 45 in a 30 mph zone. Further investigation revealed he had no license and had a lengthy history of motor vehicle violations. He was also charged with speeding.

Larceny

The owner of a local towing business reported last week (Tuesday, May 25) that three trailers and a Fisher plow were missing from the business. The trailers (two 18-footers and a 16-footer) are valued at a total of $6,000 and the plow at $500. The larceny is under investigation, police said. The trailers and plows were not in service and stored away from other machinery so the owner had just noticed they were missing, police said.

Phone bill

A 49-year-old Cohasset woman from Jerusalem Road notified police last Tuesday (May 25) about approximately $269 in charges on her phone bill that she was not responsible for from a long-distance company that provides worldwide calling minutes. She filed a police report and Verizon is crediting her account, police said. The charges on the bill go back to an Internet site that sells the minutes.

Fell off bike

Police called the MBTA to temporarily stop train service after a 16-year-old Hopedale teen fell off his bicycle at the train tracks at the grade crossing on North Main Street on Tuesday (May 25) at about 8:17 p.m. Police said the boy apparently did not follow the "go-around" for bikes; his tire got trapped in the tracks and he went over the handlebars. He was not transported but treated at the scene by paramedics for a cut on his chin. He was wearing a helmet, police said.

Possible scam

An Atlantic Avenue resident notified police about a possible scam after receiving a call from a group, dubbed, "Veterans for Afghanistan," asking for a minimum of $500 for care packages. Police recommend that residents also contact the state Attorney General's Office when checking on a non-profit organization. Police have had no other reports to date about this group. The resident called at 7:06 a.m. on Wednesday (May 26).

Summonses

• A 23-year-old Scituate man is being summonsed to court for operating after license suspension and speeding following a traffic stop at 6:32 p.m. on Wednesday (May 26) on Cedar Street. An officer stopped the 1996 Jeep Grand Cherokee the man was driving for traveling 45 in a 30 mph zone. A registry check showed his license had been suspended for non-payment of traffic tickets (moving violations). The Jeep was towed.

• A 37-year-old Scituate man in a white Ford pickup is being summonsed for operating after license suspension and speeding after being stopped for traveling 43 in a 30 mph zone at about 3:14 p.m. on Saturday (May 29) on Forest Avenue. A computer check showed the man's license was suspended for traffic violations in Maine. Massachusetts has reciprocity agreements with all the New England states – so if a motorist's license to operate is suspended in another state – it is also suspended in Massachusetts, police said. The pickup truck was towed.

Fish blood

A concerned citizen notified police at 5:55 a.m. on Friday (May 28) about a fresh pool of blood on the sidewalk on Border Street near Atlantica. Further investigation by an officer who is also a fishing expert revealed the blood was from a fish.

Road rage

Police talked to the operator of a scooter and a pickup truck driver after receiving a complaint from the truck driver that the man on the scooter was traveling south on Route 3A; was holding up traffic near 3A and Beechwood Street; and the operator displayed some kind of weapon when the caller said something to him. The incident was called in at 5:10 p.m. on Friday (May 28).

Police said the operator on the scooter, a 31-year-old Scituate man, waved his fist at the other driver. There was no weapon and the scooter operator said the pickup had cut him off. The officer talked to both parties and they were sent on their way.

Public drinking

Several parents were warned about drinking at a lacrosse game last Friday (May 28) at 8:20 p.m. at the high school off Pond Street. A concerned caller notified police after seeing the spectators drinking. Police explained to the parents it was not proper and that alcohol is not allowed on school grounds.

Harassing calls

A Cohasset woman reported receiving harassing calls. The calls have been reported to the phone company, which can trap the calls if they continue, police said. The complaint came in at about 10:30 a.m. on Saturday (May 29) from a Pleasant Street resident.

Cohasset native releases first book

After two years in the making, the much anticipated release of Ms. Karyn Gray's first book, "Black Sheep: An unconventional look at good ol' family values," is set for June 4. The book is a collection of photographs, stories, and reflections on family from the perspective of individuals involved in underground scenes, aiming to challenge the presumption that people involved in these cultures come from unstable homes or have poor family values.

This 9-inch by 9-inch coffee table/photo book is a compilation of quotes and stories from over 70 people from many sub-cultures and "alternative" scenes, including hardcore, punk, graffiti, metal, hip hop, and tattoo culture. In most cases, the contributors have also included either photos of themselves with their families or childhood shots to give the reader a closer, more personal look into their lives. The book also boasts over 100 additional photos depicting subcultures and subculture participants' families, including shots from photographers like Susie Horgan, Heather McGrath, Scott Wade, Gordon Ball, Susan Moss, Paul Stewart, and Jamie Siever.

The main contributors include A-Trak, Andrew W.K., Mr. Dibbs, Chuck Comeau (Simple Plan), Classified, Danny Diablo, Darryl Jenifer (Bad Brains), Dave Brockie (Gwar), Dave Ellefson (Megadeth), Freddy Madball, Henry Rollins (Black Flag), Ian MacKaye (Minor Threat), Melissa Auf der Maur (Hole, Smashing Pumpkins), Robert LaSardo, Roger Miret (Agnostic Front), and Sage Francis. There are also plenty of "local" contributors, including Tripp Underwood of The Unseen (from Hingham), Johnny Cupcakes (from Hull), and Greg Weeks of The Red Chord (from Norwell).

Karyn Gray grew up in Cohasset and graduated from Cohasset High School in 1999. She received a bachelor of arts degree in English Cultural Studies from McGill University in Montreal, where she continues to live. She has worked as the editor-in-chief of Under Pressure Magazine, a staff writer for Beautiful/Decay Magazine, and a contributing music and culture journalist for an array of others, including Outburn, Hails & Horns, and Skin Deep. Her involvement in various underground cultures has catalyzed her desire to change people's perspectives regarding this subject matter. Black Sheep, a completely "do it yourself" project since its inception, will be self-published and distributed through Karyn's own company, GraySideProjects. It will be available for purchase on her website's store at www.graysideprojects.com.

oversee the sewer and water enterprise funds.

Already rolling as of this week is to shake up the structure of the Water Commission. The Water Commission was scheduled to meet on Wednesday night (June 2) to discuss potentially reorganizing the board. Water Commission member John McNabb has just announced his resignation (see sidebar).

The Water Planning Group will keep tabs on how the water rates are affecting the bottom line and further discuss whether moving toward an emphasis on the fixed quarterly charge would improve the predictability of revenue forecasting and more closely align with the department debt service obligations.

As far as future capital expenditures, the Water Planning Group would like to see each project have a specified source of revenue to pay for the asset. This reform is reflected in the Article 8, capital improvement requests (see below), which will call for a $3.50 increase in the fixed rate in fiscal 2012.

Other recommendations include creating a team within the Water Planning Group to review the contract with American Water Works, the company that runs the water plans and distribution system and establishing another Selectmen-appointed committee to review and make recommendations on how to improve water quality.

The Water Planning Group will continue to meet after Town Meeting. One of their focuses, according to the reform recommendations, is to review alternative governing structures for water and sewer departments and potentially make a recommendation at a future town meeting.

How to figure out what your increase could be

Look at a previous water bill to find out your typical water usage in a given quarter. Look at the column "cubic feet." Divide that number by 100. Plug that number in (USAGE) for the equation below.

For a typical four-person home on Tier 1 with a one-inch (or less) water meter:

(Fixed rate) $187 + (Charge per 100 cubic feet) $5.68 x (USAGE) = proposed new water quarterly bill.

John McNabb resigns from Water Commission

As of Wednesday evening, long-time Water Commissioner John McNabb resigned from his role. He cited personal reasons, "the time demands of building my business, South Shore PC Services, has kept me from devoting as much of my time to the Water Commission as I had in the past."

McNabb has served on the Board of Water Commissioners since 1997 and served 8 of those years as chairman.

"I am proud of all the accomplishments I was able to help make in my 13 years on the Water Commission, which included the construction of the Scituate Hill Water Storage Tank, our successful fire hydrant restoration program, and the replacement or rehabilitation of over 50 percent of the town's water mains, which has dramatically improved fire flows and water services throughout Cohasset."

THE SIX WATER ARTICLES

Article 4: Transfer from Stabilization Fund

Proposes a $335,000 transfer from the town's stabilization fund to the water enterprise fund to partially cover the fiscal 2010 (current years) shortfall.

Article 5: Amendment to Fiscal 2011 Operating Budget

Proposes a Proposition 2-1/2 override of $300,000 to pay for hydrant operation, maintenance and fire protection. The funds will go into the Fire Department budget. The hydrant maintenance cost is currently a part of water users bills. If approved at Town Meeting, the question will also have to pass muster at a ballot vote.

If the override fails to pass at the town meeting article level or at the ballot box, a water usage rate increase of 33 percent is proposed to cover the shortfall (with the override the increase in water usage rates is 10 percent).

Article 6: Water rates and charges

The proposal included a $75 increase in the fixed quarterly charge for most homeowners ($300 annually), and calls for an increase in the water usage charge. For Tier 1 users (those who use less than 2,000 cubic feet per quarter), the water usage rate will be $5.68. The tier 2, for all water used over and above 2,000 cubic feet per quarter, is $11.35.

The increases in the usage rate is about 10 percent. The expected motion for Article 6 includes a condition to increase water usage charge by 33 percent. Otherwise, town services will need to be cut to cover the projected deficit.

Article 7: Water Department Budget

Proposed a budget of $4,682,109 for fiscal 2011 and projects $4,739,221 in revenues yielding a potential small gain of $57,112.

Article 8: Water Department Capital Improvement Projects

A total of $300,000 in capital projects will be requested of Town Meeting for three projects. First, a new scheme for the sludge lagoons, which hold the waste products of the treatment process, is requested for $100,000. It is expected this new scheme would pay for itself in a year's time. Second, $50,000 is needed to implement a "phosphate program" at the water plant to improve the issues of discolored water.

And last, $150,000 is proposed to wrap up the remaining items of the Little Harbor project. More information was requested on this item, so it may not be recommended for a vote at Town Meeting.

The committee proposing paying for these capital improvements through an estimated $3.50 increase in the fixed rate for the next year (fiscal 2012).

Article 9: Water Enterprise Fund

Proposes an amendment to the article that established the water enterprise fund by providing for joint management by the Water Commission and the Town Manager. Identical language to what is being proposed is currently in the sewer enterprise fund charter.

Town-wide forum on Water Department deficits

Cohasset Republican and Democratic town committees are jointly sponsoring a town wide forum to inform and educate the public regarding the Water Department deficits that need to be addressed at the Special Town Meeting, which will take place in Cohasset on June 14, 2010. The forum itself will be conducted by the Cohasset Water Planning Group. The forum will consist of a review and briefing by the Water Planning Group regarding the contents of the upcoming June 14 Town Meeting with regard to Cohasset Water Department issues such as approving the new water rate structure, the Water Department's fiscal 2011 budget, related capital improvement projects and a change in the governance of the Water Department.

The forum will take place on June 8, at Cohasset High School commencing at 7p.m.

All concerned Cohasset citizens are urged to attend this public forum to gain a full and proper understanding of the issues related to the Water Department and the findings of the Cohasset Water Planning group prior to voting at the June 14 Special Town Meeting. The Water Planning Group will also be available to answer questions from attendees.

Teachers speak out

Union says communication and collaboration are lacking

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

For the teachers of the Cohasset Public Schools communication and collaboration are the hallmarks of a successful learning environment and school system.

And, according to a statement given by the Cohasset Teachers' Association at Wednesday night's School Committee meeting, neither communication nor collaboration is happening at an effective level in the school district currently.

The highly critical statement of the school leadership and various decisions and changes made over the past few months and years was buoyed by the presence of the more than 40 teachers in a standing-room-only meeting room.

School Committee chair Helene Lieb allowed the statement to be read to the entire board, but did not allow comment or discussion on its content. The School Committee voted 4-0 (member Paul Schubert abstained from the vote) to allow the teacher, representing the teachers' union, to speak.

Ninth-grade English teacher Carolyn Crimmins, a nine-year veteran of Cohasset Schools and a member of the teachers' association executive board gave the statement. The statement, she said, reflected discussions held by teachers throughout the district on the challenges and concerns facing the schools.

"Our vision centers on these two, core values: collaboration and communication. We have seen success when these values were employed. However, when not employed, an erosion of the education quality has occurred," Crimmins said, indicating later, through specific examples, that that kind of erosion was occurring in the school system.

The presentation came somewhat as a surprise to the non-teacher members of the audience as it was not on the School Committee's posted agenda. The fact the teachers' union wanted to make a statement on their vision for Cohasset schools had previously been discussed at the May 19 meeting of the school committee, but at the time the committee concluded it was discussion best suited for the upcoming five-year strategic planning process to begin in the fall.

The three-page written statement gave specific examples of where there was a lack of respect for teacher input, and suggestions were disregarded and frequently ignored.

The shift this year from a traditional department head model to a program supervisor model was given as example number one.

"We saw a change from departments overseen by teachers who had some administrative duties to administrators who sometimes teach. If this distinction seems minor, believe me it is not," Crimmins said. "Under the new approach, we have seen a collapse of collaboration."

Crimmins said decisions were made "top-down" with little solicitation of input from the teachers and then announced with "little or no clear rationale."

One of the cases in point was the changes made to the high school program of studies (the list of available courses for the next school year) this year. Crimmins said input was asked too late and if teachers made suggestions they did not impact the final decisions.

Teachers felt slighted as well when a decision was made to blend college prep and honors level classes at the high school.

"Teachers were not consulted, but rather told the decision was a done deal. When teachers then tried to express concern, the concerns were not acted upon," Crimmins said.

A fourth example of failed collaboration was in committee work, where teachers are asked to provide time and expertise to specific areas (professional development, curriculum revision, standards-based progress report, etc.).

"Time and again, teachers who served on any of these committees often found that suggestions and recommendations put forth by teachers were rejected and that decisions to be made based on the committee's work had, in fact, already been made," Crimmins said.

Crimmins also said the lack of communication has impacted the finances of the school system. When changes were made to the high school schedule two years ago, proper communication did not occur, the teachers raised concerns and the disagreement ended up in arbitration. The schedule changes ended up being reversed.

"The Cohasset teachers envision a school district based upon transparency in decision making, honest communication, and valued collaboration. We envision a professional learning community in action not just words," Crimmins said. "However, teachers voices are slowly but surely being removed from the process of deciding what is most beneficial for our students. If the current trend continues, the Cohasset teachers believe it will be to the detriment of our students and the community."

The statement concluded with the hope that the concerns and visions would be received in a constructive manner, "so that we may move forward as a school community to ensure the best education for our students."

The statement was met with a round of applause from the audience.

The School Committee members did not make any comment on the content of the statement immediately following.

Later in the meeting, it was discussed that the concerns of the teachers would be best addressed during the strategic plan process where all stakeholders (parents, students, teachers, administrators and the community) could be heard.

The "strategic plan" is a set of goals and objectives for the next five years. The school department recently reported on the progress made in the last five years since the first strategic plan was set.

School Committee member Paul Schubert said a discussion between the full school board and the executive board of the Cohasset Teachers Union could be "construed as collective bargaining" and opening negotiations. He abstained from the vote that led to the teachers' association statement being presented.

Superintendent contract not extended

The Superintendent of Schools Denise Walsh will serve her last day in Cohasset Public Schools on June 30, 2011.

As the first order of business at Wednesday night's School Committee meeting, the committee voted unanimously to accept Walsh's letter of resignation of two weeks ago and not extend her contract beyond June 30, 2011.

A formal letter notifying the superintendent of the committee's vote will be sent.

Although the School Committee received the letter at its last meeting, shortly before her annual performance review, they did not vote to accept the letter of resignation or extend (not extend) her contract.

According to Walsh's contract an evaluation must be completed 30 days prior to the contract renewal date (July 1), but the committee has until June 30 to notify the superintendent if they do not intend to renew her contract for another year.

A Boston Globe article in last Sunday's edition cast doubt on whether Superintendent Walsh was really leaving at the end of the 2010-2011 school year because of the lack of a formal vote on the contract extension.

School Committee vice chair Alfred Slanetz thanked Walsh for her service to the town.

"I'd like to add we are grateful for the contributions she has made over the last six years," Slanetz said. "She has brought the district to level which is pretty extraordinary."

None of the other School Committee members made additional comments.

ANNIVERSARY

Donald and Mary Kennedy on their wedding day 50 years ago.

Kennedys celebrate 50 years of marriage

Donald Bernard Kennedy and Mary Josephine Kennedy of Cohasset, Massachusetts, celebrate 50 years of marriage on June 4, 2010.

Mary, originally from Dorchester, and Don, born and raised in Cohasset, met at Elm Farms Supermarket in Dorchester where they both worked. After several years of dating they were married at St Kevin's in Dorchester. The newlyweds honeymooned in Nantucket and lived briefly in Scituate before returning to Don's hometown of Cohasset where they now reside.

Don is a graduate of Boston University and, after several years in the Navy, during which time he served in the Korean War, went on to have a successful career in advertising and sales in the electronics industry. Now retired, he spends his time fishing, hunting, boating, and gardening. He can be seen frequently around Cohasset Village with his faithful dog, Misha, in tow, and usually with one or more of his granddaughters.

Mary graduated from Boston State Teachers' College and taught fifth and sixth grade for several years. She went on to teach English and Business Writing at Quincy Junior College, earned her masters from Boston University and has enjoyed teaching at Northeastern University, Boston University and currently, Suffolk University. She also became a tour director, traveling the globe and leading groups of sightseers to Europe, Latin America and the Far East. She is the carilloneur at St. Stephen's Church, an avid pianist and continues to travel whenever she can.

Daughter Jocelyn Kennedy Langford and husband Craig of Charleston, S.C. and son Benjamin Kennedy, wife Laura, and grandchildren, Elle, Annaliese, and Celia of Cohasset, as well as many family and friends, wish them continued health and happiness.

High school assistant principal Mike Gill spoke highly of the Class of 2010.

"As the Assistant Principal at Cohasset High School and having spent 30 years in this school as a teacher and administrator, I can honestly say, this is one of the best groups of kids that I have seen come through here," Gill said.

"Their collective good-natured and compliant personality have made it a joy to come to work each day," he said.

Members of the Class of 2010 led the school to several league titles and state championships. The class has had many accomplishments on the field, on the stage and in the classroom. Principal Antolini will highlight the graduates many individual and collective achievements at the ceremony.

"In the four years our class has been here, Cohasset sports have done really well," Christine Coner, valedictorian, said. She was a part of the first Cohasset High softball team to win a sectional title. The girls' basketball is another notable; they won two state titles in the last four years.

More than what they've done is what they are poised to do.

"I'm really proud of my class. I think we're a class that is really branching out," said salutatorian Cameron Lucitt. Many are leaving Cohasset to fly across the country or go out of state for their next adventure. Lucitt and Coner are among them; both will attend the University of Southern California in the fall. "We ready to go out into the world."

But, at the same time, much of the class has been together since kindergarten and it is hard to leave friends and this small town behind.

"I'm definitely going to miss seeing everyone all the time. It's hard to stay in contact with people, but I have faith in my class that we'll be able to stay in touch," Lucitt said.

"We're going to be savoring the last moments in Cohasset. Cohasset is a really special place and that's something we all might have taken for granted before now," Coner said.

Be rest assured, graduation day isn't going to be the last we hear of the Class of 2010.

"This class is going to accomplish entirely new feats on an entirely different level," MacCarthy said, and he is very confident.

OPINION

Hats off to our graduates

Twelve years ago when the Class of 2010 entered the first grade – there were some fearful moments as our youngsters embarked on their school years. We doubt if any of those first-graders were thinking about graduating from high school back then. More likely, their thoughts were about meeting their teacher, checking out their desk, what was for lunch, and getting back home for a few hours of play with friends.

But time has moved on. Those years at Osgood and Deer Hill now seem like a flash – then middle school came and went, and now four years of high school will soon be a memory.

Saturday, graduation day, will be a day filled with emotion.

There will be excitement — even elation, nostalgia, nervousness, sadness, and pride.

Graduates will move their mortarboard tassels from right to left once the diplomas are awarded. Hugs and high-fives, tears, shouts and lots of photographs will follow graduation.

The Class of 2010 has much to be proud of.

With all the work they have put in over four years of high school – they have earned this day and all that goes along with it.

But we urge the graduates to use their commonsense. They are much loved and respected. Their school, town, family and friends all wish them the best and look ahead to the future with anticipation and pride.

We know the graduates have much to look forward to not only this summer but in their college and working careers.

However, all that will be for naught if our graduates do not employ good judgment.

Partying with alcohol and or drugs can lead to nothing good. One night of what seems like a blast with a few friends can all too often result in tragedy with dreams ending and hopes dashed.

Here at the Cohasset Mariner, we congratulate the Class of 2010. We wish them all the best. We know their future is bright.

But making good decisions about their own health and behavior is an integral part of moving forward.

Parents: please talk to your graduates. Alcohol and drugs are not worth the price of a potential tragedy.

We have smart kids here in Cohasset – they just do not come any other way. They have had a first-class education.

We have all watched the Class of 2010 grow from those tentative first days of elementary school to confident seniors ready to stride to the podium and receive their hard-earned diplomas.

We have watched them on the playing fields, on the stage, in numerous clubs, tackling a range of projects, at dances, in the stands cheering on their fellow classmates, and so much more. Endless homework assignments, MCAS exams and AP courses are all part of most students' resumes.

Middle-High School Principal Joel Antolini said the senior class set a positive tone throughout the school all year long.

"They are an excellent group of students that have worked very hard in the classroom and, at the same time, have a lot of character," he said. "They are strong, positive students."

We applaud each and every one of the members of the CHS Class of 2010.

We hope they enjoy the moment, enjoy graduation, enjoy their summer — but we ask them to please use all that brainpower to make good choices.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Wonderful tribute to fallen heroes

TO THE EDITOR:

It was an honor to attend Cohasset's Healing Field flag ceremony sponsored by Legion Post 118 on Saturday. I'm positive it is the first time I have driven deeper into your beautiful town than the football field or the Music Circus.

We attended at the invitation of a police officer, veteran, and participant in the ceremony, Garrett Hunt, and his wife Kerrie. We were accompanied by other members of the Pembroke Military Support Group.

My wife, Cheryl, and I are "Gold Star" parents, having lost our 22-year-old son, PFC Matthew Bean, 3 years ago on Memorial Day. His flag stood proudly. While nothing apart from the love of God slows our tears, your ceremony truly was a healing one. To see those flags and hear the words from the various speakers was breathtaking to say the least! And, yes, the bagpipes always bring back the tears.

My only criticism: while the event was thoroughly and proudly attended by veterans' groups, parents, politicians, and the Legion motorcycle club...where was Cohasset? You missed a wonderful, fitting tribute to our fallen heroes and our great Nation on a beautiful day! Next year, please attend with your families; you will be blessed!

Thank you Cohasset and the Hunt family!

COMMENTARY

ADRIENNE MACCARTHY

...the way it was done yesterday may not be the most efficient or effective way to do something today.

This letter is in response to a commentary in last week's paper, which was a letter to the Cohasset School Committee. Unfortunately or fortunately, depending upon where you sit on the issues at hand, this is not the "private sector" and, Massachusetts General Laws specifically delineate the powers of the Superintendent of Schools as well as the powers bestowed on members of a School Committee. Thus, I am sure the current members of the School Committee will be able to clearly define how they will operate until June 2011 (currently, the end date of the Superintendent's contract). The sooner they seek advice from M.A.S.C. (Mass. Association of School Committees) on this subject the better so our school district can continue to move forward in the positive direction it is currently in.

As for the initiative to eliminate the Department Head model in favor of a newer, more forward thinking model called Program Supervisors, this was not originally put for as a "money-saving restructuring." The savings from this restructuring was an added benefit to this new model. And, at the end of the day, savings prevent lay-offs and help with modest cost-of-living increases.

The Program Supervisor model was put forth first and foremost as a way to move our schools forward with 21st century thinking and skills weaved throughout our curriculum.

Some facts: similar to the Department Head model, the program supervisor has some teaching responsibilities (4 of 10 sections), develops budget and evaluates faculty. However, the big differences are the Program Supervisor is NOT part of the teachers' bargaining unit; he/she reports to the Superintendent, has an Administrative Certification and a contract. They are also responsible for aligning the scope and sequence of curriculum grades 6-12 (K-12 for Fine Arts), add/review elective offerings, the integration of curriculum as well as scheduling staff. Currently, there are three Program Supervisors. The areas are: Humanities which includes Social Studies, Foreign Language plus English; S.T.E.M. which includes Science, Technology, Engineering and Math; and Fine Arts.

The vision was/is more leadership with more responsibility with fewer people. Driving the change was/is the integration of curriculum, which one would consider ad-hoc in the past. Change within any organization is not taken easily; especially, when a model has been used for decades such as the department-head model. However, these are changing times; today's world is dramatically different and ever changing than when we went to school.

To keep up with those changes schools need to change; the way it was done yesterday may not be the most efficient or effective way to do something today. Autonomy is no longer an option if you what to be efficient and effective in the classroom of today. For instance, weaving or aligning what is being taught in ninth-grade English into ninth-grade Social Studies and then into the Arts will allow the subject matter to come alive and bring relevance to the students.

The change from the department-head structure to the program supervisor structure allows for that alignment of the curriculum, as well as for teacher assessments/ evaluations which in turn allows for the schools to identify the areas in need of greater support so that the teacher(s) who needs it can access professional development which will help them deliver the rigor and relevance our students need to be successful in the classroom and world of today. The changes, which have been implemented in Cohasset, are considered best practices in world of public education today.

Do we want to be considered gatekeepers of the past? Or, do we want to continue our commitment towards excellence?

Adrienne MacCarthy lives at 85 Doane St. She is a former member and chairman of the School Committee.

Crossing gate failure handled quickly

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Drifter in the water.

COURTESY PHOTOS

Lightning struck gate.

Drift pattern.

Greenbush Miscellaneous – Early Thursday morning of last week, while we were out for our early morning constitutional, we had occasion to notice that there was a crossing gate failure at the Pleasant Street Greenbush crossing. We arrived just as a train was approaching. Three of the gates were operating normally; one of them was stuck in an almost up position and was motionless. The train approached very slowly and tooted its horn, stopping just before the crossing. The conductor got off the train with a red flag and went into the crossing. Only after he was sure the tracks were clear did he signal the train to proceed. The horn tooted again and the train crept across the crossing. When the train locomotive had passed to the other side of the crossing, the conductor re-boarded the train and it sped on its way.

We might also mention that there was a repair crew on sight already working on the gate equipment. In speaking with the repair crew, it seems that the massive lightning storm that Wednesday night may have taken its toll on the gate equipment. What was really great to see was that the MBTA already had a crew on site, they effected a prompt repair and that the train observed their safety protocol for when the gates failed to operate normally.

Interesting CSCR Project – Last week we received an interesting email from Jack Buckley, President of the Cohasset Students for Coastal Research, about a current project at the Center. In fact, it was so interesting we thought you might also like to know about it. The basic idea was to join in a project sponsored by NOAA's (National Oceanographic and Atmospheric Administration) National Marine Fisheries Service that was designed to track the surface currents of the ocean.

Last April, the CSCR students spent their spring vacation building "drifters." Drifters are floating devices that have sails under water that will catch the surface currents. The photo shows what the drifter looks like floating in the water. You will notice the drifter has floats at the ends of each of four arms. Suspended below the arms are the "sails" that catch the surface currents. The currents will move the drifters around.

Each drifter has a transponder in the center that allows periodic measurements of the drifter's position through its present GPS coordinates. The actual data and photos of the drifter construction can be viewed at CSCR's web site: www.cscr.org.

Two drifters were released in Massachusetts Bay offshore from Cohasset on May 21st. The picture shows the interesting pattern traced by the drifters until they ultimately went ashore on June 1st. For most of their trip the drifters tracked each other quite closely. Toward the end of their journey, they separated, one ending up in Marblehead, the other in Manchester.

Although this first CSCR drifter project was part of a NOAA-sponsored activity, there is a very important local benefit. This whole drifter project is really the outgrowth of the State of the Harbor Forum held last January. The drifters constructed by CSCR and the drifter technology will become a valuable tool to study the surface currents in the Cohasset Harbor. This holds the promise for us to better understand the motion of water in the Cohasset Harbor. We're sure we'll hear more from CSCR as their work advances.

Jacobs Meadow Project – While we are on the subject of the harbor, this leads us right into the new outfall from Jacobs Meadow Project. As we've mentioned, the channel next to the Legion building will be replaced and a new tide gate will be installed in the harbor. We have been communication with the abutters regarding the urgency of this project due to the collapsing wall. Their support is critical so that we can have contractor access to the areas where construction will take place.

Late last week we received the "Final Draft" bid specifications and plans from the engineer. We are currently reviewing them and plan to meet with the engineer later this week to pass along our comments. After the plans and specifications are complete, they will be placed out to bid, as required by our procurement rules. Construction will be on a tight schedule so we can begin late summer or early fall and have time to conclude before the snow flies when construction becomes more difficult (and expensive). We will keep you posted as this critical project progresses.

HEALTH NOTES

Summer food handling guidelines

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Memorial Day is over and it's time to address the important events we are going to attend or host this summer. Doubtless, many will involve eating or serving foods. During warm weather, it is especially important to take extra precautions and practice safe food handling when preparing perishable foods such as meat, poultry, seafood and egg products. Warmer weather conditions may be ideal for outdoor picnics and barbecues, but they also provide a perfect environment for bacteria and other pathogens in food to multiply rapidly and cause food borne illness. Follow the suggestions below to fight food borne bacteria and reduce the risk of food borne illness this summer.

Wash more often. Always wash your hands with warm water and soap for at least 20 seconds before and after handling food.

Marinating Mandate. Always marinate food in the refrigerator. Don't use sauce that was used to marinate raw meat or poultry on cooked food. Boil used marinade before applying to cooked food.

Hot, Hot, Hot. When grilling foods, preheat the coals on your grill for 20 to 30 minutes, or until the coals are lightly coated with ash. Use a food thermometer to ensure that food reaches a safe internal temperature.

Recommended Temperatures Hamburgers should be cooked to 160 ºF, while large cuts of beef such as roasts and steaks may be cooked to 145 ºF for medium rare or to 160 ºF for medium. Poultry must reach a temperature of 165 ºF. Fish should be opaque and flake easily.

Don't Reuse the Same Plate without washing and sterilizing. When taking foods off the grill, do not put cooked food items back on the same plate that held raw food, unless it has been washed with hot, soapy water first. And in hot weather (above 90 ºF) foods should never sit out for more than one hour before going in the refrigerator.

Refrigeration Innovation. A full cooler will maintain its cold temperatures longer than one that is partially filled so it is important to pack plenty of extra ice or freezer packs to ensure a constant cold temperature. Keep the cooler out of the direct sun. Keep cold food cold. Place cold food in a cooler with ice or frozen gel packs. Cold food should be stored at 40 ºF or below to prevent bacterial growth. Meat, poultry and seafood may be packed while still frozen so that they stay colder longer.

Organize cooler contents. Consider packing beverages in one cooler and perishable foods in another. That way, as picnickers open and reopen the beverage cooler to replenish their drinks, the perishable foods won't be exposed to warm outdoor air temperatures.

Keep coolers closed. Once at the picnic site, limit the number of times the cooler is opened as much as you can. thus keeping the contents cold longer.

Don't cross-contaminate. Be sure to keep raw meat, poultry and seafood securely wrapped, keeping their juices from contaminating prepared, cooked foods or foods that will be eaten raw, like fruits and vegetables.

Clean Produce. Rinse fresh fruits and vegetables under running tap water before packing them in the cooler — include skins and rinds that are not eaten. Rub firm-skinned fruits and vegetables under running tap water or scrub with a clean vegetable brush while rinsing. Dry fruits and vegetables with a clean cloth towel or paper towel. Packaged fruits and vegetables that are labeled "ready-to-eat," "washed," or "triple washed" need not be washed.

Safe Grilling Tips As in cooking indoors, several important guidelines should be followed:

- Marinate safely. Marinate foods in the refrigerator - never on the kitchen counter or outdoors. In addition, if you plan to use some marinade as a sauce on the cooked food, reserve a portion separately before adding the raw meat, poultry, or seafood. Don't reuse marinade.
- Partial Cooking. If you partially cook food to reduce grilling time, do so immediately before the food goes on the hot grill. Have a food thermometer available. Always use it to be sure your food is cooked thoroughly.
- Don't reuse platters or utensils. Using the same platter or utensils that previously held raw meat, poultry or seafood allows bacteria from the raw food's juices to spread to the cooked food. Instead, have a clean platter and utensils ready at grill-side to serve your food. Generally, it's not a good idea to make your guests sick.

'Pedal Partners' to share their stories

Hingham PMC Kids Ride is June 13

COMMENTARY

LESLIE LAKIS

Jacqueline Desai, 16, was recently diagnosed with osteosarcoma, a bone cancer.

COURTESY PHOTOS

Nikolas Lakis, a cancer survivor, joins two other local children stricken by the disease as PMC Kids Pedal Partners.

Five-year-old Catrina Herman, of Cohasset, also a Pedal Partner, was stricken with Wilm's Tumor, a form of kidney cancer, in March of last year.

Watching my son fight his way through cancer was the hardest thing I have ever done. It is something that no parent should ever have to go through but, hundreds of parents do it every day and hundreds more will join those ranks before a cure is found. But what if, one day there was no more cancer? What if, one-day cancer took its place next to polio and chicken pox and could be thwarted by simply getting a shot or taking a pill? Scientists and doctors around the world work tirelessly to find the cause and develop the cure, but millions of dollars are needed to continue this mission and provide them with the resources necessary for success.

On Sunday, June 13, the Pan-Mass Challenge (PMC) Hingham Kids Ride fundraising event, will take place in Wompatuck State Park. The bike ride, created for children ages 3 to 15, supports the Pan-Mass Challenge, a two-day, 190 mile bike-a-thon for adults whose mission is raising money for cancer research and treatment at Boston's Dana-Farber Cancer Institute through the Jimmy Fund.

Over 400 South Shore children will ride one of five routes, depending on their comfort and skill levels. For the youngest cyclists, the Tykes Loop around the Hingham High School parking lot hosts so many little ones that it's likened to a NASCAR Rally. For riders who are ready for the "open road" there are two paved routes, the 1-mile Crusader loop and the 4-mile Challenger Loop and, for the first time, kids 8-12 who prefer the wooded trails, can go off-road on the Blazers Loop while those who are more experienced, between the ages of 13 and 15, can try the Mountaineer Loop. Each route gives each child a chance to participate and learn the importance of doing for others.

To reinforce the event's significance, my 8-year-old son, Nikolas, a cancer survivor, joins two other local children stricken by the disease as PMC Kids Pedal Partners, sharing their stories, strength and inspiration with the hundreds of young cyclists.

Each route gives each child a chance to participate and learn the importance of doing for others.

"This is a chance for kids to learn how important it is to help others," explains Marybeth Desai, whose 16-year-old daughter, Jacqueline was recently diagnosed with osteosarcoma, a bone cancer, and is one of this year's Pedal Partners.

"I have volunteered for the past three Kids Rides. One year I brought Jacqueline with me. She wasn't very happy about being there, getting up early on a Sunday to watch hundreds of kids ride bikes, but now that she is sick, it makes a lot more sense," says Marybeth.

Just as the cyclists range in age from 3-15, so to do the children afflicted with cancer. Five-year-old Catrina from Cohasset, also a Pedal Partner, was stricken with Wilm's Tumor, a form of kidney cancer, in March of last year and after almost a year of treatment, has been declared cancer free. Catrina's mom, Jeri Herman is no stranger to fundraising for the fight against cancer. She has supported the Jimmy Fund and Dana-Farber in the past.

"In 2004 I ran the marathon as a member of the Dana-Farber team and I also pulled a team together for the 26 mile Jimmy Fund Walkathon. Who knew," she says, "that my family would one day be receiving instead of giving."

Both moms had stories to tell, demonstrating the exceptional physical and emotional care they received at Dana-Farber.

"For them it is not just about saving lives," Jeri explains. "It's about the quality of life as well. They are concerned about both."

"In the hospital we see how the dollars are used. From things as important as treatment and child life programs to transportation for the patients to and from outside activities," says Marybeth. "It all means so much."

It certainly does and without events like the PMC Hingham Kids Ride, heightening awareness and raising money, it might not be possible.

The PMC Hingham Kids Ride starts at 9 a.m., on Sunday, June 13, at the Wompatuck State Park's Visitor Center, 204 Union St., Hingham. A post ride party will follow with refreshments, entertainment and raffle. To register your child to ride or to be a volunteer for the event go to kids.pmc.org/hingham. There is a $10 registration fee and a suggested $50 donation, both of which benefit the Dana-Farber Cancer Institute's Jimmy Fund. For any questions, please email pmchingham@comcast.net.

Helping Haiti

Two doctors volunteer to help earthquake stricken country

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Two Cohasset doctors — an emergency room physician and an orthopedic surgeon — recently volunteered with Partners In Health to provide medical care in the wake of the devastating earthquake in Haiti.

Dr. Michael Hughes, an ER doctor at Cape Cod Hospital, and Dr. Paul Appleton, an orthopedic surgeon with Beth Israel Hospital, made separate weeklong journeys to the island country to do what they could for the struggling nation. Hughes worked in the largest hospital in the crumbled capital city of Port-au-Prince and Appleton traveled north to the mountains to aid residents and relocated earthquake survivors.

Partners In Health is a Boston-based organization that's been providing medical care in Haiti for more than two decades. The organization and its co-founder Dr. Paul Farmer gained recognition through Tracy Kidder's book, "Mountains Beyond Mountains," which was the Cohasset Library's 2009 town-wide read.

On Jan. 12, Haiti was hit with an earthquake that killed 230,000, displaced two million more and left hundreds of thousands living in temporary tent cities without access to clean water, food, or adequate sanitation.

"There are innumerable ruined buildings and structures. There's an odor everywhere of decay, sewer, it's just always there," Hughes said of Port-au-Prince, Haiti's capital city.

Volunteers are still traveling to Haiti to help the initial influx of volunteers and donations has waned. For example, Hughes said immediately following the earthquake 20 non-governmental organizations were working at University Hospital in Port-au-Prince where he volunteered. A little over three months after the earthquake only two remained a presence.

Although the initial trauma and medical response needed in the wake of the earthquake has subsided, but the country still lacks the infrastructure to deal with the medical care of a large city like Port-au-Prince, Hughes said.

Upon arrival Hughes was placed on the nightshift in the emergency room and intensive care unit at University Hospital in Port-au-Prince. Much of the hospital complex was rendered structurally unsafe after the earthquake. Much like the tent cities set up to temporarily house thousands whose homes were destroyed, the hospital has set up large tents in the streets to continue to provide medical care to the city.

At first the sight and knowledge of the situation was overwhelming, Hughes said. During his first walk through the hospital several cases of disease were noted that he had never seen before in his medical career. While the hospitals in the US are largely populated by older men and women, the intensive care unit in Haiti cared for people in their 20s and 30s with infectious disease, Hughes said.

"There was an initial overwhelming feeling and realization of the limited resources available," Hughes said. "We were trying to think of what you could do."

He and the other doctors knew what they would do if at their own hospitals, but were often at a loss in Haiti.

"We were just a group of doctors trying to the right thing for everyone we could," Hughes said. "The hardest part was watching a lot of young people die that just wouldn't die here."

The approach was to help as many people as possible with whatever resources were available. Hughes helped to deliver several babies on the street and watched a young man die from an injury he knew he could fix in Massachusetts.

Even when Hughes was not on the schedule he often found himself with little to do, so he swung by the emergency room to check in and he usually would end up jumping in to help.

A colleague on the trip summed it up the experience with three simple thoughts, Hughes said.

There was fatigue and exhaustion from the grueling work. There was a positive feeling about what they were able to do and people they were able to help. And there was a guilty feeling that they couldn't do more.

"I think most of us can safely say we had never seen anything like this," Hughes said.

It has been nearly five months since the earthquake, but Hughes said the situation is not improving at any great speed.

"The earthquake knocked out whatever systems the country had. The need is not going away," he said. "It's going to be a long process."

In spite of the devastation, Hughes said the devotion to family and family members was evident. Family members would bring sheets for the simple nylon cots that served as hospital beds and sleep on the ground next to those beds.

"The people were very grateful for any help," Hughes said.

"I want people to know that the situation is still grave (in Haiti). Time and money are still needed as much as it was after the earthquake. Hundreds are dying that shouldn't be dying."

Orthopedic surgeon heads to Haiti

When Cohasset resident and Beth Israel orthopedic surgeon Paul Appleton arrived in Port-au-Prince it was the end of March, roughly two months after the earthquake shook the country into pieces.

Appleton, a volunteer for Partners in Health, headed north out of the city, to the mountain village of Cange, Haiti, where the Partners in Health organization got its start. The village is that much removed from the epicenter of the quake that it does not have the same structural deficiencies of Port-au-Prince, but it still has a great need.

"There was no damage to any of the buildings (at the hospital in Cange), but resources are limited," Appleton said. "They need organization, a whole lot of it."

This trip to Haiti was Appleton's first, although it was planned before the earthquake in January. He was joined on the trip by a group of about 15 doctors, nurses, and physical therapists from Children's Hospital.

The weeklong trip was punctuated by a slew of challenges: no x-ray machine, patients with broken bones held together in metal frames, and no intensive care unit.

The experience was very different from a US hospital where technology and other medical resources are at doctors' fingertips. In Cange, there was a warehouse with stacks of equipment. Each morning Appleton would go to the warehouse to gather the supplies and equipment he thought he might need during the scheduled surgeries.

The first day in Haiti a four-year-old trauma victim that had been hit by a car arrived at the hospital. His injuries included a broken leg and skull fracture.

"He was lucky that a team of doctors from Children's Hospital arrived earlier that day…if that whole group hadn't been there he might not have lived," Appleton said.

Over the course of the week Appleton spent much of the day in the operating room and was "on call" if during the night if emergency patients arrived.

"It was nice in the way you didn't have spend time going through the insurance companies…we were able to focus on just medicine for a week," Appleton said. "The people are incredibly appreciative and grateful – and incredibly patient, some would wait hours, sometimes days to be seen."

Seeing the determination of the people in Haiti, in the face of one of the worst disasters in modern history, was one of the most memorable parts of the trip. "I saw so many patients with amputations trying to get back to their 'normal' lives. Unfortunately a lot of the patients were small children who had no place to go as their homes had been destroyed and many of their family members did not survive the earthquake," Appleton said.

He was struck especially by the resilience of the children, "the kids were some of the happiest children I have ever seen."

Appleton plans to travel back to Haiti with the same group from Children's Hospital in the fall. They are trying to get a regular schedule going to establish a presence in the hospital.

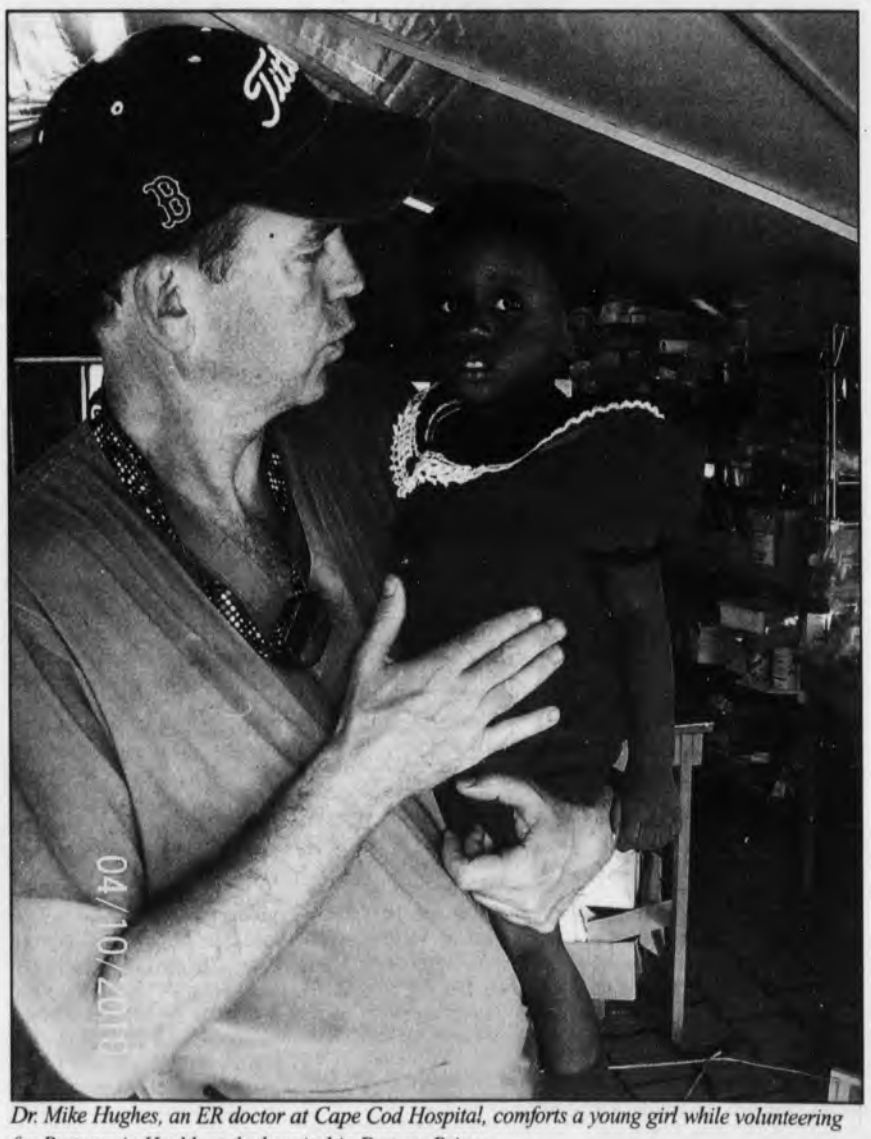
"I think I made a difference in a small number of lives. In the grand scheme of things, there's a lot more to do," Appleton said.

About Partners in Health

As of March 31, 2010, Partners in Health had spent more than $10 million on earthquake relief and rebuilding activities – putting the organization on track to deploy more than $20 million by the end of June and more than $40 million to its work in Haiti in 2010. That is an increase of 60 percent over the $25 million budget for Haiti programs in 2009. These expenditures reflect Partners in Health's swift response and expanded services since the quake, as well as the organization's commitment to being responsible stewards of funds for Haiti – 95 percent of the organization's funding provide program support.

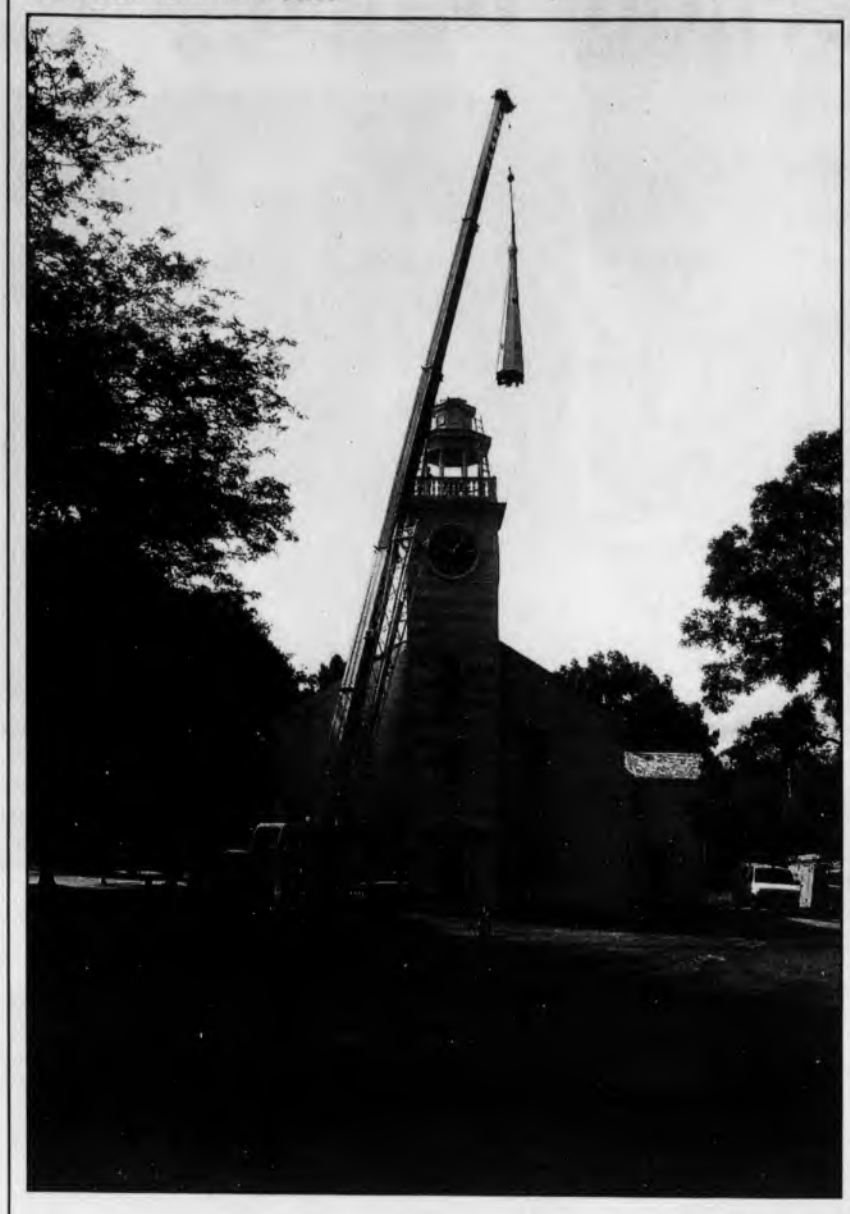
Partners in Health recently announced a two-and-a-half-year, $125 million "Stand With Haiti" Fund to support short and long-term initiatives to provide medical care and social support to earthquake survivors and the communities that are absorbing them, and to strengthen the public health and the medical education systems in Haiti.

Partners in Health works in 12 countries around the world to provide quality health care to people and communities devastated by joint burdens of poverty and disease. The organization has been providing vital health care services in Haiti for more than 20 years and is the largest health care provider in the country, working with the Haitian Ministry of Health to deliver comprehensive health care services to a catchment area of 1.2 million across the Central Plateau and the Lower Artibonite Valley. Partners in Health had more than 4,400 staff in Haiti before the Jan. 12th earthquake.



Paul Appleton, Cohasset resident and orthopedic surgeon, removes a leg cast for a little boy in Haiti. He volunteered for a week at the Partners in Health hospital facility in Kange, Haiti.

Dr. Paul Appleton brought handmade get well cards from his daughter's Osgood class to Haiti with him. This young boy shows off the card he received.



This is the "waiting room" at the Partners in Health facility in Kange, which is located about three hours outside of Port-au-Prince in the mountains.

Punching up school lunch

Nutrition and better products a focus

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

School lunch seems to have gotten a bad rap.

And in some cases it was perhaps for good reason. But, that is changing at Cohasset Schools.

Under the director of new food service director Lynn Petrowski, who has been overseeing the nutrition and school lunch programs in Cohasset and Hingham since November, changes are being implemented (slowly, but surely) to bring fresher ingredients, more nutritious food and a variety of options into Cohasset school cafeterias.

In Cohasset, a parent group has been helping guide the tweaks to the menus.

"Both towns have a client base that's pretty savvy. They know what they want and they want to eat high quality food," Petrowski said.

Petrowski has worked in the school nutrition business for the last 15 years and has been in food service her whole career. She previously held positions in the Norwell, Middleboro, Fall River school districts.

"I'm not stranger to school lunch," Petrowski said. She has a background in both culinary arts and nutrition.

Mel Barrett, a mother of three, got involved with the school lunch program at the end of last year.

"I realized there was a disconnect between what we were serving our kids at lunch and the amazing opportunities we are giving our kids in other areas," Barrett said, adding there had been groups of parents in the past who worked to improve the school lunch offerings and she figured it was her turn to get involved.

"We have the resources, we have involved parents and the quality products are available. There's no reason to be serving our kids anything that is subpar," Barrett said.

On the docket first was to remove products that contain "harmful ingredients," such as trans fat, hydrogenated oils, and genetically modified organisms (GMOs), and replace them with more local produce and ingredients.

The cafeteria eradication of some of these ingredients has been a challenge because of Cohasset's involvement in The Education Cooperative (TEC), which allows for savings due to collaborative purchasing but is somewhat restricting in product choices. "We can't dictate for the whole group," Barrett said.

Petrowski is a "big fan" of providing food in its unaltered state and creating meals from scratch. As a result, more of the food is being "homemade." Calzones are being made from fresh ingredients, not frozen packages.

"If the parents feel better about the product, they'll feel better about having the kids buy it."

— Mel Barrett, mother of three

"It's more labor intensive, but its been very well-received," Petrowski said.

Chicken, broccoli and pasta is being served at all levels. Kids are building their own burritos. She's served red grapefruit, apple coleslaw made with homemade dressing, and hummus platters.

She is hoping to get Massachusetts grown strawberries in the cafeterias before the end of the school year. Petrowski is working with Lanni Orchards in Lunenberg to develop a farm-to-school connection.

Other new popular menu items include whole grain breadsticks and cheese-filled pizza sticks that can be dipped in marinara sauce.

"Everything is baked, there's nothing that's fried in the either district (Hingham or Cohasset)," Petrowski said.

In the last two weeks the students at Deer Hill and Osgood have tried out a potential new offering: sunbutter on a whole grain cinnamon raisin bagel.

The tasting was a big hit with the Osgood students and will likely be offered as an alternate meal to the hot lunch.

"We started in the younger grades because they are more inclined to try something new," Petrowski said. To illustrate the point she said as the kids got older, more of them said they didn't like the sunbutter bagel. A survey after the tasting revealed seven kindergarteners did not like sunbutter, 12 first graders, and 19 second graders.

The sunbutter bagel will be served with a Stonyfield yogurt and vegetable sticks as an alternate choice next year. Currently a jelly sandwich is one of the offerings.

The hope behind the menu changes and product improvement is increased participation. For the past two years, the school lunch program has struggled to end the year in the black.

"If the parents feel better about the product, they'll feel better about having the kids buy it," Barrett said. With a stronger lunch program, with more profitability, more could be invested in the food, "it's cyclical."

The changes to the menu have piqued the interest of students, especially at the elementary schools. At Deer Hill and Osgood there has been an increase in participation over the past year.

The middle-high school is the toughest challenge because many eating habits and school lunch expectations are already set.

"We are maintaining or somewhat increasing the numbers at the middle-high school," Petrowski said. The factors that go into whether or not to buy school lunch increase at the middle and high school level: length of the line, speed through check-out, available seating.

"It can take up to three years, I hope it is shorter than that, but it can take up three years for students to get used to what they see in the cafeteria and buy into it. We just have to keep trying," Petrowski said.

First grader Lauren Walling-Sotolongo samples a whole grain cinnamon raisin bagel topped with sunbutter which is made out of sunflower seeds and tastes like peanut butter. Sunbutter is allergen free and a good source of protein. If enough students enjoy the sample, they are planning on implementing a healthy alternative lunch in June.

Second-grader Cam Joslin samples sunbutter on a bagel before the start of his lunch on Tuesday at the Osgood School.

Second grader Margaret Curley gives a thumbs up after tasting sunbutter.

First grader Genevieve Ahlstedt grabs another sample of sunbutter on a bagel before going out to recess.

A large crowd of veterans and those on active duty await for the start of theMemorial Day observances at Veterans Memorial Park on Monday.

Veterans and those on active duty arrive at Cohasset's Woodside Cemetery on Monday morning to honor deceased veterans.

"Thank you for letting our country be free and brave," said Deirdre Wigmore, president of the Legion Auxiliary, to the veterans in uniform before her.

In his address to Cohasset, Kelley impressed upon the crowd the true purpose of Monday holiday.

"(Memorial Day) is a time to reflect on the more than one million men and women who, over the course of our history, gave up their families and their futures to ensure the preservation of America's founding principles," Kelley said.

He noted the seven Massachusetts servicemen who have died in Iraq or Afghanistan since Memorial Day last year.

Kelley said the sobering statistics don't even begin to tell the whole story, "behind each name is a story — a high-school football hero, a talented guitarist, a loving father, the platoon jokester. Left in each of their wakes is a family marked with a permanent scar, unfulfilled dreams and a vacant place at the dinner table."

The final portion of the ceremony is marked by somber tribute to those who have lost their lives in service to our country. A wreath is placed on the Veterans Memorial. The flower girls toss flowers into the harbor to honor those who have lost their lives at sea. A firing squad sends off three shots to salute departed comrades. The Taps are played two times.

The ceremony concluded with Cohasset resident Lilly Sestito's rendition of "America the Beautiful" and the Rusty Skippers and Cohasset High band playing "The Star-Spangled Banner." During the national anthem the flag was raised from half-staff to full-staff.

Wigmore Family honored

Each year, Cohasset's Memorial Day observance is an event that rivals any on the South Shore, or some would say Massachusetts. Much of the events success is driven by the passionate organization and involvement of one family: the Wigmores.

Steve Wigmore, commander of the Cohasset's American Legion Post, his son Tom Wigmore, commander of the Sons of the American Legion, and Tom's wife Deirdre Wigmore, president of the Ladies' Auxiliary, are the work horses behind the Memorial Day ceremonies and veterans events around town all year long.

To honor their commitment to the veterans of Cohasset and the country, the Wigmores were given citations and proclamations from the Cohasset Board of Selectmen, the state House of Representatives, the state Senate and Governor Deval Patrick.

"It is so easy sometimes to get caught up in Memorial Day sales, barbeques, and forget the true meaning of this day. (The Wigmores) are a family that keeps its priority straight and helps us as a community remember what this day is all about," said Selectmen chair Karen Quigley.

The proclamation read by Quigley at Monday's ceremony gave detailed information about the family's contributions to veteran affairs.

Stephen Wigmore served in the Navy, including more than three years sea duty with air anti-submarine squadron, and for 26 years as Commander of Cohasset American Legion Post during which the organization has provided immeasurable assistance to veterans, the elderly in need and more than $200,000 in Cohasset High School scholarships.

Thomas Wigmore has served the needs of veterans on a local, state and national level, including organizing the Cohasset Memorial Day parade, coordinating placement of flags on veterans' graves, maintaining 28 veterans' squares throughout the community, successfully petitioning the town to dedicate the POW/MIA Square, and most recently establishing the Healing Field presentation opposite Veterans Memorial Park.

Deirdre Wigmore is the daughter of William J. Brady, US Air Force, a WWII and Korean War veteran. She served as the President of the Cohasset American Legion Post 118 Auxiliary and has donated thousands of volunteer hours to assist in fundraising and preparing of dinners for the elderly, and assists putting flags on veterans' graves and maintaining the Healing Field.

"The Wigmore family sets forth the best example of how a family can serve veterans and their families in a dedicated and compassionate manner," the proclamation states.

The win moved the team into a first place tie with Norwell for a share of the South Shore League title and momentum heading into the Div. 3 South Sectional Tournament.

Cohasset (9-7) is seeded No. 13 and will open today with a trip to No. 4 Martha's Vineyard for a 3 p.m. match.

It's Open 'House

TEE TIME

PAUL HARBER

The Clubhouse is open! You're weekly golf fix in print and – if you are not Internet challenged – there is a whole lot more going on in the 'House this summer. And it's air-conditioned!

We don't have room for all the golf to fit in print, but there is nothing but open fairway on the Internet to put all our tournament results, holes in one and great golf stories.

Last year, our first, was a learning experience, like trying to hit out of a fairway bunker.

Our problem was we had too many advertisements.

There was no room on the page for everything we wanted to say.

And when friends asked us where it was on the Internet, we'd tell them something like, "Go to wickedlocal.com and look for Clubhouse Extra." You had a better chance hitting a 100-yard shot out of a bunker, over water, to a short-sided pin.

This year it is easier than a tap-in putt.

Our website is wickedlocalgolf.com and if you look at the billboard across the top of our page, it's right there for all to see. Bookmark it among your favorites and catch up on all the scores at all the local clubs

We'll try to update it daily.

And it will be fresh.

No PGA Tour scores.

The Tour has plenty of websites devoted to its players and I don't need to know more about Steve Stricker or Boo Weekly.

However we'll keep an eye at this week's Memorial Tournament (Jack Nicklaus' wanna be Masters) in Ohio because Pembroke's Kevin Johnson got an invitation.

How did he pull that off?

"He doesn't know but he's happy he got it," said his proud brother, Chip Johnson, head pro at Hatherly Golf Club in North Scituate.

Except for homeys like KJ, this will be all local.

Find out whose is cleaning up on the local golf circuit?

See who is winning all the member-guests.

Hopefully, we'll have it on line and use the newspaper to give you the highlights and noteworthy material from these events.

Notice to all golf courses and pros: If you have the results, please send them our way. Send all scores to pharber@cnc.com.

Golfers, if you have a photo of your foursome in action, send it along to marshfieldphoto@gmail.com and we'll post it.

Back in the days of the mashie and niblick, when I was a Boston Globe copy boy, a fellow urchin, Bob Donovan, now the head of the Ouimet Fund, would take a seat in back of the department, calling golf club after golf club on Sunday afternoon. All these results would appear in the next afternoon's paper.

That practiced ended when the Globe decided to send a dozen writers to Red Sox games.

In our "Course of the Week" feature, you won't read about majestic Pebble Beach or pristine Augusta National (We Googled "Augusta National" and "pristine" and came up with 14,100 hits!).

We want to talk about local courses.

We're not just taking you to the top tier clubs like Granite Links in Quincy and Pinehills in Plymouth. We're prepared to play nine-holers like Marion Golf Club and Cedar Hill in Stoughton.

They have a purpose and there are chops out there that would be happier at those tracks than anywhere else.

This, I promise: it will be an adventure.

I live for local golf. I'd rather be out playing a ratty course with three good friends on a rainy afternoon than covering a professional golf tournament.

Except one tournament, the Masters, and that's because the course is the star. The place is more spectacular than you ever could expect.

Every other tournament is boring. You sit around and wait for the leaders to finish.

Back in the day when Ben Hogan was young, Joe Looney was the golf writer for the old Boston Herald (certainly not to be confused with what is published today). Rarely did he ever leave the press tent during tournaments.

Asked why? He said that all of the golfers like to talk about their good rounds. He would wait for a good score to come in and then interview the potential leader. Other writers would venture out to the back nine and miss the leader when he came in.

I covered golf for more than 30 years, but if I had my druthers, I'd rather be covering a State Open qualifier than the US Open. That's another story we'll talk about later this summer.

OK, you get the idea.

Problem is this is only about half of this week's column.

The rest is on line where I'll talk about:

How much I hope Geoff Sisk of Marshfield some day comes back and wins another Massachusetts Open.

Why Chase Lovett-Woodsum is my pick to win the State Open.

Why Weymouth has so many great golfers, like Andy Morse, but never had a golf course until Weathervane opened.

And, about A. Linwood Ellis III – better known as Skeet – saved this week's Hornblower Memorial Tournament.

Describe your best round (where, when, highlights):
Best round was a 65 at Heritage Ridge in Hobe Sound Fl. At tee time I was an assistant at Fall River Country Club and myself an Tom Tetrault went to play with some members who lived there in the winter and we decided to play the font nine with three of the members and then swith and play the back nine with the other group so that each of us would play with the six members. After a front nine of 32 Tom told the group that I was playing with on the back nine that they were in trouble because I could not play another ninbe that well after not playing all winter. He was right I was one shot worse.

If you could be in a dream foursome, who would be in it?-
My dream foursome would be Larry Bird, Bobby Orr, and Warren Buffet.

Describe your introduction to golf (who, where, how old you where, and how the game attracted you):
My dad introduced me to golf when I was about 10. I began seriously playing about 13.

What is your favorite golf course (and why?)
My favorite course is Pebble Beach. The course is great but the views are better.

What makes your home golf course so special?
Best advice is to not get too happy or too mad because you are going to hit good shots and bad shots during the round. Try to make the bad shots not to bad and avoid double bogeys.

Back nine is a special 18

There was a time when Heritage Hill Country Club was the crown jewel of par-3s in New England.

Course of the Week

Every tee shot is a challenge at the Back Nine Club, like this one over water.

Playing the pine-lined fairways was so reminiscent of playing in Carolina.

Our favorite is the No. 16, a 185-yard shot to a green shaped somewhat like a shamrock and you needed luck to escape with a two-putt par. It is an uphill tee shot. The left and right corners of the putting surface is elevated and if the pin was tuck on the left or right shelf and you were on the opposite side, forgetaboutit. Go to the next tee and put down at least a 4 on the card.

The course was so good that every Memorial Day they had a prestigious four-ball tournament. The best players in the state would turn out and it would be a packed field.

The unfortunate passing of the owners in 2007 put the course in limbo.

Time lingered, as the complicated financial situation surrounding the properties was resolved. Meanwhile, the clubhouse and other facilities deteriorated and the wonderful course went fallow, disappearing in a field of hay.

Three Country Club of New Bedford golfers, Mark White, David Waxler and David Marchand purchased the property in Feburary 2008 and rebuild the facility.

The first thing the new owners did was hire Joe Klein, a savvy golf guy who worked at CC New Bedford, as the new general manager.

Then they gave the place a new name: the Back Nine Club.

Unless you are a golfer, you probably wouldn't get it.

The back nine is usually the best nine. By then, your heavily into your game, comfortable with good friends, the match is on the line, and your closing in on the 19th hole. What can be better?

"It took a while to get that across," said Klein. "At first, they thought we eliminated nine holes. It's still 18 holes. But people finally got it."

The new owners gave the clubhouse and facility a complete makeover. "They went the whole nine yards," said Klein. When the weather cleared, they began work on the golf course.

"We sodded some of the tees, rebuilt the cart parts and had to do a lot of work on the irrigation system. There were leaks everywhere," said Klein.

They opened that May and it's been getting better every week.

"We give people an alternative. They can go to a regulation course and pay more than $60 and take more than five hours to play 18 holes," said Klein. "Or they can come here and pay $20 and finish in three hours. It's a nice alternative."

overpowered Harwich senior Alex Vottler with punishing forehands and crisp volleys 6-3, 6-3. Junior Travers Craven then dispatched the next Vottler, twin brother Mike, in straight sets at second singles to give Cohasset a quick 2-0 lead with both Skipper doubles teams winning the first sets. Will Choi and Conor Queenan ended any chance of a Harwich comeback by thwarting Dusty Mopler and Derek Shortman in 6-1, 6-2 at second doubles to close out the win. Senior Captain Mike Filbey and Junior Garrett Canney played solid, smart tennis and won at first doubles. Freshman Jack Thomae played the best third singles player in the League Nick Robbie and played well before losing in straight sets.

The Skippers had a chance to win the League outright the following week at Norwell. Captain Filbey tweaked the line up slightly in an effort to try to sneak out another point at third singles.

Coach Zini from Norwell countered with some radical changes at second and third singles as well as both doubles teams.

Travers Craven came back from the dead in the third set tiebreaker to remain undefeated at second singles and bested Tim Koch 2-6, 7-5, 10-8. Jack Tomae and Will Choi played very smart tennis and won in three sets at second doubles over John Anderson and Tim Healey 6-4 in the third.

Norwell closed out the match at first doubles with James Vafiades and and Clay Ferguson edging Garrett Canney and Mike Filbey.

Cohasset finished league play at home with a win over Mashpee 4-1 with Senior Sebastian Braga and Freshman Evan Ackley scoring wins for the Skippers. Travers Craven completed an undefeated 10-0 season in League play at second singles.

Cohasset needed help from Harwich on the last day of the season and got it as Harwich defeated Norwell at home to create a three-way tie for first place with all three teams finishing 8-2.

All ten players, including injured Andrew Barrett, earned varsity letters for the squad.

Named to the South Shore League All Star Team were Robbie Hill, Travers Craven, and the doubles squad of Captain Mike Filbey and Garrett Canney.

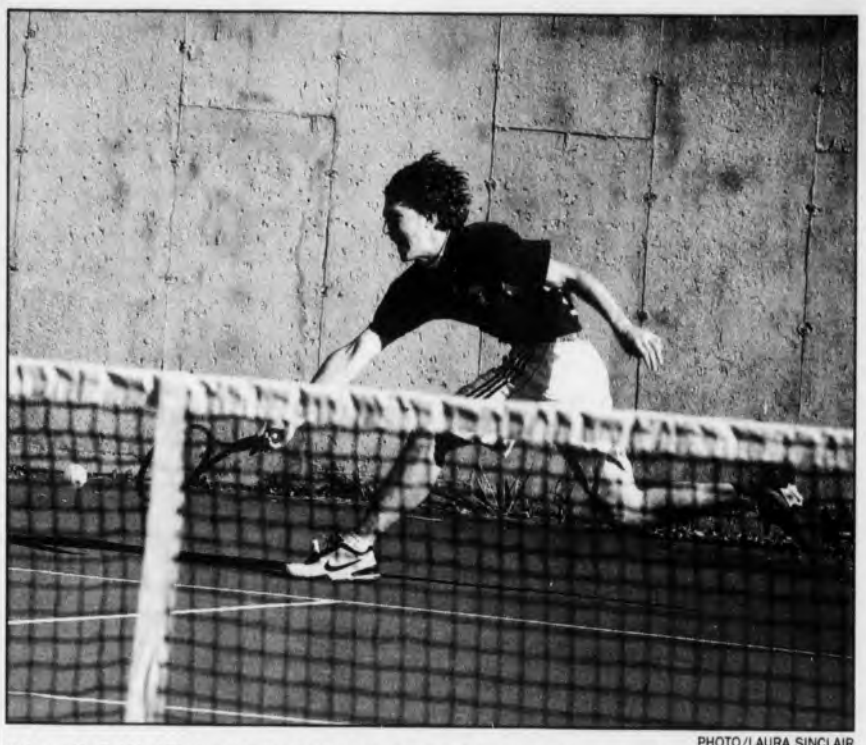
Student Versus Teacher Matchup Highlights Weekend

Cohasset High School Tennis Coach Fred Buffum played No. 1 singles Robbie Hill in a terrific student versus teacher matchup over Memorial Day weekend. Fred, ranked 5 in New England in the USTA Mens +50, used every shot in his arsenal against Robbies powerful groundstrokes in the semi finals of the Mens A Consolation round.

After splitting sets 6-4, 4-6, the two squared off for a 10 point super tiebreaker. Robbie raced to a 9-6 lead and had three match points on his racket. Fred stormed back with an ace, a winner, and at 8-9 charged the net on his second serve. Robbie unleashed a laser forehand and was stunned when Fred volleyed from his shoelaces and hit a perfect backhand return that Robbie netted.

At 9-9, Robbie hit a perfect backhand passer and closed with a topsin lob winner to win the very exciting match.



Superb sportsmanship and camaraderie were displayed by both players.

Kyle Desisto from Cohasset played beautiful tennis and lost in the Finals to top USTA ranked Ryan Sweeney.

CHS second Singles Travers Craven won his first round match and lost in the third set to Scituate No. 1 Greg Logue.

The Mens A Draw fielded top local pros and collegiate players.

Great job to Steve Nelson, Steve Parker, and Eliot Campbell for running a terrific tournament.

Cohasset Boys Youth Team Lacrosse upsets local powerhouse, Duxbury

By Chris Arnold

Over the past few years, Cohasset has become known for putting together championship-winning high school teams and for sending skilled players to play NCAA lacrosse at division 1, 2 and 3 schools. For a small town competing against significantly larger towns with mature lacrosse programs, this is quite remarkable. At the high school level, we have been blessed with a dedicated coaching staff, headed by Stew Curran, and a fully supportive high school athletic department. But the credit for the relative success is also due in part to a well developed youth lacrosse program.

The Cohasset Youth Lacrosse program, known as the CYL, invites grade school boys and girls to learn and play the sport of lacrosse starting in the first grade. On the south shore, Cohasset is a relatively mature program, organized by coaches and parents that know and appreciate the game. Most of the head coaches have either played lacrosse in college and/ or high school. With the success of the program and quality of the overall lacrosse experience, many parents and children have been attracted to lacrosse instead of the traditional spring sports of baseball and soccer.

Even with Cohasset's success, the South Shore town that is most known for lacrosse has been Duxbury. Duxbury is twice the size of Cohasset and lacrosse is arguably Duxbury's most successful sport.

A few weeks ago, the Cohasset varsity lost to Duxbury by one point, showing we can at least compete at their level. Those watching the NCAA division I finals on Memorial Day would have seen Duxbury's Max Quinzani helping his Duke lacrosse team to its first NCAA championship. Max has been one of the most talented players in the history of Duke lacrosse. Duxbury is the local lacrosse powerhouse and its success can also be attributed to its youth program.

On Memorial Day weekend we were given the chance to field five teams against some of the best town lacrosse programs in Massachusetts, including Hingham, Long Meadow, Wellesley and Duxbury.

Cohasset sent five teams, from fourth to eighth grade boys, to compete in the two-day tournament in Abington, sponsored by STX and organized by Dan Chouinard and Sean Morris's EMASS Legacy League program. The favorites were Duxbury, Hanover and Hingham

A number of Cohasset's teams posted great results. The seventh graders finished second in a field of six teams. The Cohasset fourth graders also finished a respectable fourth out of a field or six teams, primarily made up of fifth graders. So the Cohasset boys walked away from the tournament with a number of great outcomes, including a championship win by Cohasset's fifth graders.

Cohasset Fifth Graders beat Duxbury in sudden death overtime…

Fifth grade coach Randy Bodner recounts the scene during the first day of the tournament. "On Saturday, we handily beat two Hingham teams. Our kids felt confident, but the last game of the day game was against Duxbury. We got down to the field just as the Duxbury team was running is perfect formation, around the outside of the field. I made sure that our team cheer at the beginning of the game was loud enough for Duxbury to know we were not intimidated. Although we played well, we lost 2-1. At the end of Saturday, we were ranked No. 2 behind Duxbury, but we knew we had a chance to play them again.

Coach Bodner: "On Sunday, we were able to beat Abington in the semi-finals. That game was close in the first half, but we pulled away and won due to excellent ball movement by the offense and a patient, settled defense that cleared the ball effectively with good ground ball coverage. It was a close game in the first half but we pulled away in the second and won that game, leading us to the finals against Duxbury."

As the day progressed, a number of the other Cohasset teams posted great results in the other age classes. The seventh graders finished second in a field of six teams. The Cohasset fourth graders also finished a respectable fourth out of a field or six teams, primarily made up of fifth graders.

Then, in the middle of the day, Cohasset's fifth graders beat Duxbury in overtime, 9-8. Although most town programs stress learning the game and equal playing time over winning at all cost, beating a team like Duxbury says a lot about how far the Cohasset program has come and what is in store for this group in the future. One of the Cohasset coaches recounts the scene: "when I was walking from the parking lot, ready to coach my eighth team, I heard a cheer from a crowd that you could have heard a mile away. I thought to myself that some lucky group of kids just won a killer game and sure enough, as I walked toward the crowd, my friends said Cohasset had beat Duxbury. Everyone on the sidelines was ecstatic."

The success of the fifth graders and each of teams competing at the tournament is a testament that with a strong coaching staff, dedicated parents and players, it is possible for a small town like Cohasset to compete at the highest level. Congratulations to all of the Cohasset teams, competing at the tournament…

Mushu the dragon, played by Halle Pratt, and the Chinese Soldiers in the Deer Hill production of Mulan.

Deer Hill shines in 'Mulan'

THE ARTS

KATHRYN HILLLMAN

On May 26th and 27th, the Deer Hill School, in conjunction with the Cohasset Drama Workshop, performed Mulan Jr. Directed by Cohasset's Lisa Pratt, the show consisted of 71 Deer Hill students, all of whom auditioned for the show and have been working on the production since late March. Performed on the stage in the Deer Hill gymnasium, the students put on an impressive rendition of the beloved Disney movie.

The play opens with a Greek chorus of the Fa family ancestors, played by Caroline Patterson, Caitlin Conrad, Abby Thomas, Emma Humphrey, and Kaitlin McGovern, who act as narrators throughout the story. The play incorporates songs from the Disney movie and includes a few that did not make the movie cut, including the opener Written In Stone.

Katie McKeon, who played Mulan, imbued the character with a lot of spunk and rebellion — a character who is not going to play by the rules of society. This was also the introduction for another prominent character — Mushu the dragon. Played by Halle Pratt, Mushu is portrayed as the dynamic character with many snappy, humorous lines that the audience recognized and enjoyed.

The play proceeds much like the movie — Mulan's father Fa Zhou, played by Jack Fechter, is drafted into the Chinese army to stop the invading Hun army, despite his old war wound. Mulan decides to take his place — disguised as a man — serving under Captain Shang (played by Liam O'Connell). With Mushu's help, Mulan manages to get into the Chinese army and eventually saves China from the Hun invasion, led by Shan-Yu (played with sinister verve by Max Nakashima). In doing so, she brings honor to her family.

Overall, the play was extremely well done, including some stellar elements that really made it shine. One such element was the costumes, created by Bernadette Crawford. Each ensemble character wore a kimono, in earthy tones, which added an interesting aesthetic contrast to the ancestors' more elaborate costumes, in midnight blues and celestial white and silver. Another creative element was the special effects, particularly those employed to represent an avalanche, which wipes out the Hun army. One very striking component of the play was the tight choreography of the main musical numbers, even with as many as 70 actors on stage at once. Jojo Fichtner was the choreographer for the production, and the long hours and hard work put into each number were easily apparent.

One of the well-received musical numbers which did not appear in the movie at all — Keep 'Em Guessin' — was originally a song the movie makers were going to give to Mushu to sing when he was teaching Mulan how to "be a man" but it was cut from the movie. Fortunately for the Cohasset audience, the song was added into the play and the actors did an excellent job. It was a full-cast number, yet the choreography was tight and the singing was clear and well annunciated. The other major number in the play is the well known I'll Make a Man Out Of You. For this production, it was blended with another, less-well known piece called Lesson Number 1. The number even included some "fight choreography" which takes a lot of skill and patience to perform. The music added a bright flare to the play without detracting from the characters or the actors portraying them.

Everyone involved in this production clearly put in a lot of hard work, as seen from the finished product. Mrs. Pratt, the director, confirmed that the entire production took nine weeks from casting to the final performance, with practices two to three times each week. She said that the performers will, "trudge through the snow banks of rehearsal, then have a great time and come back next year." It is clear that the students had a great experience performing this play as well; according to Katie McKeon, "It's been hard but so much fun. The entire cast was great." We certainly hope that these performers will return to the stage in the future.

Kathryn Hillman is a graduate of Notre Dame Academy and will be studying art history at Fordham University next year..

Blossoming Success at UMass Boston

By J. Keith Motley, PhD, UMass Boston Chancellor

Spring is a season of hope, a time when we can all enjoy the greening and blooming of our natural world. In higher education, we enjoy spring for its commencement season, when we see the work of our students, tended by college professors and enriched by academic programs, blossom in the form of graduates set on a course toward success.

One of my favorite responsibilities during the commencement season is awarding our top honor for undergraduate student achievement, the John F. Kennedy Award. This year I will have the distinct honor of recognizing Thao Xuan Do, who arrived in the United States just six years ago not knowing our language but through her hard work and determination, and with the guidance of faculty at the University of Massachusetts Boston, reached a pinnacle in achievement that will help spur her to greater career accomplishments.

Do represents the often life-changing opportunities that UMass Boston provides its students. A resident of Norwood, she was one of just 16 students nationwide recently selected to receive the prestigious National Institutes of Health (NIH) Academy fellowship. She will spend a year engaged in biomedical research at NIH, and then she plans to attend medical school.

Like Do, Belarus native Alena Sullivan found a new home in the United States and a place to excel academically at UMass Boston. Sullivan is graduating this year with a near-perfect grade point average and a double major in criminal justice and political science. While at UMass Boston, she held internships with Governor Deval Patrick's office, US Senator John Kerry's office, and the Massachusetts State Police to help prepare her for a career in law enforcement.

As Boston's only public university, UMass Boston has a particular mission to encourage student success in ways that go well beyond academics and the classroom. In our College of Nursing and Health Sciences, for example, a Clinical Leadership Collaborative for Diversity in Nursing program in partnership with Partners HealthCare has placed dozens of our students in premier Boston medical facilities, on course to be leaders in their fields. For example, Jessica Thai, a resident of Brockton, will begin her nursing career following this week's commencement at Massachusetts General Hospital.

In our College of Management, our Student Entrepreneur Program and new Entrepreneurship Center prepare UMass Boston students like Colby Ring for careers in the state's start-up economy by placing them with new high-tech companies such as Venyu, Akiban Technologies, and Viridity. Ring, of Marshfield, will be graduating with majors in economics and political science to pursue a career in sales and marketing.

These are just a few of the success stories of UMass Boston's 3,371 graduates in 2010 who will go on to drive the commonwealth's economy and become tomorrow's leaders. I congratulate all of this year's graduates.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF June 14, 2010

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Choosing to work with someone you once thought might have been disloyal is a courageous move. The logical next step is to talk things out so there'll be no reason for raising suspicions again.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Take your time making a decision about a personal or work-related relationship. New facts are still coming in, and you'll want to know the full story before you take a definitive step.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Expect to learn something new about an old problem. This could provide some insight into how the problem began, and why it still defies efforts to find a resolution. Good luck.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) An uneasy work-related relationship can be eased with compromises by both sides. The parties might consider putting the agreed-upon changes in writing in case of a future misunderstanding.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Oh, you lucky Felines: Your romantic aspects are in absolutely purrrfect form. Don't be surprised at how especially attentive the ladies and gentlemen in your life are going to be this week.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Looking to prove yourself in a difficult situation is laudable. But try paying more attention to advice from experienced contacts. It could help you avoid time-wasting missteps.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A business decision seems easy enough to make based on what you know. But this week could bring new facts to light, and you might have to do some heavy rethinking.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Feeling sure about the steps you expect to take is great. But you may need to share a few dollops of that confidence with those who have some doubts about your plans.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) A sense of well-being dominates much of the week. A slightly depressed mood could set in on the weekend. But being with family and friends helps shoo it away.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) You appear to be walking your life's path like the sure-footed Goat you are. But someone might feel you could do better. Listen to the advice, but make up your own mind.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) With positive signs growing stronger, Aquarians could find themselves facing choices that are each too good to turn down. Best advice: Go for the one you feel most comfortable with.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Someone you know might need your comfort and wisdom during a particularly difficult period. Your encouraging words help restore self-confidence and rebuild strength.

BORN THIS WEEK: Your kindness to all who need you is always appreciated and sets a fine example for others to follow.

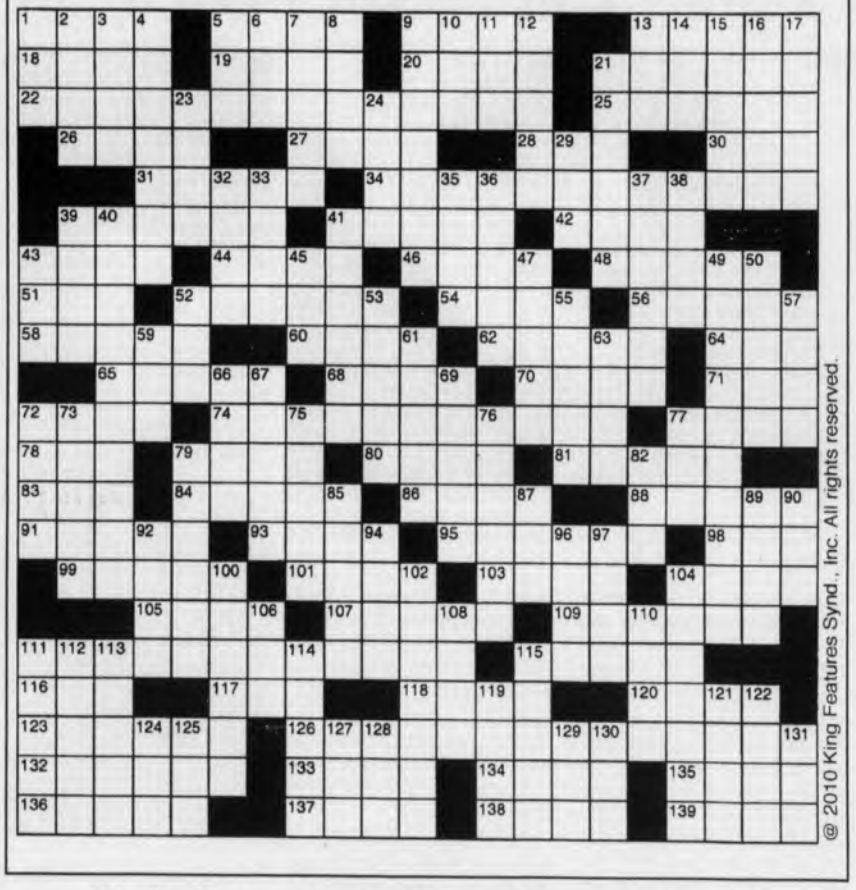
Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!



Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Cohasset Carillon recitals this summer

The 86th annual Cohasset Carillon Summer Recital Series will begin Sunday June 27, at 6 p.m., and continue each Sunday until Aug. 15. All are invited to bring lawn chairs or a blanket along with a picnic supper to enjoy on the Common while listening to the music of the bells. Free popcorn and lemonade will be available, thanks to the families of St. Stephen's Church. After each recital, a brief tour of the tower will be offered for those interested in seeing the instrument in the playing cabinet and the bells in the tower above.

Cohasset Carillon can proudly claim the oldest continuing annual recital series in North America. It is also the largest carillon by number of bells (57) in New England. The smallest bell weighs only 29 pounds, the largest five and a half tons, more than 11,000 pounds. It was the second carillon to arrive in the United States; Gloucester welcomed the first carillon in 1923.

Among the guest recitalists this summer season will be carillonneurs from the Netherlands and Denmark; the United States and Canada. The last recital on Aug. 15, played by Milford Myhre, Carillonneur Emeritus from Lake Wales, Florida, will honor Sally Slade Warner, Carillonneur at St. Stephen's Church from 1985 through 2009. Slade Warner died in December 2009 after a brief illness. Internationally recognized as an accomplished organist and carillonneur, she will be remembered by her many friends in the American Guild of Organists, the Guild of Carillonneurs of North American and in the St. Stephen's Church community.

Worship Notes

A Taste of Morocco at Sha'aray Shalom

Congregation Sha'aray Shalom, 1112 Main St., offers a variety of Shabbat experiences to give voice to the varied sounds of prayer in the community.

Join Rabbi Joseph for a multimedia presentation A Taste of Morocco Tuesdays at 7:30 p.m. through June 22.

Listen, see and learn all about an inspiring journey through Morocco:

Morocco's history is unique amongst its Arab neighbors because it chose a different course than other Middle Eastern and African countries. Historical evidence shows that Jews were in North Africa long before even the Romans. They enjoyed equal rights with Muslim Berbers, setting the stage for future co-existence between Jews and Arabs in modern day Morocco, an example for her neighbors. When everyone was turning against the Jews, Moroccan leaders showed a special interest in assuring the security of the Jewish community. By guaranteeing the safety of the Jews, Moroccan leaders believed they were contributing to the stability of their regimes

While only 5,000 Jews remain in Morocco today, there were 250,000 in 1948 before they emigrated to Israel, they live as equal citizens and coexist peacefully in this Muslim country.

Louis F. Eaton Jr.

Louis F. Eaton Jr.

COHASSET – Louis F. Eaton Jr.of Cohasset, died May 26, 2010, at age 91.

Beloved husband of Robin L. Eaton since 1994. Devoted father of Elizabeth Steadman of Duxbury and Deborah Peck and her husband Raymond of Washington, DC; step-father of William Lord and his wife Nan of Seattle, WA. and Donna Roberts of West Lebanon, NH; cherished grandfather of David Steadman and Sarah Peck and "Grandpa Lou" to Catherine and Rebecca Roberts. He is also survived by many nieces, nephews, grand-nieces and nephews, and by Nancy McManemon, sister of Elizabeth F. Eaton, to whom he was married for more than 50 years and who predeceased him in 1993.

Born on December 20, 1918, in Annapolis, Md., to Louis Franklin Eaton and Margaret Ayers Eaton, he was the first of six children. Lou is survived by four of his siblings: Allan A. Eaton of Duxbury, Mass., David Eaton of Sandwich, N.H., Margaret Koerner of Woodstock, Conn., and Mary Abigail Mott of Topsham, Maine. (His brother, Robert A. Eaton, lately of Sandwich, NH, died March 16, 2010.)

He graduated from Brockton High School in 1935, and Deerfield Academy in 1936, Amherst College, Phi Beta Kappa, in 1940, and Harvard Law School in 1943 ('47). He served in the U.S. Navy as Commanding Officer of convoy escorts in the Aleutian Islands, based in Adak. In 1945 he was discharged, and in 1946 he moved his young family to Cohasset where he resided for the rest of his life.

Lou was admitted to the bar in New Hampshire in 1946 and in Massachusetts in 1947, when he joined Hutchins & Wheeler (the oldest law firm in Boston). He practiced general and estate law until he retired in 1986, though he continued to serve as a trustee and as an Arbiter with the American Arbitration Association for the next twenty years.

He was a member of the Mayflower Society, Mensa, and a major contributor to numerous government and civic organizations in Cohasset including the Advisory Committee, Community Fund, Dramatic Club, Golf Club, Historical Society and Old Goats; and he proudly donated 17 gallons of blood in his lifetime to the American Red Cross.

For more than 50 years Lou subscribed to Friday afternoon concerts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, and was a member of the Boston Museum of Fine Arts, the New England Historic Genealogical Society, and the Boston Athenaeum.

Lou had a great grin. He was an engaging conversationalist with a quick wit and a pervasive sense of humor. Jazz fan, opera lover, excellent dancer, world traveler, and avid golfer, he was interested in everything from Gilbert and Sullivan to astronomy, and he never turned down the chance to learn about something new. He taught us all to be curious and to be contributing citizens. He was a gem.

A celebration of his life will take place on June 12th, at 2 o'clock at the First Parish Church in Cohasset. Interment will be private.

Condolences may be sent to Robin Eaton, 30 Beach St., Cohasset, MA 02025.

In lieu of flowers the family suggests donations in Lou's memory to the Class of 1940, Amherst College P.O. Box 5000, Amherst, MA 01002-5000.

Theater review

A classic in 'Spirit' only

Boston production falls flat

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

CREDIT: MARK S. HOWARD

It might seem that you can't go wrong with "Blithe Spirit" – especially given how often it is produced. After all, Providence's Trinity Repertory Company staged a blissfully well-done production of the Noel Coward favorite just a few seasons back. And currently, Lyric Stage Company of Boston is presenting a "Blithe Spirit" reminiscent of the 2009 Broadway revival. In this case, however, the comparison with New York is not a good thing. That starry revival, with Rupert Everett and Christine Ebersole, was so uneven that even Angela Lansbury could not save it from mediocrity.

And now a similar fate seems to be befalling director Spiro Veloudos's Lyric production, with its own constellation of Boston theater stars including real-life married couple Paula Plum and Richard Snee, Kathy St. George, and Cohasset's Sarah deLima – so memorable in "Grey Gardens" at the Lyric this time last year. Veloudos has assembled a top-notch cast, but as the production lurches along you soon realize that this take on the Coward classic is never going to take off.

Playwright Coward had huge success with his 1941 "Blithe Spirit," which tells of what happens when novelist Charles Condomine, living with his second wife, Ruth, invites a local medium, Madame Arcati, to his house as part of his research on the spirit world for an upcoming book. He gets more than he bargained for, however, when Arcati conjures up the ghost of his first wife, Elvira. Soon, Charles is caught between one live wife and one dead wife — each jealous of the other. Complicating matters, Charles is the only one who can see and hear Elvira.

As the crisply pressed Charles whose veneer is rumpled by the return of wife number one, Snee is both funny and fleet of foot. The usually first-rate Plum fares less well. Her Elvira not only never seems ethereal, but the veteran actress is also undermined by an unruly wig that makes her look like a platinum blonde Margaret Thatcher and by a satiny gown that clings when it should flow. Anne Gottlieb does fine work as Ruth, the outraged current wife trying to hold her place against an astral invasion. As Madame Arcati – played on Broadway by Mildred Natwick, Geraldine Page and Lansbury, and at Trinity by the always marvelous Barbara Meek – Kathy St. George is a more sprightly medium than most, and her other-worldly dancing also provides this production with some much-needed levity. As a couple who come to visit, Arthur Waldstein and deLima have little to do and make little impact on the proceedings. The same, sadly, is also true of Anna Waldron whose cloddish housemaid Edith fails to steal even a moment, never mind a scene.

Lyric Stage Company of Boston will present "Blithe Spirit" at the YWCA, 140 Clarendon St.,, Boston, through June 6. For tickets and information, call 617-585-5678 or go online at lyricstage.com.

Kingston resident wins chance to perform with Chorus pro Musica

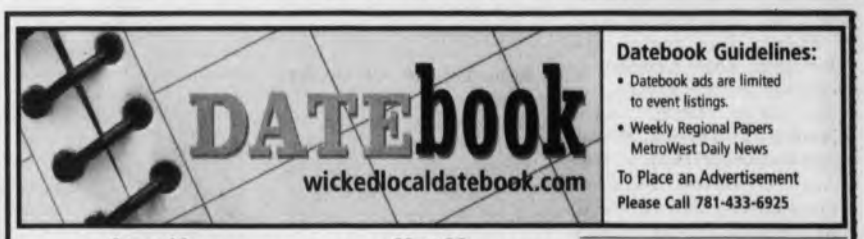
CORRESPONDENT

Andrew Garland

Only two weeks after winning first place in the prestigious Fritz and Lavinia Jenson Foundation's 11th Annual Voice Competition, Kingston resident Andrew Garland will join Chorus pro Musica for the final concert of its 61st season on Sunday at New England Conservatory's Jordan Hall.

Baritone Garland – who performed a concert in March benefiting both Kingston's First Parish Church Unitarian Universalist and Haitian earthquake victims – has earned a reputation as an engaging performer in both opera and recital. This season alone he has performed with Boston Lyric Opera, Opera New Jersey, Knoxville Opera, and the Plymouth Philharmonic. Garland also recently made his recital debut at Carnegie Hall, where he performed several works by American composers.

His impressive finish in the Jenson Foundation competition affords Garland not only the $15,000 that goes along with first place, but also the promise of a contract with Opera Carolina. Over 150 competitors were narrowed to 15 who performed for the judges on May 22 at New York's Baruch Performing Arts Center.



On June 6, Garland will be on-stage in Boston as Chorus pro Musica, led by Music Director Betsy Burleigh, brings its current season to a dramatic close with Carl Orff's "Carmina Burana" and Dominick Argento's "I Hate and I Love" (Odi et Amo). The performance will also feature soprano Mary Wilson, tenor Rockland Osgood as well as Youth pro Musica, under the direction of Robert Barney.

Chorus pro Musica will perform at 3 p.m. Sunday, June 6, at Jordan Hall, 30 Gainsborough St., Boston. Reserved seats are available by calling 800-658-4276 or online at chorusproMusica.org. Depending on availability, tickets may also be purchased at Jordan Hall on the day of the performance.

Water woes head to primetime

Town Meeting is Monday, 7p.m.

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The Cohasset Water Department — and, in turn, the town — is in deep water and looking for a life raft.

On Monday night, Special Town Meeting will have to vote on what form of financial life raft they are willing to use for the rescue.

Over the past three months town officials have developed a package of articles that address the water department's current year $760,000 budget shortfall and raise revenues to cover a projected $1.1 million deficit in next year's budget.

But, on Monday, the proposed solutions will be in the hands of the citizens of Cohasset who come to Town Meeting. Special Town Meeting will convene at 7p.m. on Monday, June 14 at the Cohasset High School gymnasium.

Like the problem, the solutions are complex and multi-faceted. The recommendations drafted by the Water Planning Group, a Selectmen-appointed committee charged with analyzing the water department's financials and proposing a short- and long-term solutions, may not be what all envisioned as a solution.

"We understand our proposal will be painful to many of our neighbors, but the only alternative is massive cuts in town services," Paul Carlson, selectman and chair of the Water Planning Group, said at Tuesday's water forum.

On the warrant is a motion for the town to assume the $300,000 cost to maintain the hydrants and fire protection, a significant water rate increase and a one-time transfer from $335,000 from the stabilization fund to cover the projected shortfalls this fiscal year (ending June 30) and next (beginning July 1).

Up until Wednesday night, the Water Planning Group (WPG) was recommending a $300,000 Proposition 2-1/2 override to create a line item in the fire department budget for fire protection and

'Never forget where you came from'

Class of 2010 did things 'differently'

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The Class of 2010 can go by many names, class president Sean MacCarthy said: the class of two thousand and 10, the class of 2010, the class of oh ten, the class of 20X, or even sen10rs (pronounced sen-10-ers).

But, no matter what they are collectively called, the 90 Cohasset High graduates are accomplished individuals in their young lives and are poised to continue to be successful.

Donning the traditional blue and white cap and gowns the graduates made their way into the green and yellow South Shore Music Circus tent to the chords of "Pomp and Circumstance" shortly after 1:30p.m. on Saturday.

A large crowd came out to cheer this class on. Principal Joel Antolini commented the venue was as full as he had ever seen on graduation day – "a tribute to this remarkable class."

Parents, grandparents, brothers, sisters, and friends greeted the soon-to-be high school graduates with camera flashes, applause and an occasional woop.

The ceremony was marked by messages of optimism in the face of challenging times, holding the memories of Construction of the First Parish cell tower has commenced. Last Thursday morning, many gathered, or stopped as they were driving by, to witness the lowering of the First Parish spire.

The wooden spire, which is not original to the building, is being replaced with a fiberglass replica that will better facilitate the cell operations.

First Parish is the latest in a number of local churches that have let cell phone companies house antennas in their spires.

Rod Hobson, a First Parish parishioner, said the project is moving along and barring any major issues the new spire should be up by the end of June.

"When it is finished, you shouldn't be able to notice the difference from the street," said Hobson in a phone interview. The globe and swallowtail weathervane that has adorned the top of the 18-foot spire will be fitted to the new spire.

T-Mobile approached First Parish about installing three panel antennas within a proposed steeple at a height of 64 feet above ground level. In order for the antennas to work properly, the wooden steeple will need to be replaced with a fiberglass replacement, which T-Mobile said will match the current steeple in design, dimension, color, texture and other visual qualities. Support equipment will need to be installed in the basement level of the building as well.

EDC sets new course

Looking for two new members

By Nancy White

The Economic Development Committee is looking to go back to its beginnings and focus on bringing more business, and appropriate business, to the town.

For the past two years, the Selectmen-appointed EDC has spent a lot of time establishing and organizing Cohasset Day festivities in partnership with the Chamber of Commerce. Going forward, Tim Chamberlain, the new EDC chairman, told the Board of Selectmen Monday night that they want to look at how to create more commercial tax base in the town and how to do in a way that's thoughtful.

"We want to bring in the right business," Chamberlain said. In part, the committee will concentrate on creating a database of all the vacancies in commercial space throughout town and land available for commercial development.

"The message isn't out there that there are great opportunities in Cohasset for businesses," Melissa Browne said. Browne was appointed as the newest member of the EDC on Monday night.

The focus will be the commercial corridor of Route 3A and empty storefronts in the village.

"We want to look at prudent economic development that keeps in the character of the town," Chamberlain said. Part

Cohasset Police Sergeant John Conte, left, looks over the accident scene on King Street on Monday evening (June 7).

Fatal accident on Route 3A

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Cohasset police said a 51-year-old Scituate man, Shawn Donnelly of 52 Garden Road, was headed south on Route 3A in a 2008 Chevrolet Silverado pickup truck toward Scituate, when he crossed over the centerline near Sanctuary Pond Road between lower King and Sohier streets at 6:02 p.m. Monday (June 7) and hit a wrecker that was headed north.

The accident claimed the life of Donnelly, who was transported to South Shore Hospital by Cohasset ambulance. He was pronounced dead upon arrival at the hospital, police said. Police said it appears he died of multiple traumatic injuries sustained in the crash; he was not wearing a seatbelt.

The man driving the 2008 Super-Duty wrecker out of Express Towing in Braintree was Marc Musco, 26, of Hull. Musco was transported to the hospital by Hull ambulance with non-life-threatening injuries, police said.

Witnesses said the Silverado pickup crossed over the centerline and hit the wrecker head-on, causing major impact.

The force of the collision impacted a third vehicle, a 2007 Nissan Murano, operated by Ryan Papi, of Scituate, police said. Papi was not injured; the car had to be towed, police said.

Route 3A traffic was diverted at lower King and Sohier streets for three hours. The State Police Accident Reconstruction Team helped Cohasset police with their investigation at the scene.

Investigation into the cause of the accident is continuing, police said. An autopsy was conducted Tuesday by the Medical Examiner, which includes routine tests to help rule out that a medical emergency may have occurred. Mechanical failure was ruled out at the scene, police said. Information about operation such as speed, acceleration, braking and airbag deployment from "black box" in the truck was downloaded at the scene by an accident reconstructionist, police said.

Witnesses reported operation of the pickup appeared to be normal for about a mile into Cohasset before the truck crossed over the centerline. Police said the driver of the wrecker said he had no time to react.

Two charged after leaving scene

Officers tracked two suspects for over an hour around Route 3A and Pond Street.

On Tuesday, June 8, at about 7:28pm, police responded to a report of a single-car motor vehicle crash at the intersection of Pond Street and Cushing Road. Callers reported a white pick-up truck struck a traffic island, taking down signs. On arrival officers learned that the truck fled the scene towards Route 3A. Moments later the truck was found abandoned at the intersection of Route 3A and Pond Street. Apparently, two men ran from the vehicle.

As officers were assessing the damage to the truck, which included a blown tire and front-end damage, police received a 911 call from a home on Route 3A reporting that a man just ran through their yard. Officers set up a perimeter and called for the Scituate Police K9 unit.

Officers tracked two suspects for over an hour around Route 3A and Pond Street. At about 9pm, a 911 caller reported that an intoxicated man was causing a disturbance in a side yard near Pond Street and Clay Spring Road. The caller said that the man was yelling at someone on his cellular telephone and sounded like he was attempting to get picked-up — he kept giving his location.

An additional K9 was requested from the Hingham Police and another perimeter was set-up. Minutes later an intoxicated suspect was flushed out of a backyard by the Scituate and Hingham K9 officers. This suspect actively and violently resisted arrest and refused to obey officers' commands, police said. The suspect, Marc Callahan, 41, of 9 Hilldale Road, Plymouth, was then contacted by the Scituate police K9 and received bite wounds to his buttocks. He was administered first aid on scene by police officers and was later transported to South Shore Hospital by ambulance.

Marc Callahan was arrested on charges of disorderly conduct, resisting arrest, malicious destruction of property over $250 (he broke through a fence in a back yard), and assault.

The alleged driver of the truck, Steven Porter, 50, of 70 First Parish Road, Norwell, was located at his home in Norwell by Norwell police late Tuesday night. He will be summonsed to Quincy District Court for leaving the scene of a motor vehicle accident after causing property damage and other charges as evidence develops. This case is still under investigation.

Motor vehicle crashes lead the news

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

No occupants

At 2:15 a.m. on Sunday morning (June 5), police responded to an accident involving a 1998 Toyota Camry was traveling south on North Main Street from Hingham by the train station when it went off the road hitting a utility pole causing it to fall and then struck a tree, before spinning out into the road.

When police arrived, there were no occupants in the car that was registered to a 57-year-old Cohasset woman. Police went to her house and woke her up. The woman reported that the car had been stolen. The incident remains under investigation. That section of North Main Street was closed for two hours due to the wires and downed pole. The vehicle was towed.

Accident

At about 4:50 p.m. on Saturday (June 4), police responded to a 9-1-1 call about a motor vehicle accident at North Main Street and Forest Avenue. Witnesses said a large, green landscaping truck had hit the traffic control box at the intersection and left the scene. The truck had heavy front-end damage. An officer responding to the scene spotted the truck disabled at the intersection of Sohier Street and Ripley Road.

The operator, a 28-year-old Hull man is being summonsed to court on the charges of leaving the scene of an accident after property damage, failure to drive in marked lanes and having a failed inspection sticker. The truck was towed. The passenger in the truck, who is the owner of the truck and the landscaping company, had a suspended license, police said.

Minor accidents

• At 10:33 a.m. on Saturday (June 4), a 1999 Subaru driven by a 36-year-old Cohasset man that was headed north on Route 3A had stopped at the light at Stop & Shop was "rear-ended" by a 2008 Honda Accord operated by a 19-year-old Cohasset woman. There was very minor damage, no apparent injuries and neither vehicle was towed, police said.

• At 12:06 p.m. on Saturday (June 4), a 2008 Jeep Grand Cherokee, operated by a 62-year-old Osterville woman, was headed south on Route 3A and had stopped at the light at 3A and Pond Street. The Jeep was "rear-ended" by a 2002 Acura SE, operated by an 18-year-old Scituate woman. There was minor damage, no injuries and neither vehicle was towed, police said.

Taillights

An officer conducting traffic enforcement in the area of Forest Avenue on Tuesday (June 1) at about 9:08 p.m. pulled over a 1992 Toyota Camry without taillights. Police said the operator, a 24-year-old Hull woman, could only produce a Chilean license and did not have the proper paperwork to support how long she had been in the U.S. She is being summonsed to court on the charges of operating while unlicensed and for defective taillights. The car was towed.

License plate

At about 9:30 a.m. on Friday (June 4), an officer pulled over a 1998 Jeep Wrangler on North Main Street near Forest Avenue for only having one license plate when two are required. The operator, a 44-year-old Cohasset woman, also had an expired license. She is being summonsed to court for license plate violation and unlicensed operation. A neighbor of hers was able to drive the Jeep, which did not have to be towed.

Water in tank

A 17-year-old Cohasset boy reported to police at about 9:30 a.m. on Wednesday (June 2) that someone had put water in the gas tank of his 2004 Jeep Wrangler. The teen thought it might have happened in the downtown area. He had to bring his Jeep to a garage where water was discovered in the fuel tank. The incident is being investigated.

Yelling

A concerned citizen from upper King Street notified police at about 10:50 p.m. on Thursday (June 3) when she heard two men yelling at each other in front of her house. She reported there had been no physical contact just noise and language that were a concern. Investigation revealed the men were training dogs and they were yelling at the dogs, not each other, police said.

Locked out

A caller reported the family dogs had locked themselves in her husband's truck at Sandy Beach and that her son and husband were locked out at about 7:20 a.m. on Saturday (June 4). Police explained the dogs apparently hit the electric lock.

Police are not permitted to try to unlock cars and have not done so for about 10 years because of the newer locks and side-airbags.

Protective custody

On officer on patrol in the village took a 55-year-old Cohasset woman into protective custody at about 6:30 p.m. on Saturday (June 4) after the officer was approached by two concerned citizens reporting that the woman appeared to be intoxicated and was falling down at Elm and Brook streets. The woman was later released to a friend.

Special Town Meeting on water crisis Monday

The water problems & proposed solutions

These are the problems and mostly short-term solution that the Town Meeting articles propose to address the major issues facing the water department.

• A $770,000 deficit in current fiscal year (2010).

To bridge the gap, a one-time $335,000 appropriation is requested from the stabilization fund (article 4). This funding will be combined with two advance payments from real estate development projects: Avalon Bay apartment complex ($335,000) and Cook Estate ($100,000).

• A projected $1.1-million deficit in fiscal 2011.

Article 5, a town operating budget override, and article 6, a water rate increase, are proposed to increase revenues to cover the projected shortfall. The town operating budget assumes the $300,000 cost for hydrant maintenance and fire protection. The amount would be added as a line item to the fire department budget for this specific purpose and the funding found through additional fees, new taxes or reductions in expenditures on the town operating budget.

The water rate increase, if passed, would increase the water department revenues by more than $800,000 in a conservative water usage year.

• Lack of budget oversight.

To address a lack of transparency and oversight by town boards and employees, language is proposed to give the Town Manager joint responsibility of the water department budget with the elected Water Commission (article 9). This change in language aligns the water enterprise fund charter with the sewer enterprise fund.

• Water quality/aesthetics.

The water quality – and drinkability – is one of the biggest complaints and concerns. The proposed capital expenditure of adding phosphate to the water (article 8, part B) could improve water quality in color and in several area of water quality, such as lead, officials said. The addition of phosphate is being recommended by the state Department of Environmental Protection.

Water articles endorsed by Selectmen

The Board of Selectmen voted to recommend all the articles pertaining to the water department's financial crisis, but not all of them were unanimous votes.

• Article 4: The Selectmen voted to 5 to 0 to recommend the $335,000 transfer from the stabilization fund.

• Article 5 and article 6: Selectman Lee Jenkins voted against recommending the article proposing a $300,000 override and the water rate increases. The other four selectmen voted to recommend approval to Town Meeting.

• Article 7: The Selectmen unanimously supported the water department's fiscal 2011 budget.

• Article 8: Selectmen Ted Carr and Karen Quigley did not vote to recommend the $300,000 capital expenditure proposal. Both said more vetting and information was needed, especially on the phosphate program.

• Article 9: Unanimous recommendation of changing the water enterprise fund charter to be jointly overseen by the water commission and the Town Manager.

hydrant maintenance. The water ratepayers through a fixed fee currently pay this cost.

Following Tuesday's water forum, the WPG revised its recommendation. Instead, a motion at town meeting will suggest incorporating the cost into the town operating budget and will not propose a $300,000 override, which would be a permanent tax increase.

"The water rate payers are being asked for major increases in water rates. We believe the town should also make some adjustments," Carlson said in a phone interview Thursday morning.

Special Town Meeting will convene on Monday, June 14 at 7p.m. in the Cohasset Middle-High School gymnasium. If a second night of discussion is needed the Special Town Meeting will be continued until Tuesday, June 15 at 7p.m.

The group proposes making up the $300,000 deficit for fiscal 2011 in non-real estate taxes, fees and town operating budget cuts to be determined.

To cover the larger piece of the $1.1 million projected deficit, approximately $800,000, a water rate increase (article 6) is proposed. It is the third time in four years Town Meeting has considered at water rate increase.

The proposal includes a $75 increase in the fixed quarterly rate, raising it to $187 per household per quarter.

"The way to fill the gap is with certainty. The reality is that's why there is a big increase in the fixed charge," said Chris Seebeck, chair of the Water Commission.

The second piece of the article raises the rate associated with water usage by 10 percent (see sidebar for more details on the water articles).

What isn't clear is how, if all the water articles fail at town meeting, the projected $1.1 million deficit will be dispersed over the town's operating budget. Town officials said it would have a significant effect on town-wide services, including police, fire, library, elder affairs, and the schools.

"The water department crisis is a town crisis," Carlson said on Tuesday. The town is liable for all deficits from the water department.

The ultimate decision on how to deal with the projected water department deficit will be up to Town Meeting voters.

Special Town Meeting will convene on Monday, June 14 at 7p.m. in the Cohasset Middle-High School gymnasium. If a second night of discussion is needed the Special Town Meeting will be continued until Tuesday, June 15 at 7p.m.

Water forum

At Tuesday night's forum, which drew about 70 audience members, many viewpoints, questions, concerns and confusion came forward.

While the finances of the ailing department were front and center at the water forum, and will be at the Special Town Meeting, it was clear from the questions there are other troubles facing the water department.

Several called for a "bigger picture" outlook. What is the master plan for the water department? Are there other options – privatizing the water system, joining the Massachusetts Water Resource Authority (MWRA), or selling more water?

More raised concerns about the water quality and potential improvements to the plant, including a proposed $5 million plant retrofit.

In much of the responses to these questions from the water planning group they said they have spent the past few months focused on getting their arms around the financial crisis of the department and not had time to look at the other issues facing the department. They planned to look at all the concerns brought forward and more in the coming months.

Heard at the water forum

"There is no perfect answer, there is no right answer, but there is a balanced judgment from the people in the Water Planning Group."
– John Beck, water planning group member and sewer commissioner

WPG meeting not posted

The Water Planning Group did not properly post their meeting of Tuesday, June 1. The committee met and finalized its recommendations for reform within the water department and Water Commission. The lack of posted meeting is a violation of the Open Meeting Law statute.

Meetings of town boards (elected or appointed) conducting public business must be posted with the Town Clerk's Office 48 hours in advance of the meeting.

Water Planning Group chairman Paul Carlson when reached on Thursday (June 3) said he did not realize the meeting had not been posted. The Town Manager's office had been taking care of the posting of the meetings.

In a phone interview, Carlson apologized for the oversight and said he would double-check the meeting postings in the future.

If votes were taken at the meeting they need to be re-voted at a properly posted meeting of the Water Planning Group, Town Clerk Marion Douglas said.

According to Carlson, no votes were taken. The committee reached a consensus on the reform recommendations, but did not take a formal vote.

New commissioner sought

With John McNabb's resignation, the Water Commission is looking for a third member. Under state statute, the position is filled through a majority vote of the Board of Selectmen and the remaining members of the commission.

The appointed member will hold the position until the next town election in April 2011.

"It is critical we find someone to fill that term given the situation," Selectmen vice chair Ted Carr said.

Selectman Paul Carlson said the Water Planning Group would work on drafting a recommendation for what skills are needed for the position.

Interested citizens should send a letter of interest to the Town Manager's office in Town Hall (41 Highland Ave.) or call the Town Hall for more information (781-383-4105).

Special Town Meeting on water crisis Monday

Calls for resignation

Quigley wants new management for water department

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

On Monday night, Selectmen chairman Karen Quigley made the first public call for the resignation of a member of the Water Commission.

In the midst of the water department's financial crisis, Quigley said new management was one of the keys to restoring public confidence — and she said, quite possibly, passing the Town Meeting water articles.

Last week, long-time Water Commission member John McNabb resigned from the elected position he had held for 13 years with little explanation except for it was personal reasons.

Glenn Pratt, who has served as chair of the Water Commission for the past five years and on the board for 11 years, is in his second year of a three-year term. He has been involved in the Water Planning Group's efforts since its inception in March.

Pratt said in a phone interview on Wednesday he does not plan on resigning.

Audience members, too, at the water forum held on Tuesday echoed Quigley's concerns and said there was a case for new management.

"While no one can demand an independently elected official resign, neither are we required to endorse their remaining in office. I do not," Quigley said in a written statement she read at the Monday Selectmen meeting. "I'm told it's important that leadership present a unified front. I'd like to, but to me, their offense is so egregious that there is no alternative."

Quigley said absent of Pratt's resignation a message would be sent to the townspeople that it is "business as usual."

"We run the very real risk of having the warrant articles voted down which would be a financial disaster for the town," Quigley said. "Both commission members (Pratt and McNabb) have spent many years serving this town very well. It's not something I say lightly, but I believe it firmly."

On the Board of Selectmen it seemed Quigley stood alone.

Selectmen vice chair Ted Carr said it has been Pratt who has been standing there throughout the whole process since the issue came to light in late February.

"He has been answering the hard questions that need to answered…and that takes true grit," Carr said, adding he takes his part of the responsibility because he should have asking harder questions of the commission and the department.

Selectman Paul Carlson, who is also serving as the chair of the Water Planning Group, said the committee could not have done the work they have done without him.

Quigley said coming to meetings and providing information did not cancel out what brought the department to this financial crisis.

Selectman Fred Koed said much of the department's financial trouble was due to the economy (new development not coming online) and a couple of wet summers, "those things are out of everybody's control."

Quigley again disagreed. She said there has been much discussion at the water planning group about mismanagement being a contributing factor to the current state of affairs. Quigley said an apology to the people of Cohasset was necessary.

At Tuesday's water forum, Chris Seebeck, the Water Commission chairman as of last week, spoke to Pratt remaining on the board.

"There is some value in having someone on the commission, Glenn Pratt, for historical reference. There's a lot to be done and he brings tremendous knowledge…you will effectively see a different team running the show," Seebeck said, adding Pratt's term is up in April 2011.

In a phone interview on Wednesday, Pratt said he understood it was the consensus of the Water Planning Group that his involvement is useful and helpful as the water department moves into the next phase.

"I'm no less enthusiastic now about being on the board and addressing water quality as I was when I started," Pratt said. "Community service is community service. You commit to it and you see it through.

"This is where we are right now and we have to fix it," Pratt said.

New chairman for water commission

Chris Seebeck, who was elected to the Water Commission in April, was voted the new chair of the troubled board last week. Water Commissioner Glenn Pratt will serve as vice chairman.

Seebeck said he ran for the water commission for what was likely similar to the reason that brought the audience to their seats at Tuesday's water forum — frustration with the water department.

In comments made at Tuesday night's water forum, Seebeck said his focus would be instituting financial discipline and promoting transparency. He said he fully supported the reform recommendations that came out of the water planning group and going forward conservative budget numbers would be used for projections.

"I want to make sure every dollar we take in gets applied and used properly," Seebeck said.

Later in the meeting, he was asked by Kathy Devaney of Spring Street where water quality stood on his list of priorities. Seebeck said water quality went hand in hand with his named priorities.

"We need to get the public better informed about water quality. We look to citizens to provides us with information so we can assess and address water quality issues," Seebeck said.

The six water articles

Article 4: Transfer from Stabilization Fund

Proposes a $335,000 transfer from the town's stabilization fund to the water enterprise fund to partially cover the fiscal 2010 (current years) shortfall. It is anticipated the second settlement installment of $335,000 from Avalon Bay (due when the first occupancy permit is issued by the town) will be used to reimburse the stabilization fund.

Article 5: Amendment to Fiscal 2011 Operating Budget

A motion at town meeting will suggest incorporating the $300,000 cost of fire protection and hydrant maintenance into the town operating budget. The accounting maneuver will create a $300,000 deficit in the town fiscal 2011 budget already approved at Town Meeting in March.

To make up the $300,000 deficit the Water Planning Group suggests establishing non-real estate taxes, fees and town operating budget cuts to be determined. Some measures to cover the gap may need to be approved by another special town meeting.

Article 6: Water rates and charges

The proposal includes a $75 increase in the fixed quarterly charge for most homeowners (total fixed rate will be $187 per quarter), and calls for an increase in the water usage charge. The Water Planning Group's reasoning behind a high increase in the fixed charge is to more closely align the fixed charge to the debt service obligations, which account for 63% of the budget.

The proposed water usage rate increases are approximately 10 percent over current rates. For Tier 1 users (those who use less than 2,000 cubic feet per quarter), the water usage rate will be $5.68. The tier 2, for all water used over and above 2,000 cubic feet per quarter, is $11.35.

(A proposal to have the motion include a condition to increase water usage charge by 33 percent if the override fails will no longer be part of the town manager's recommended motions).

If both articles – the $300,000 transfer and the rate increase – fail, town services will need to be cut to cover the projected $1.1-million deficit.

Article 7: Water Department Budget

Proposed a budget of $4,682,109 for fiscal 2011 and projects $4,739,221 in revenues yielding a potential surplus of $57,112. The current budget assumes articles 5 and 6 are approved.

If article 5 and/or article 6 are not approved, amendments will need to be made to the water department's proposed fiscal 2011 budget

Article 8: Water Department Capital Improvement Projects

A total of $300,000 in capital projects will be requested of Town Meeting for three projects. First, a new scheme for the sludge lagoons, which hold the waste products of the treatment process, is requested for $100,000. It is expected this new scheme would pay for itself in a year's time. Second, $50,000 is needed to implement a "phosphate program" at the water plant to improve the issues of discolored water.

And last, $150,000 is proposed to pay unpaid bills associated with the Little Harbor project.

The committee proposing paying for these capital improvements through an estimated $3.50 increase in the fixed rate for the next year (fiscal 2012).

Article 9: Water Enterprise Fund

Proposes an amendment to the article that established the water enterprise fund by providing for joint management by the Water Commission and the Town Manager. Identical language to what is being proposed is currently in the sewer enterprise fund charter.

Madison Ahern, a third-grade student at the Deer Hill School in Cohasset has won top honors in the 2010 Anti-Tobacco Poster Contest.

Top honors in anti-tobacco poster contest

Madison Ahern, a third-grade student at the Deer Hill School in Cohasset has won top honors in the 2010 Anti-Tobacco Poster Contest sponsored by the Massachusetts Medical Society and its Alliance, an annual educational event to alert schoolchildren to the dangers of tobacco and smoking.

Ahern's entry, titled "Tobacco Affects Other People," was one of just 12 winners selected from more than 2,400 entries to the competition. The contest is open to youngsters in grades one through six throughout Massachusetts.

Along with the other winners, Madison was honored at a special event at the State House on May 27, hosted by Senator Richard Moore (D-Uxbridge). Presenting the awards were Alice Coombs, M.D., President of the Massachusetts Medical Society; Alan Ashare, M.D., Chair of the Medical Society's Committee on Student Health and Sports Medicine; and Marie-Christine Reti, President of the MMS Alliance.

The competition asks students to create an original poster that ties in with certain themes for their grade. The themes by grades are: Grades one and two: Show how tobacco is bad for your body; Grades three and four: Show how using tobacco affects other people; Grades five and six: Why I won't start. Four entries are selected in each category.

The winning entries, chosen on the basis of originality, artistic merit, and relevance to the theme for the grades, will be included in a 2011 calendar produced by the Medical Society that will be distributed to schools, pediatricians, and family physicians across the Commonwealth. This year marks the 15th year that the Massachusetts Medical Society has conducted the contest. To view all 12 winning entries, visit www.massmed.org/AntiTobacco2010

Meet me on the river

Garden tour highlights Gulf River, Border Street

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

When many think of Cohasset they think of the sweeping ocean view on Jerusalem Road, the quaint harbor with the bobbing lobster boats, or the picturesque Common with the Meetinghouse and duck pond.

On June 23, the public is invited to view one of the hidden gems of Cohasset — the gardens of the Gulf River. For the benefit of the Cohasset Historical Society, eight homeowners are making their private vistas of the peaceful tidal river that empties to Cohasset Harbor available.

Co-chairs of the event Eleanor Bleakie, Linda Pratt and Annette Sawchuk have led of committee of close to 40 in the coordination of this fundraising event.

The chief architect of the event is Bleakie, a long-time supporter of the Cohasset Historical Society. The North Scituate resident but a Cohasseter at heart, called on her neighbors to open their gardens for the benefit of the historical society. Her own home on Border Street, just over the Cohasset/Scituate line, is on the "Gardens of the Gulf" tour.

"It is such a beautiful place to live," Bleakie said. "We were very lucky that all the homeowners showing their gardens were willing to do it. They are all very different – different gardens, old and new homes."

Bleakie's garden is simple and low maintenance with terrace showcasing a beautiful view of the river.

"Unless you knew the homeowner, these are views you would never see," Annette Sawchuk said. The fact the gardens are all in one walk-able location is one of the unique features of the tour. The gardens on the tour are all within a half-mile from each other.

The proceeds from "Gardens of the Gulf" will go toward future Historical Society programs, continued improvement of the Pratt Building (Historical Society headquarters) and maintenance of its collections.

The name of the tour, " Gardens of the Gulf," is accompanied by an old hymn, "Shall we gather at the river?" The final verse was included in the tour book, which doubles as a ticket, as the most appropriate for the day's event: "On the margin of the river,/Washing up its silver spray,/We shall walk and worship ever,/All the happy golden day."

The organizers are hoping to attract the avid gardener looking for ideas and those curious, inside and outside of town, to see the river views.

"It is a different take on Cohasset. Here you expect to see the coast, you expect to see the harbor, you don't expect to see a riverfront," Linda Pratt, co-chair, said.

Each garden will have several "garden guides" to provide explanations of the plantings and some of the challenges in growing next to a river. The homeowners bordering the river banded together many years ago to form the Gulf Association, Inc., which strives to protect the river and its wildlife from harm. Landscaping and maintenance is done accordingly in an environmentally friendly manner.

The gardens on the tour are all on the riverside of Border Street with one exception. Four of the homes are new; one was moved by barge from Boston; one is designed as a French chateau; the smaller houses on the Cohasset end were Portuguese fishermen's cottages. One new house is on the harbor side.

Over and above the flourishing and colorful gardens, some of the homes have outstanding features such as outdoor kitchens, intricate stonework and masonry and water features (koi pond, waterfall, infinity pool) within the garden area.

Included in the garden tour is a picnic lunch, which will be ready on tour day to be picked up at the Lightkeepers' Residence. The Lightkeepers' Residence has extensive gardens that are jointly maintained by the Community Garden Club and the Cohasset Garden Club.

Tour goers are encouraged to enjoy their lunch in the surrounding area of the Lightkeepers along the harborfront or at 143 Border St.

Visitors are welcome to stop in to see the Historical Society's museums (The Captain John Wilson House and the Maritime Museum) on Elm St. as well as the Pratt Building on South Main where the society is headquartered.

There is no parking along the tour route; instead parking is available at three locations at either end of the tour. Visitors can park at Atlantica, Lightkeepers' Residence and at 143 Border St. (in Scituate). Shuttle bus service is available throughout the tour, but visitors are encouraged to walk the half-mile stretch where all the houses are located.

The gardens will be open from 10a.m. to 4p.m. and there is no set route. Garden guides will be at the houses to welcome guests and point out the striking features and flowers of the gardens.

Tickets are $35 for Historical Society members and $40 for non-members. Tickets are on sale at the Historical Society headquarters at the Pratt Building, Fleming's, Darilynn's,, Buttonwood Books and Toys and Paperscapes.

For more information, please call the Historical Society at 781-383-1434.

The owners of 155 Border St. recently added a pergola as an entertainment center. The outdoor cooking space is furnished with an antique soap sink, and a pizza oven. Established gardens surround this outdoor entertaining space that overlooks the Gulf River.

The three-story colonial home was built on State Street in Boston in the late 1770s, then moved by barge to Cohasset in the early 1800s. The home, now surrounded by peonies and a formal garden, was moved to its current location in 1933.

Lobster roll and strawberry shortcake tradition continues

Preorders must be placed by 6 p.m. on Thursday, June 17.

Lobster Lovers - it's time again for the lobster rolls at First Parish Church on Cohasset Common. The sale is held during the South Shore Art Festival on Father's Day Weekend, June 18, 19 and 20. First Parish has been offering these lobster rolls since Lucia Woods of Cohasset began the fundraiser in 2003. Nearly 1,200 rolls were sold last year.

Today Penny and Art Myles of Hingham continue Lucia's tradition as co-chairs by bringing together more than 60 volunteers for the success of this project. As Lucia always says, "Make it the perfect summer eating experience with a lobster roll from First Parish and a strawberry shortcake from across the common at the Second Congregational Church." Order early and consider treating your office staff to a special toast-to-summer meal on Friday. Or celebrate Father's Day by bringing rolls home for friends and family on Sunday. Walk-ins are welcome as long as supplies last.

The sale is extended this year into Sunday afternoon by popular demand. The all-meat lobster rolls with a bag of Cape Cod potato chips are offered for $13. Preorders are recommended and may be placed by calling Penny Myles at 781-749-1989 or the church at 781-383-1100. Or mail your order to the Parish House, 23 No. Main St., Cohasset, MA 02025 with your check made out to "First Parish Cohasset." Preorders must be placed by 6 p.m. on Thursday, June 17.

Orders may be picked up at the Parish House, 23 No. Main Street, Cohasset:

Friday: 11 a.m. to 7 p.m.
Saturday: 11 a.m. to 7 p.m.
Sunday: 11 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Community Garden Club celebrates Arbor Day at Osgood

The tree is placed next to the playground where it will grow and provide shade for many years to come.

In celebration of Arbor Day the Community Garden Club of Cohasset, a member of the National Federation of Clubs and the Garden Club Federation of Massachusetts, planted four trees around Cohasset, enhancing the beauty of the town. At the Arbor Day concert on June 4 at Joseph Osgood School, principal Janet Sheehan introduced Community Garden Club of Cohasset president Janice Todd who presented a Tulip Poplar tree to students and faculty. The tree is placed next to the playground where it will grow and provide shade for many years to come. "Watch it grow and we will watch you grow," Mrs. Todd told the students. The day was then filled with the sound of children's voices singing songs led by music teachers Rose Hathon and Ben Mafera.

Other plantings around town included a Dawn Redwood at Deer Hill School, an Atlas Blue Cedar at Cohasset Library, and a Kwanzan Cherry in the triangle near the Cohasset Memorial Park at the harbor. The Kwanzan Cherry tree was a gift to the CGCC from its sister club in Nagoya, Japan, to commemorate the 50th anniversary of the CGCC. Each tree has a watering sack and a club member "attached" to it for watering during the warm summer months, to assure its survival.

For history buffs, Arbor Day has its "roots" in Nebraska, when Julius Sterling Moon, Nebraska journalist and Secretary of Agriculture, encouraged Americans to plant trees for shade, orchards and as wind breaks. He proposed that a special day be set aside for tree planting and to increase awareness of the importance of trees. The first Arbor Day was April 10, 1872. The idea spread nationwide and in 1970 President Nixon proclaimed the last Friday in April as Arbor Day. In New England people plant a little later.

Making it to the big tent

Arts Festival features self-portrait of Hunter Sease

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

One of Cohasset's own young and aspiring artists will take his place among some of New England's most talented artists.

Hunter Sease, a 2007 Cohasset High graduate, was awarded third prize in oil and acrylic in the juried exhibition that is the centerpiece of next week's South Shore Art Center's Arts Festival.

The winning piece is a self-portrait entitled "Blue Hunter."

As a senior at the Art Institute in Boston, Sease is a fine art major focusing on oil painting. His interest currently is painting with a figure. His minor is ceramics on a wheel.

For 21-year-old Sease, having his work displayed in the main exhibition tent is both an honor and accomplishment.

"It's really great. Every year I have gone in there and been really envious of the work there," Sease said. "To have my work in the center of the town I grew up in is a really great feeling."

Sease is looking forward to hearing feedback from his friends and family who will come to Festival and make a special visit to see his painting. Many hometown contacts know he has been in art school, but haven't seen his work, "it's going to be exciting."

The Arts Festival, celebrating its 55th year on Cohasset Common, will begin Friday, June 18 and continue until Sunday, June 20. The festival turns Cohasset Common into an art showcase. Thousands come from all over to peruse the nearly 100 juried craft artist booths that offer unique and hand-crafted products. Ceramicists, wood carvers and painters demonstrate their work.

Musical entertainment from bluegrass to jazz to the Irish band "The O'Reilly's" will be on-going all weekend.

Of course, First Parish's lobster rolls and Second Congregation's strawberry shortcake are perennial favorites.

"To have my work in the center of the town I grew up in is a really great feeling."
— Hunter Sease, artist

The 70-piece juried exhibit, where Sease portrait is featured, was chosen from over 400 submissions.

In an amusing coincidence, Sease previously has a self-portrait displayed at the Art Festival. In high school one of his self-portrait (he now describes as "not so good") was chosen for display in the Young Artist's Exhibition.

Sease took classes at the high school and interned with the Art Center through the community service program the Cohasset High his senior year.

"I started to take art seriously and really think about going to art school my junior year," Sease said.

His "Blue Hunter" self-portrait was his final work in a semester long class that solely focused on self-portraits. Each week last fall he was assigned to create a self-portrait.

To do the portrait, Sease would stand for several hours looking in a mirror with his canvas next to it like a book.

In creating his work, he said he typically starts with a rough sketch. In the case of "Blue Hunter" he was using a dark blue pencil over a gray background, which led him to the blue-tinted background to the figure.

"I wing it at first and (the work) goes in a direction that I follow," Sease said. When he finished the figure, he continued to work on the blue background.

"Blue Hunter" self-portrait by Hunter Sease was awarded third prize in oil and acrylic in the juried exhibition.

"It's one of my strongest ones," Sease said, estimating he spent about 24 hours over the course of two weeks to create the finished product.

He painted the portrait this past fall, and then headed to Florence, Italy to study abroad. His parents ended up bring the portrait to the Art Center for consideration in the Festival's juried exhibit.

"Next thing I know I'm getting an e-mail that my piece was awarded third place," Sease said.

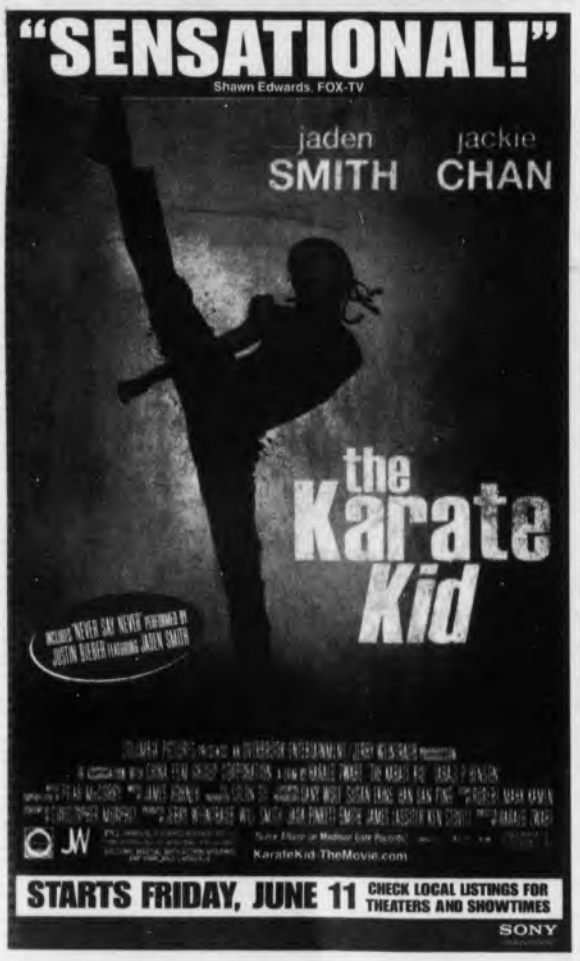
Sease said he is continually inspired and motivated by his fellow artist classmates and experiencing new things.

"I like to make things new and exciting. At school we're exposed to a lot of different kinds of art and it keeps you fresh and in the painting mentality," Sease said. While in Italy he painted "all the time" and got to see up close and personal the Renaissance art he had studied and learned about.

And when he returned home, he arrived with a new appreciation of his own surroundings.

"Now that I'm home I appreciate it more, and realize how beautiful it is here," Sease said.

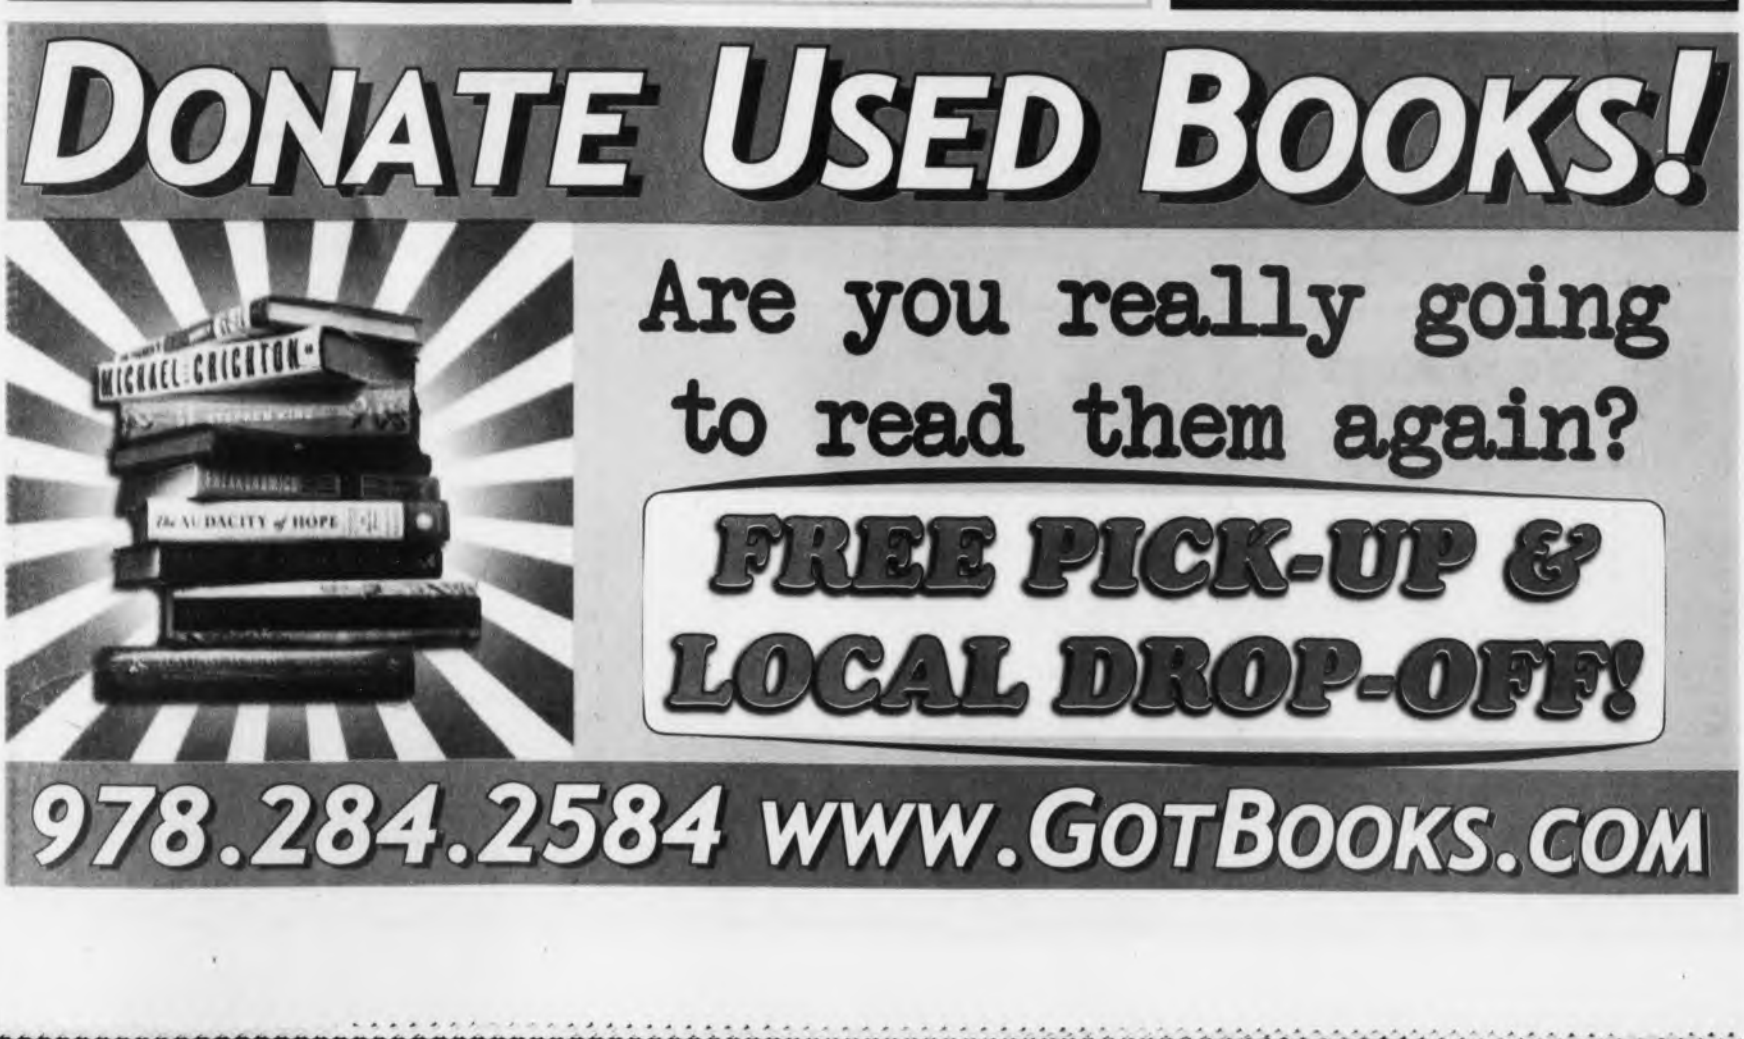
For the summer, he is working on making the local area even more beautiful. Sease is working for Ralph Froio Landscaping and painting when he can. He plans to continue his art education in a graduate school program and aspires to be a painter and a gallery owner someday.



Festival hours are Friday, June 18, 2 to 7 p.m.; Saturday, June 19, 10 a.m. to 7 p.m.; and Sunday, June 20, noon to 5p.m. A free trolley shuttles visitors from parking at South Shore Music Circus. A $5 entrance donation is requested. For a complete schedule of events, visit www.ssac.org, or phone 781-383-2787.

Steven Puleo to talk about 'When Boston Awoke'

Paul Pratt Memorial Library, 35 Ripley Road, Cohasset, will welcome author Steven Puleo at 7 p.m., on Thursday, June 24. Puleo will speak about his most recent book, "A City So Grand," which chronicles Boston's emergence as a world class city during the years 1850-1900. The book is an exploration and connection of historical details that gave rise to Boston's eminence. Puleo will talk about the power of the abolitionists and the city's empire building merchants, how the Irish immigration reshaped the city's culture, Boston's railway system as the hub of the nation, the engineering feat that transformed Back Bay from a dismal swamp into a prosperous residential neighborhood, America's first subway system and more. Puleo said, "...No period in Boston's history was more dynamic."



Sponsored by Buttonwood Books, this event is free and open to the public. Autographed books will be available for purchase.

New spire to be raised soon

ing. Two prior steeples were hit by lightning and this third spire was substantially re-built in the 1990s, Hobson said.

At Monday night's Selectmen's meeting, Hobson and fellow parishioner Art Myles discussed the possibility of the town granting a license to the church to allow the installation of underground wires.

The Meetinghouse is unique in that it is a privately owned building on public land. The land surrounding the First Parish church, the Town Common, is town property; the First Parish congregation owns just the building and the land beneath it. The electrical wiring running from a telephone pole surrounding the common to the building will be moved underground.

First Parish Meeting House was built in 1747 and is part of the Cohasset Common Historic District, which is listed on the National Register of Historic Places.

"There is no downside I can see. It will be safer and aesthetically better," Hobson said, adding whenever he takes a photo of the building the wires need to be edited out in Photoshop.

The license would cover the approximately 30-feet where the wires would be underground. T-Mobile is still drafting the license agreement.

At the next Town Meeting, it is likely a more permanent easement would be sought – a right that needs to be granted by Town Meeting. The reason being the town can revoke a license at any time.

The Massachusetts Historical Commission approved the replacement of the First Parish spire. Both the Cohasset Historical Commission and the Historical Society expressed concern with the use of fiberglass and the impact on the historical integrity of the building and the site.

Cohasset firefighters 'Fill-The-Boot' to aid MDA

When members of the International Association of Fire Fighters (IAFF) aren't fighting fires, they fight a different foe: neuromuscular diseases. Cohasset Local #2804 of the IAFF will be at the Super Stop & Shop located at 400 Chief Justice Cushing Highway on Saturday, June 12 and Sunday, June 13 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. to Fill-The-Boot for the Muscular Dystrophy Association (MDA). The International Association of Fire Fighters (IAFF) is a longtime friend and the single-largest sponsor of MDA, contributing more than $400 million since 1954. Last year the Massachusetts Fill-the-Boot campaign raised $845,729.44 making it the sixth highest raising state in the nation.

Fill-the-Boot funds support MDA's services locally and nationally, including medical clinics staffed by the top health professionals skilled in the diagnosis and medical management of neuromuscular diseases. Clinics also include consultations and recommendations for programs of physical, occupational, respiratory, and speech therapy; genetic counseling; and assessments for needed mobility and communication equipment. UMass Memorial Medical Center, Mass General Hospital, Children's Hospital, Brigham and Women's Hospital, New England Medical Center and Lahey Clinic in Burlington are the local clinics that will benefit from the Cohasset Local #2804 boot drive.

In 2011, the EDC hopes to transfer "ownership" of Cohasset Day, which occurs on Sunday, Sept. 12 this year, to a separate Cohasset Day Committee.

The EDC is looking for two citizens to join their ranks. Much of the committee members' expertise and background is in real estate, so Chamberlain said a diversity of talent is sought.

We Auto Know
by Gene Smith and Jay Gorman

BAD VIBES!

When drivers discern vibrating noises in their vehicles, the source can be difficult to trace since the automobile has rotating parts from front to back and vibrations can travel the length of the vehicle. One of the potential sources of this irritating problem rests with the engine mounts that are designed to isolate engine vibrations from the automobile frame. The mounts usually consist of rubber sandwiched between metal plates with studs that are bolted to the engine and the frame of the vehicle. Upon close inspection, it may be revealed that cracks or separation in the mount have led to failure of this component. Once the integrity of the engine mount has been compromised, replacement is necessary.

A cracked engine mount is just one of the possible causes for a badly vibrating car. At ATLANTIC TIRE AND ALIGNMENT, Our ASE certified technicians will take the time to listen to you and to your car. Then we'll perform a bumper-to-bumper check to find the source of the problem – whatever that may be – and fix it so that you can get back on the road quickly and safely. We can also provide the regular maintenance that will prevent things like a cracked engine count in the first place. Call 781-925-3200 for an appointment today. Our address is 25 Atlantic House Rd. If you've gotten in an accident, be sure to check out our sister store, Cohasset Collision Center, 179 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy., Cohasset, 781-383-3001.

Hint: Drivers should avoid the habit of looking over their shoulders to gauge the safety of a lane-changing maneuver.

'No Phone Zone'

In 12 seconds, tragedy can strike a distracted driver.

That's how long on the average it takes for a car driver to digest a single-sentence message.

Like a text message.

How long need a driver take eyes off the road to punch a cell phone button to send or answer a call?

Perhaps a lifetime.

Every day, an average of 15 people die in car crashes involving a distracted driver.

In 2008, nearly 6,000 died and more than 500,000 were injured, according to the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration.

A driver distracted by a phone is a driver at risk who is also putting others at risk.

There is now a nation-wide campaign to turn every car into a "No Phone Zone." The goal of "No Phone Zone" is to keep teens going places, happy and healthy.

But we hope that Cohasset residents of all ages will get behind this effort because no one is immune to death by cell phone.

Here at the Cohasset Mariner office in Hingham Square we have a bird's eye view over our part of downtown South Street. It never ceases to amaze us how many Moms and Dads get into their SUVs after restraining their children in car seats. They turn on the ignition and then, take out the cell phone as they are pulling out of the parking spot. Why not make the call while still parked?

Think of the last few times you were behind the wheel. Chances are on a least one occasion you were forced to swerve or stop short because another driver had a cell phone in hand and did not have driving on his or her mind.

Many motorists are using cell phones to make and receive calls and even text while driving.

Every day, accidents and near misses happen because drivers are involved with cell phones. Teens are especially susceptible because they lack the years of driving experience that can sometimes enable a seasoned driver to avoid a crash.

When a car ignition goes on, a cell phone should go off.

Viewers can still see the recent April 30 Oprah show on the "No Phone Zone" and sign the pledge on line at: www.oprah.com/nophonezone.

All drivers, not just teens, should observe the "No Phone Zone."

Everyone should take the "No Phone Zone" pledge.

Don't drive under the influence of a cell phone.

The cost of cell-phoning and driving may be a life.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Buddy Poppies celebrate, help veterans

TO THE EDITOR:

The Cohasset VFW Post 9146 would like to thank everyone who assisted our local efforts with their very generous donations and their support of all Veterans by displaying a "Buddy Poppy". This year's campaign was one of the most successful in memory, so many people were both generous with their contributions and their willingness to thank and show support of our Veterans.

For more than 75 years, the Veterans of Foreign Wars' "Buddy Poppy" Program has raised millions of dollars in support of veterans' welfare and the well being of their dependants. From its inception, the "Buddy Poppy" Program has helped the VFW live up to its motto, "to honor the dead by helping the living".

The "Buddy Poppy" — a small red flower symbolic of the bloodshed in World War I by millions of Allied soldiers in defense of freedom — was originally sold to provide relief for the people of war-devastated France. Later, its sale directly benefited thousands of disabled and down-and-out American veterans.

These Cohasset businesses were especially helpful and supportive again this year were Shaw's, Stop & Shop, Goodwin Graphics, Curtis Liquors, and Dragonfly Embroidery. We also appreciate the other businesses and merchants who support our efforts.

We would also like to thank and recognize the following volunteers who gave so generously of their time: Gordon Flint, Ralph Hill, Marie & Ralph Perroncello, Tony Muzzi, Tom Healy, also helping were Polly Litchfield, Paul St John, Bill Higgins, Kevin McArdle, Kathy Bailey, Gareth & Joslin Thomas, Ron & Mary Goodwin, Lisa Santaniello, Pat Laugelle, Bill White, Eleana Dear, Sue Zarrella Anita & Robbie Ross, Amy Staley, Lou Ann Richardson, Ginny Najmi, Kathryn Sweet, Ed Graham, Brad Goodwin and Buddy the Dog.

Anyone interested in knowing more about the Veterans of Foreign Wars or to help next year are encouraged to contact the Cohasset VFW Post 9146.

Thank you again, to everyone for their support and appreciation of all our Veterans.

Shared vision, consensus needed

COMMENTARY

TRISH MORSE

This new scheme and its resulting oligarchy have left the faculty without a voice, left students in classrooms without their regular teachers and leave the greater community with a growing sense of concern about yet another issue.

I read with great interest the commentary in last week's Cohasset Mariner by Adrienne McCarthy on the topic of the Program Supervisors at the High School. Having followed this and other related issues carefully over the past half-year or so, I have some thoughts I would like to share.

Mrs. McCarthy would have us believe that the "newer and more forward thinking" Program Supervisor model now in place here in Cohasset is one that is widely implemented and highly successful elsewhere in the country, and that we would be woefully old fashioned and out of date if we did not "embrace the change". Nowhere in a week's worth of research, several discussions with educators, administrators and consultants specializing in 21st Century education from here to Colorado can I find anything to back up the claim that this model is considered a "Best Practice".

What I did learn is that this model in not widespread, typically resulting from budget cuts and, as Mrs. McCarthy also pointed out, the fact that department heads are not part of the teachers' bargaining unit. This seems to be an advantage to exactly 4 people; the Superintendent and the three Program Supervisors. Whether by design or whether it is just a convenient coincidence, cutting the department heads has the appearance of being an end run by the administration to get a leg up on the union and have full control of the faculty, the departments and all decision making.

One of the secondary advantages to this model outlined by the Superintendent to both the town Advisory Committee and to the School Committee was cost savings. When asked at last week's School Committee meeting exactly what that cost saving figure was, neither the Superintendent nor the business manager could remember. If this had been a significant cost savings by any measure, surely that number would have been top of mind. Try as I might to make the numbers work, I simply cannot find a way to achieve measurable cost savings by adding these highly paid administrative positions, even taking into consideration the fact that they also teach a class or two and the former department heads now teach a full load. We must also figure in the added cost of paying substitute teachers to cover classes for the Program Supervisors who attend frequent full-day "Professional Development" seminars. One would hope that at such a high salary, these administrators would have come to us already fully professionally developed and only require occasional coverage. In addition to the actual dollar savings claimed by this measure, I would also like to request the figure for the total dollars paid out to substitute teachers during this period who have been called in to teach classes in their absence.

Ripley Road area needs improvement

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Greenbush Guys at Work — If you've been in Town for more than five years you probably remember the center of the village before the Town's "Revitalization" project. The center had become quite tired over the years and the infrastructure such as street storm drains, sidewalks and the streets them selves were not in very good shape. The curbstones had nearly disappeared as new layers of asphalt had been added to the roads over the years. The Town applied for and was awarded a Massachusetts Public Works Economic Development Grant (PWED) to improve the central Village area. There was much public debate regarding some of the aesthetics and design details. When the dust finally settled, the area of South Main Street, Depot Court, Brook and Elm streets in the center Village were, in fact, totally reconstructed. New trees were planted, the curbs and sidewalks were redone, roads were repaved, and most agree that it was quite an improvement.

The original Revitalization design plans called for the project to continue down Ripley Road to the area of the new Paul Pratt Library. When the available funds fell short, Ripley Road was left untouched. We' like to find a way to continue the enhancement of this part of the Village, particularly to the Post Office area, and, if possible, to the library. This section of our Village commercial area seems to be the forgotten stepchild and needs to be better linked to the rest of the commercial area. Consequently, the Greenbush Guys, under the auspices of the Town Manager, are making plans to apply for another PWED grant to improve the Ripley Road area to make it more attractive to businesses and the economic health of our town, which is what PWED grants are designed to do.

While we are talking about economic health, there are several other parts of the commercial area that could logically be included in our grant request. First, the road called "Parkingway" which lines the rear of the South Main Street buildings is a prime candidate for improvement. A quick drive down the edge of the Town Parking Lot will convince you that parts of this area are neither fully developed nor attractive. Also, keep in mind when we are talking about development we are talking about "smart" development. Several years back the Town passed special zoning provisions that includes the ability to combine residential and commercial uses with the goal to increase residential uses in the Village area. So, when we talk about development, don't think of it in terms of commercial uses, but both commercial and residential uses.

The need for additional parking in the central village area is commented on often in this paper. Both residents and merchants perennially request more parking spaces. The MBTA reconstructed our Town Parking Lot and added a few new spaces to a secondary lot on Pleasant Street, but the complaint persists. Interestingly, the Town owns nearly an additional acre behind the Teen Center adjacent to the current main parking lot. The last time we looked at converting some of this acre of land to parking, the price tag was prohibitively large due to the fact that it is loaded with ledge. However, a situation has presented itself to us whereby we might be able to convert a substantial portion of the space into parking at a fraction of the prior estimated cost to the Town. We can't say much more about this at this instant, but we'll let you know as things progress. Lighting and aesthetics in the parking area will also be looked at as a part of the grand scope.

Lastly, the intersection between the South Shore Art Center, Depot Court, Ripley Road and Pleasant Street is currently sort of a no-man's land. There is major pedestrian traffic between the Town Parking Lot and the Art Center, but there is no convenient crosswalk. In addition, cars find the intersection confusing and often fail to yield to cars leaving or entering the parking lot or to oncoming traffic turning into Pleasant Street. This intersection could use a bit of redesign to improve general safety of both vehicles and pedestrians. The redesign needs also to be mindful that it is this intersection that visually links the Ripley Road business area to the rest of the Village commercial area. These two areas are crying to be visually tied together. Visitors need to be naturally guided to move between the Ripley Road area and the Main St. area.

Could This Be Made More Attractive?

Potential New Parking?

Little Harbor Paving – We know our readers are as anxious as we are to get cracking on the balance of the Little Harbor paving. Well, we just got off of the phone with our paving contractor and they will be doing their final planning at the end of this week in preparation for road grinding on Beach Street next week and paving Beach Street the following week. That's our story and we're sticking to it. So, if you see construction equipment on Beach Street that's why.

HEALTH NOTES

Welcome to the Information Age

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

PCDs. We have finally arrived at the age of the Personal Communication Device. So much information available nowadays comes with necessary illustrations and even sometimes sound bytes as well as just text. Deciding what kind of device to start with becomes a significant question. Used to be that one would consult a book or go to a library and seek help from text, old periodicals or some other form of printed matter. Human contact is often neither feasible nor possible. Consider the still functioning old so-called landline phones. Our forebears used vertical speakerphones with listening devices (shaped like a bell) clipped to the stem holding a tulip-shaped microphone containing a metal diaphragm. Thousands of other devices are still in use also capable of transmitting sound only. Of course, most such devices have become extinct as a dinosaur. Easy to learn to use, but very limited in today's information age.

In about 1982 came the computer and everyone had to learn how to manipulate a mouse or some such device to transmit and receive intelligible information. Before that, there was PacMan, a teaching device that taught many of us to identify directional motion and coordinates on a screen – generally black and white.

Also in the 80s we had to learn about memory. Early in life we had learned to utilize and control our bodies. Later, we learned how to use its functions for the necessary elements of safe survival and success; also, to learn how to make machines and communicate with them. One of the first machines ever built (in Cambridge) to inspect automobile tires incorporated a battery of acoustic sensors controlled by a computer using a 5,000-bit memory. Henry Dormitzer of Cohasset managed a company that sold the memory coils, each representing a digital bit and costing about a nickel. Many other such companies surrounded Boston. Then, with the requirement for ever more memory, until now we manage terabytes requiring enormously more complex skills.

Never in history has so much information been available for people to assimilate.

Computer File Suffixes, which early computers never had, require recognizing their characteristics in order to converse with our new machines. They classify text for the purposes of editing it into other text using in many cases, a computer language (PDF), invented by Adobe Systems and perfected over 15 years. The Portable Document Format (PDF), allows capture and view of robust information – from almost any application, now known as APP and shows it on any computer system. PDF is now a formal open standard known worldwide as ISO 32000. Maintained by the International Organization for Standardization, ISO 32000 will continue to be developed, providing access for more than one billion PDF files in existence today. But obviously the learning doesn't stop there. Bill Gates has been quoted as saying, "The computer of the future will be the cell phone." Implications for educators are profound and should have us rethinking our attitudes and acceptance of all sorts of calling devices, including cell phones.

The Tablet, preparation for cell phones. Never in history has so much information been available for people to assimilate. And it's been medically demonstrated that such an assimilation process is essential to ones mental and physical health in modern society. The last time anything approaching such an event occurred was the creation of the printing press. Gutenberg enabled rapid creation of many copies of a single volume containing information, thereby stimulating the ability to read and assimilate important information at all levels of society. The printing press liberated many who had previously been no more than beasts of burden causing standards of living to rise and proliferate in a more balanced and egalitarian society. Now, text can be assembled using a stylus pointing device and an electronic tablet. Gadgets such as the iPad permit text to be transposed and easily integrated with images without formatting and editing constraints requiring experts in data logic.

The Final Step after text creation using a tablet, iPad or digital imaging device, is the cell phone. Here, the best means of carrying on a verbal dialog with one or many people simultaneously, short of facing them in person, is now being used by nearly the entire population of modern society. Implementation of this device is far from a trivial task. Already, considerable evidence exists that cell phones are sponsoring a trivialization of communication while creating superficial thought and a conduit for the transmission of hoards of useless nonsense. The boon of cell phone conversation needs to be tempered by additional training at the primary levels about types of information that should or should not be disseminated abroad without constraint.

H1N1 debrief and Volunteer Appreciation Event

Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Norwell and Scituate boards of health are engaging and preparing volunteers for the upcoming influenza season by hosting a volunteer appreciation event, including a debriefing of this year's state H1N1 response on Tuesday, June 15, at the South Shore Country Club in Hingham.

The agenda features a debrief of the best practices and lessons learned during the H1N1 season and will included an opportunity for volunteers to interact with their local board of health members and town officials.

The towns will also recognize local volunteers with the Medical Reserve Corp, a federally funded initiative building a base of volunteers trained and deployed during local public health emergencies. If interested in becoming an MRC volunteer, email Region 4b MRC at region4bmrc@challiance.org or call 617-665-3702.

Pancho Villa: hero and villain

FAMOUS BIRTHDAYS

MARY KENNEDY

Pancho Villa June 5, 1876 -June 20, 1923

Hero. Villain. Can the same man be both?

At the age of 16 Doroteo Arango didn't have much. His father had died, leaving him responsible for his mother and younger sisters and brothers. The family's only inheritance was debt. As sharecroppers on a huge cattle ranch owned by one of the wealthy families from Spain, they owed literally everything to the company store. Doroteo's only possessions were an old horse and an even older pistol. His mother, however, was proud of her oldest son: he was legitimate and had no interest in drinking, smoking, or gambling.

One fine day, Fate's moving finger pointed at Doroteo's beautiful 12-year-old sister and at the aging Don Agustin, owner of the ranch, who decided to have his way with her — decidedly, a common practice at that time. As their mother wept, Doroteo avenged his sister's honor by firing his pistol. Three shots into the old Don and Doroteo's out into the cruel world—a fugitive from justice.

Exile in the high sierras of northern Mexico both toughened and taught him. He learned every crevice of the rough landscape, and also how to live off it. He might have wandered on into obscurity, settled far away with a new identity. Fate, however, wrote a different destiny on his slate. Captured twice by federal troops, he twice made fools of them. Once, minutes before his execution, grinding corn to make tortillas, he clouted his guard on the head with the grinding stone and fled. The second time, captured by eight soldiers and their over-confident Commandant, he persuaded them to enjoy dinner and drinks around the campfire before moving on. Before dawn, he stole away while they slept.

As news of his daring escapes spread, Doroteo became famous, a sort of folk hero among the Indians of Chihuahua, a state in northern Mexico. Infuriated authorities, however, considered him infamous and determined to find and execute the outlaw. Drawn into an ambush one night, a troop of soldiers fought hard, lost three men, and heard Doroteo laugh as he disappeared into the hills.

Doroteo Arango changed his name to Francisco Villa (nicknamed Pancho).

Exile in the high sierras of northern Mexico both toughened and taught him.

A dutiful son, Doroteo regularly brought money to his mother, changed his name to Francisco Villa (nicknamed Pancho), and assembled a band of loyal banditos to rampage around Chihuahua, taking a town here, burning an hancienda there, distributing stolen cattle and horses among the local peoples. It was a Robin Hood phase before the ruffian turned revolutionary.

In 1910 Mexico was in turmoil. From 1821, when the Spaniards were finally driven out, until 1861, some 58 governments had been formed, only to fail soon thereafter. Presidents came and went. No political group—the landed gentry, the army, clergy—was powerful enough to establish stability. Most of the people were impoverished. Dictator for more than three decades, Porfirio Diaz was the darling of the Spanish landowners, despised by the common folk. It was time for Pancho Villa and his devoted band of brigands to come out of the high sierras in the north and support Francisco Madero, educated at Harvard, and the new hope of yet another revolution. Years later, Pancho wrote, "I learned to love and revere him for...showing us his desire to fight for us, the poor and the oppressed."

Christmas Day 1912 and Pancho's in jail again. While the army band entertained guards and prisoners, he diligently filed away at the iron bars of his cell, the loud blare of the brasses covering the noise. On Dec. 26 — as guards later recounted — a young lawyer sauntered out of the gate, sneezing and coughing into his handkerchief (probably to conceal his telltale black mustache). He traveled north, penniless and alone. One year later he would declare himself Governor of Chihuahua.

Paying for the deficits

COMMENTARY

PAUL CARLSON

Failure to pay these expenses is not an option and we cannot borrow to meet operating expenses

The fiscal 2011 Water Department deficit of approximately $1,100,000 must be paid. (For convenience I will use rounded numbers.) The only sources for the deficit are increased water rates, higher taxes for municipal type expenditures paid by the Water Department, and reductions in town services. Failure to pay these expenses is not an option and we cannot borrow to meet operating expenses. The Water Planning Group and the Board of Selectmen are recommending an increase in water rates of $800,000 and a transfer of $300,000 to the town budget to cover the operating and capital costs of maintaining the hydrants and fire suppression infrastructure.

If the Town Meeting rejects the transfer of the $300,000 to the town budget (while approving our other rate increases,) the Water Department will have a forecasted deficit of that amount. In that case, the town will have to cover the department's deficit. In either case the town will be liable for the $300,000.

At our June 9 meeting the Water Planning Group modified its recommendation by eliminating the proposal for an override to pay for the $300,000 transfer. The Water Planning Group urges town officials and the Budget Planning Group to fund this deficit through increases in fees and non-real estate taxes and reductions in expenditures. The ratepayers are being asked for major increases in water rates. We believe the town should also make some adjustments. Among the tax increases that should be considered are the hotel occupancy tax and the meals tax. Fees could be increased for such town services as facility permits and Recreational Department activities.

If the Town Meeting does not approve the $800,000 in rate increases, the town budget must be reduced to offset the deficit. Water Department deficits are town deficits. At this time, we can only speculate about how the cuts would be allocated among the town departments. If the town budget needs to be modified, the Town Manager and the Board of Selectmen will make recommendations for budget changes for approval by another Special Town Meeting, probably in September.

Department	% of total	$800,000
Schools	63.13%	$505,072
DPW/Facilities	9.14	73,136
Police	8.19	65,536
Fire	8.17	65,376
Admin Services	6.52	52,160
Library	2.04	16,320
Elder Services	0.82	6,560
Other	1.98	15,840

The table below shows the theoretical impact on town departments if the $800,000 is allocated simply based on the current distribution of town expenditures. Using the Budget Planning Group's methodology, uncontrollable expenses such as insurance, pensions, debt service, and the regional vocational technical school have been excluded from this analysis.

Our rate proposals are certainly unpleasant for all concerned. We all know that this is a terrible time to be asking our neighbors for more money or to propose major cuts in services. However, this is our current situation and the town must pay its obligations.

Water Quality

The water quality issue was also extensively discussed at the Water Forum. When the Water Planning Group was formed we had six weeks to learn about the water business, figure out what went wrong and create proposals to cover the deficits. This deadline was caused by the printing deadline for the town meeting warrant. We certainly understood the frustrations many town residents have with their water. We know this is a major issue for them. However, we decided that we had to delay consideration of the quality issue to meet our first deadline.

After we finalized our town meeting proposals, we did discuss the water quality issue. Given our backgrounds and expertise we recognized the town would be better served if the Board of Selectmen were to appoint a special water quality committee with the appropriate experts. One of our reform recommendations is for the board to create such a committee. However, there will be no quality improvement projects if the Water Department and the town are not financially sound.

Paul Carlson lives on Old Coach Road, is a member of the Board of Selectmen and chairs the Water Planning Group. This commentary has not been reviewed by other members of either group.

COMMENTARY

TOM CALLAHAN

The management style of our last two superintendents appears not to be unique. As an observer of other towns as well, it seems to be the nature of the beast, given the authority of the position.

Dr. Walsh has decided not to seek renewal of her contract, and the School Committee has accepted her resignation. It is done. I trust critics will move on and not continue to kick her as she goes out the door, and supporters will avoid any more ill-advised and politically obtuse comments as found in the recent Globe piece.

Most of my observations of Dr. Walsh's tenure are from a distance, although when my daughter had a transcript issue on a weekend in an emergency, Dr. Walsh stepped up to the plate, an act for which I remain personally grateful. However, in assessing public employees in positions of authority, one must try to separate the personal and be as objective as possible given the important nature of the position. In the recent climate, however, objectivity has become virtually impossible. One can debate the individual issues that have come up over her tenure and whether any one in isolation was grounds for dismissal. I myself have differences over matters of policy in the high school (the clinging to block scheduling, the lack of accessibility to online electives to all students of any level), and with some administration staffing and compensation issues, but all pre-date as well as coincide with Dr. Walsh's tenure. I appreciate the need to be able to work cooperatively with the faculty, although I do take some of the union's criticisms with a certain grain of salt. Overall, however, most of the cited flaws seem to derive from issues of management style and impression rather than any actual ill intent. Nevertheless, the cumulative effect of the various issues have, no doubt, revealed a need for change. I thus think Dr. Walsh has made the right decision, if for no one else than for herself.

For a school superintendent in a small, astute town, personal management style cannot be ignored, notwithstanding the academic and override-avoidance achievements of the system for which Dr. Walsh can rightfully take credit. Yet, do we forget that negative management style may have been even more present with her predecessor? To the critics, as a new search begins, be careful what you wish for and/or don't be surprised who comes next. The management style of our last two superintendents appears not to be unique. As an observer of other towns as well, it seems to be the nature of the beast, given the authority of the position. So let's not delude ourselves that whomever new we bring in won't have the same style issues. Chances are heavily weighted that he/she will. Criticism, if any, need not be with the person of Dr. Walsh, but with a system that seems to breed a certain type of superintendent.

Ideally, we will find a superintendent that is (or is perceived as) a good and inclusive communicator, who despite the power he/she has, will include the School Committee, faculty and community in key decision-making. The teachers' union has its own issues and faults, but administration and faculty cannot be at odds for long. Something has to give, and although it takes two to tango, the impetus has to come from the top (as will blame be directed). Our next superintendent must be able to work more cooperatively and team-like with faculty, staff, and in the HS, students, within a non-hierarchical professional environment. The superintendent must be realistic about budgets in the 2 1/2 environment, and if we continue to insist on a stand-alone K-12 system in such a small town, then he/she has to be innovative in scheduling, increase academically meaningful high school electives, consider at least electives regionalization with neighboring districts, end block scheduling, make wider use of online education and make it available to all students, employ consolidation of certain functions within town (library consolidation, business management consolidation), and control administrative growth and salaries, all without engaging in that awful Massachusetts habit of protecting one's turf.

None of these issues or this wish list are unique to Cohasset. State law has essentially made school districts separate municipalities unto themselves. Ed reform has given superintendents great power, far more than our town manager, over personnel and budget, mostly with good reason. School Committees are inherently weaker than Boards of Selectmen. The system is structurally designed to foster autocracy and secrecy if a superintendent has such a proclivity, so how that power is used is indeed an important issue. The budget process and Prop 2 1/2 also create an unfortunate "us vs. them" animosity. This leads to a natural circling of the wagons and School Committees becoming both defensive and "yes men" for administrations, as ours, in the majority, have been. Although structurally weak by law, School Committees can do much more to bring sunshine to the School Department, and less criticism of its budget and the Administration, by simply questioning the Administration extensively and not accepting everything at face value.

It is grossly naïve to think the recent election was not a mandate for change, at least in management style. However, it will also be interesting to see what our first School Committee in memory actually troubled by the Mass. superintendent system will do with its mandate. Will it be equally naïve of the limits of its power and the extent of the superintendent's, and thus perpetuate pointless conflict? Will it find a way to influence and implement policy within those limits and without personalizing the inherent disproportion of power? Will it look outside the box of traditional superintendent candidates? The ball is now in their court. Much of the substantive and structural change that many clamor for is a function of laws and forces (including the teachers' union) outside of the upcoming selection process, and may not be changeable. A superintendent's management style, salary and attentiveness (perceived and actual) to stakeholders, however, are matters within our control. I can only hope that the search for a successor is well-thought through, and that all stakeholders, Administration, faculty, Committee and community, remember that they share responsibility for the management and success of the schools.

Clearing up misperceptions about our schools

COMMENTARY

ALFRED E. SLANETZ

At the Cohasset Public Schools the education of children is our mission. Unfortunately, over the last six months, there has been a small group of citizens spreading misinformation about our schools and perpetrating hateful mean spirited attacks on individuals in the school administration and on members of the School Committee. While it is fine to disagree on and discuss issues, respect, civility and graciousness must be the rule in debate – particularly with regard to the way we treat people. To do otherwise is a poor example to the children we are supposed to be educating and could be catastrophic for Cohasset Schools.

Cohasset must recognize how blessed we are relative to most schools in the US. In contrast to when I started on the School Committee five years ago, there are now four times the number of students taking Advanced Placement (AP) Tests with 80 percent maintaining a score of 3 or better. In 2009 we offered 12 AP courses versus seven AP courses when I started in 2005. Based upon these results, Newsweek now ranks us sixth in the state and 350th in the country. In 2005 we were not even listed in the top 1,500 schools. Additionally, based upon 10th grade MCAS in 2009, the Boston Globe ranked Cohasset High School as number eight in the state. These two high profile rankings indicate that we are doing something right and, while there is variability from year to year, the trend of these and other quantitative performance measures are significantly up.

Starting in the 2010-2011 academic year we have further upgraded the curriculum by doubling the number of honors sections of core courses in Cohasset High School. This was made possible because we made honors classes more accessible to more students who wanted to challenge themselves (called by pundits "de-leveling") and engaged the students and their parents in course selection. We believe that every student needs to be challenged at or above their aptitude so that they can grow to become the best version of themselves. Based upon the demographics of our students and the results we have observed with CP students who have successfully challenged themselves in AP courses, we felt that an upgrade to more honors level curriculum is warranted at this time and will improve the profile and academic rigor of the school. Contrary to popular perception spread by the pundits there are only 10 courses which mix CP and honors levels and these are all electives which would not otherwise have been offered due to low enrollments in our small school. The offering of these electives together with electives through virtual high school means that the study halls which five years ago were routinely for credit at Cohasset High and being sent out to colleges on student transcripts are a thing of the past. Rather, students are able to take a wider variety of courses which helps with their college application profile and allows them access to curriculum which otherwise would not exist.

Another misperception which is out there regards program supervisors. First, let me point out that under Massachusetts Law, the only two employees of the School Committee are the Superintendent and the Business Manager. Therefore, the administrative structure of the High School is determined by the High School Principal and Superintendent who are responsible to achieve the district goals as set out in the strategic plan. Program supervisors were introduced for a number of reasons. First and foremost the new structure would facilitate more interdisciplinary coordination between courses (e.g. Math-Science, English-Social Studies-Foreign Languages, etc). Second, by replacing six department heads with three program supervisors, one could gain teaching time with less administrative overhead (more appropriate given the size of our school). Third, these program supervisors are not part of the union and thus are not in potential conflict with union in regards to teacher performance reviews, etc. Fourth, replacing six senior department heads who received the top union salary and an extra 15 percent stipend with three non-union program supervisors actually saved $150,000 per year and enabled us to afford additional teacher salaries thus transferring more resources into classroom instruction. This change was part of the negotiation of the last contract with the teachers union.

Other accomplishments include a full K-12 renewal of the curriculum: we no longer have textbooks that are 15 years old, all teachers have received professional development and have a development plan, all teachers have teaching textbooks instead of one being shared amongst five, the math scope and sequence was accelerated in the middle school to complete algebra by eighth grade (and allow for high school calculus based physics), the sixth grade teaching team was realigned so that each subject is being taught by the same teacher and there is no longer X period (scheduled study hall), STEM labs and science curriculum were added in the elementary schools, we focused on assessing and teaching writing K-12 (five years ago the test results only assessed reading and math), the number of students requiring special education plans in Deer Hill were halved through early assessment and early intervention, the number of students are participating in debate team, math league and drama quadrupled and these groups are now regularly winning state competitions, our music program has grown in participation and in quality and athletics are eternally strong – providing the opportunity for every student who wants to participate on a team.

Finally, due to careful management of the budget (and, I dare say the introduction of a proper accounting system and financial controls five years ago), we are in the fortunate position to not need to lay off teachers or cut programs even with the economic crisis, in spite of $750,000 cuts in federal and state aid last year and no override for close to 10 years. In my opinion (and yes, pundits it is my right to have an opinion), we have a lot to thank the administration and past school committees for.

That said, nothing is ever perfect and every good school challenges itself to improve. Specifically, I think we need to hire a Middle/ High School Latin teacher, a teacher for AP Physics, and three or four teachers throughout the schools to lower class size to empower our teachers to fully implement differentiated (personalized) instruction. While we are doing well on standardized tests and getting into more and more competitive colleges, I feel we need to challenge our students to think more deeply. This will improve their preparation for life (which, after all is our ultimate goal) and should further improve our college acceptances. I feel the school culture needs to be less disciplinary and more empowering of students for the development and internalization of character. The faculty, administration and school committee need to be more collegial and collaborative toward the shared vision to make this one of the best schools in the country while still respecting each one's roles and responsibilities. Finally, we have been so busy implementing the changes outlined above in accordance with our strategic plan that we haven't really been effective communicators- we need to improve.

I understand that a quotation of me in the Globe last week has been misinterpreted. The full quote was "I think the majority of people in town are happy with the schools and the progress the superintendent has made, " Slanetz said. "I think there's a small group of people who are pretty vocal, frankly, about anything that's related to the superintendent. It's unfortunate." I stand by this. I think it is unfortunate that a few people are conducting a personal vendetta focused on attacking the Superintendent, Administrators and School Committee Members who have accomplished so much and have dedicated their time to improving the education of our children. We at least owe them a thank you. It is easier to criticize than to be constructive and we'll have a hard time recruiting a qualified candidate to be our next Superintendent and further improving the quality of our school if this behavior continues. I have every confidence that the people of this town are more intelligent and gracious than that and will stand with me to work constructively to provide the best education for Cohasset's children.

Shared vision, consensus needed

COMMENTARY

FROM MORSE, PAGE 12

I understand that the Program Supervisors are also not even required to be in the building when they are not teaching. How can Program Supervisors be coordinating the activities of several departments and overseeing and assessing dozens of teachers when they are not even available or in the building? More importantly, even assuming that there is a modest cost savings to this new model, the cost to this district in disruption of staff, loss of input, reduction of morale and lost teaching time FAR outweighs any monetary gain. The cost, in retrospect has been too great.

The comments read by a representative from the Teachers Union at the most recent School Committee meeting outlined in great detail what many of us have been suspecting... that this "model of the future" is far from a success and has had a devastating effect on the faculty and their ability to contribute ideas, influence decision making and have a stake in the game. This new scheme and its resulting oligarchy have left the faculty without a voice, left students in classrooms without their regular teachers and leave the greater community with a growing sense of concern about yet another issue. True collaboration is a by-product of mutual respect, genuine idea sharing and enthusiastic participation by all involved.

I can see no glimmer of any of those things with regard to this "state of the art" leadership strategy.

In order to develop a true professional learning community, the faculty, parents and students need opportunities to contribute to decision making. Building partnerships between departments has to be done in a spirit of true collaboration, not coercion. In order to get the very best from the education we provide, we must have a shared vision that is communicated effectively, and consensus must be built in order for all players to move in the same direction. This failure is a result of implementation, not because of a refusal by faculty and parents to "embrace" it. How is embracing failure a best practice?

All opinions aside, if we examine this situation objectively and just look at the results thus far, I think we would see a wide variety of problems that need to be remedied. Perhaps an outside professional evaluation should be conducted to provide us with an unprejudiced assessment and help determine if this model is viable or if it should be eliminated or modified. I think it would be an important and timely step to take at this juncture, and would refocus us on the task at hand, which is providing our children with the best possible educational experience.

Not every new way of doing things needs to be embraced. Just because something is new doesn't mean it will be successful (the DeLorean and "New Coke" come to mind). The changes which have taken place here in Cohasset to which Mrs. McCarthy refers may have been made in the spirit of the goals of 21st Century education and with the best of intentions, but their execution and the end product we are looking at now cannot in any way be seen as a "best practice" in this or any century.

I take no issue with aligning curriculum to weave consistently through the subject areas. This is totally logical, if not an obvious goal for education, and the merits are clear. My concern is with the approach and the execution. Embracing new ways of collaborating between departments and designing a curriculum that is integrated and seamless might just as easily be done by the Administration setting goals and with positive leadership, guiding teams of department heads and key staff to design and carry out just such a plan.

Giving input and ownership to the faculty will yield a far stronger execution on the teaching end, and ultimately, effective teachers are better able to motivate students and teach with enthusiasm. I fail to see how totally removing the staff from the decision making process is the only way to achieve these goals.

Is this Program Supervisor model the only solution? In his book "District Leadership that Works," noted expert Robert Marzano refers to the term "Defined Autonomy", where district-defined common goals and a system of support and accountability facilitate the execution of the plan by the faculty, who are individually empowered to influence the way they go about executing the goals.

The goals are made clear, and yet the "feet on the ground" in the classrooms have input into how they can best get there. Surely this and other well-documented best practices can be considered to remedy this situation. A district our size should be able to turn this around in a matter of weeks and be able to enter the fall term with a plan that will work for ALL.

The teachers are telling us in no uncertain terms that this is not working. I have to believe that their firsthand experience after a year of giving this a go deserves to be considered, and their very clearly articulated issues need to be heard. They don't appear to be asking for more money or less teaching time, they are asking to be respected and to be heard, which is what parents and students have been asking for also.

THIS is the type of change that I would hope we could all embrace.

Grads told to remember where they came from high school and each other dear, living a life of color and substance, and how the Class of 2010 really set itself apart.

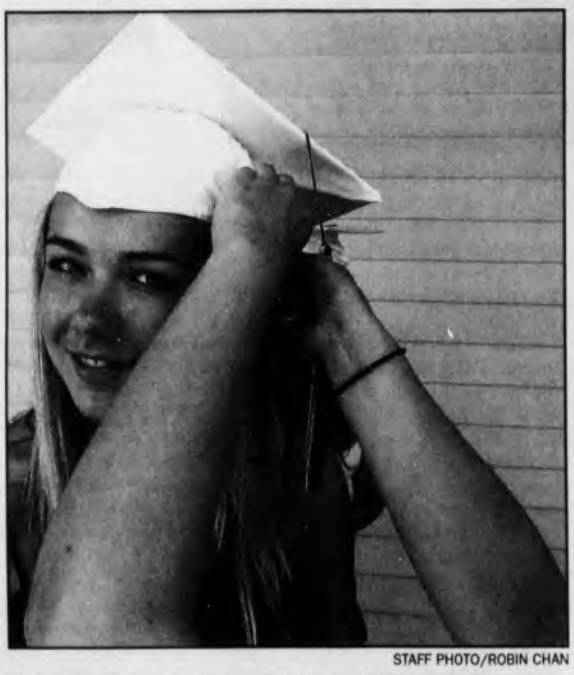
"We did things differently than others before us and we've been doing that our entire lives, maturing into fine young adults in the process. It is amazing how far we have all grown as people," MacCarthy told his class.

MacCarthy's self-described "no theme" speech touched on the things that make his class so "X-traordinary" from surviving a bus crash in 2004 to state championship titles to the memories that he encouraged all his classmates to cherish.

"It doesn't matter who you are or what you did with your time during high school. It doesn't matter if the soundtrack to your high school experience was 'Party up in here' by DMX or 'I'm alone now' by Beyonce. All that matters is that you keep all those special memories that made your experience so spectacular," MacCarthy said.

For the freshly minted Cohasset Schools alums, Superintendent of Schools Denise Walsh imparted six kernels of "lifelines" – advice to turn to when the going got tough. Wisdom such as "courage matters" and "be brave" and to "get into the game and play everyday."



"No matter how far you go in your future, never forget where you came from," Walsh said. "You will make a difference and you can turn these difficult times around."

Salutorian Cameron Lucitt told his class that it was "bittersweet" to speak to them – bitter because there was no way he could sum up what they mean to him in five minutes and sweet because he got to try.

"I have been taught by every one of you in far more prominent and poignant ways than any amount of schoolwork could imprint upon me and want to encourage you all never to stop learning and never to stop growing, for these two facilitate the summers of our lives on even the bitterest of cold evenings," Lucitt said.

Lucitt said each one of them has a wall to fill, a wall that represents a rich life of friends, family, the past and the future, joyful reunions and embarrassing situations.

"We must fill it with those who have touched our lives and those whom we hope to have shaped and served in our time. We must fill it with us, for we all have a stake therein," Lucitt said.

Christine Coner, valedictorian, came to the podium with tears in her eyes following Lucitt's speech.

"I thought I could make it through the day without crying, but Cam, you just put me over the edge," Coner said in a reminder for all of just how special this day is for the graduates, for so many reasons.

Her message to her classmates was to remember the parents, the teachers, the friends that have made them into the young men and women are today.

"To some, the future may be a chance to start fresh, but I like to think of it instead as a chance to bring a little piece of ourselves into an alternatively fresh environment," Coner said. She said her class as whole had "multi-faceted charisma" and "devoted service," something that set them apart from other CHS classes.

"It is with utmost pride that I can stand here this afternoon and truthfully say that all 90 of us graduates have affected positive change in one way or another on the people and places we've encounters throughout our short lives thus far," Coner said.

A total of 83 students will continue their education at a four-year school and five will go on to two-year or prep schools for a total of 98 percent furthering their education. Two students will join the military, work force or travel.

Principal Joel Antolini called the class "our future problem solvers."

"They worked together with everyone to make a better school and now they can work with others to make a better world," Antolini said. "They are committed to changing the world around them, while remaining true to themselves."

At the ceremony, three retiring school faculty were presented with certificates of appreciation in recognition of their years of work within the district: sixth grade teacher Betty Cisneros, Deer Hill school nurse Karen Murphy, and director of curriculum development Nancy Mrzyglod.

As a final act to set his class a part from the others, MacCarthy requested his fellow graduates to cross their forearms as if making the letter "X," also Roman numeral 10, and then move the tassel from right to left to signify the passage from candidate to graduate.

New floor finishing regulations in effect

State Fire Marshal Stephen D. Coan and Cohasset Fire Chief Robert Silvia want to alert the public that starting June 1, 2010 when using certain flammable liquids to finish wood floors, the fire department must be notified and in buildings with more than four units, a permit must be obtained first.

Chief Silvia said, "Over the past several years there have been several tragic fires stemming from the many fire hazards that the floor finishing process poses. Silvia said, "Newly revised regulations now address the many different fire hazards of floor finishing – improper electrical hook-ups, the storage of waste materials, and dust explosion hazards, as well as the application of flammable liquids."

These regulations were put in place in response to a series of tragic accidents associated with floor finishing.

Highlights of the new regulation:

Permit and Notice to Fire Department Required – The previous regulations applied only to bowling alleys, but have been amended to address the fire hazards of wood floor sanding, finishing or refinishing in all occupancies. Starting June 1, 2010, a fire department permit will be required when certain flammable liquids are going to be used in floor finishing in buildings with more than four units. In buildings with four or fewer units, the fire department must be notified prior to the start of work.

Preventing Flammable Liquid Fires – The regulations require the removal of ignition sources such as pilot lights prior to the application of finishing products considered flammable liquids until the product has dried. It also prohibits using flammable liquids when direct ventilation of the space to the outside is not possible. The new regulation also requires posting warning signs in buildings with more than one dwelling unit when flammable liquids are used in floor finishing.

Preventing Electrical Fires – It reinforces the fact that the Massachusetts Electrical Code requires an electrical wiring permit when connecting equipment directly to an electrical panel. Some floor refinishing equipment use larger amounts of electricity than home outlets typically provide, so the equipment is often connected directly to the electrical panel in violation of the code. This poses a fire risk and bypasses the normal circuit protection in electrical systems.

Preventing Fires From Dust and Rags – The regulations also address the safe storage of flammable and combustible products and waste materials. There have been many fires started by the spontaneous combustion of the dust from floor sanding put into airtight bags and from rags soaked in combustible and flammable liquids. Some floor finishing products such as linseed oil are considered combustible but not flammable. Rags soaked in combustible chemicals still pose a serious fire risk if not properly handled. The regulations require use of a metal waste can with a self-closing cover for all waste products including wood dust and rags. The can must be removed from the building daily and the materials disposed of properly.

Consider Less Dangerous Alternatives – Use of water-based or non-flammable floor refinishing products does not require notification to or a permit from the fire department. Whether homeowners are doing the work themselves or hiring a contractor, it is important to consider the fire safety aspects of the materials being used. Cheaper products or services and faster drying time associated with flammable finishes can cost more in the long run if there is an explosion or fire.

Event Coordinator Carolyn Coffey, CEF President John Englander, and Event Coordinator Ginni Froio try on their sombreros before Tent Event II.

Robert Bernstein, Kevin and Tracy Thomas, Suzanne and Kirk Jackisch and Logan Bernstein meet up before heading into the Tent Event.

CEF Tent Event II draws a crowd

On Saturday, May 22, a crowd of more than 350 filled the tent adjacent to the South Shore Music Circus in support of the Cohasset Education Foundation's Tent Event II to celebrate the Cohasset Public Schools. "The support from the community has been outstanding—every year new faces join in to support our efforts to raise funds for the schools." said John Englander, president of the CEF.

This was the fourth annual benefit since the CEF was revitalized in 2006. Since that time over $1,000,000 has been raised, with nearly $500,000 given in the form of grants to the schools and over $400,000 residing in a principal preserved endowment fund.

Proceeds from the benefit will be used to support upcoming grant requests and the endowment. For more information about the CEF, or to learn about volunteer opportunities visit www.cohasseteducation.org.

Parents Cheryl and Stephen Whetstone and Susan and Andy Franklin came out to support the Cohasset Education Foundation's efforts.

Boys laxers roll into semifinals

By Sean MacCarthy
CORRESPONDENT

The CHS Boys Lacrosse team opened up their 2010 playoff run on June 4 and they did so with a bang.

A very loud bang.

The Skippers went 16-2 in the regular season, and after earning themselves the ranking as the fifth best team in Massachusetts, and the South Shore League Title, the Cohasset boys lacrosse squad got the No. 1 seed in the Division 3 MIAA Lacrosse Tournament.

Lacrosse

With the highest seed in the tournament, Cohasset found themselves with a bye in the preliminary round. The No. 16 seed, Hanover, defeated the No. 17 seed, Lynnfield, 10-4 in that preliminary round to get the chance to upset the Skippers.

Cohasset was troubled to hear that they would have to get through Hanover, who went 10-10 in the regular season, to advance to the quarterfinals. These worries originated from earlier in the season when Cohasset narrowly defeated Hanover, 8-7.

After long practices preparing for their tough first round opponent, Cohasset came more than prepared to the game. Hanover, on the other hand, was just overwhelmed in a 19-2 Cohasset victory.

On the first play of the game, face-off extraordinaire, Alex Kinnealey, won yet another face-

Squads finish great seasons

The No. 9 seeded girls tennis team won their first round match, beating No. 8 Sturgis Charter 5-0 on the road in the first round of the MIAA Div. 3 South Sectional tournament, but didn't have the same luck against No. 1 seeded Old Rochester on Wednesday.

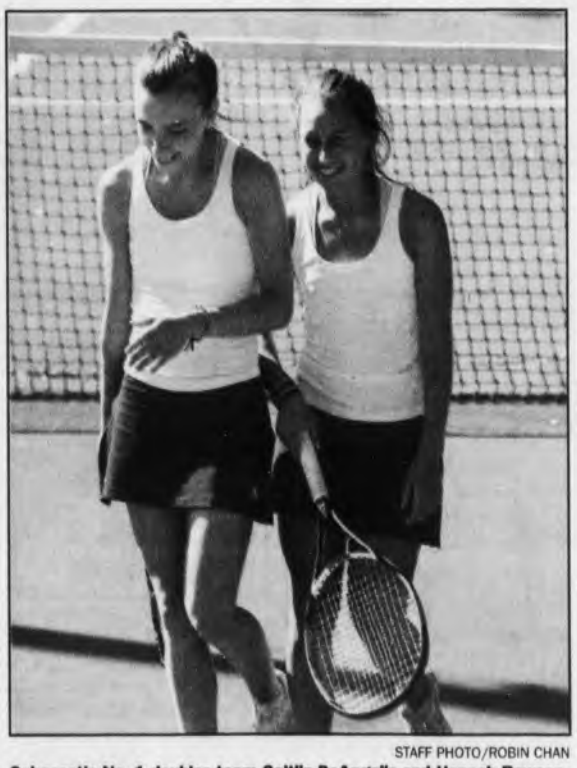
Cohasset was eliminated 3-1 in a match moved indoor a day after it had been postponed.

Maddie Altholtz won her match in straight sets for the team's one victory in the match.



In the opener, Altholtz, Jenny Magruder and Meredith Spofford all won at singles.

In doubles action, Caitlin DeAngelis and Hannah Rawson were victorious in first doubles and Colby Smalzel and Kate Sookiasian were winners in second doubles.

"It was a good match," Cohasset assistant coach Kathy Prevett said. "The seniors really pulled though."

The boys tennis team was knocked out in the first round by Martha's Vineyard on Friday night.

They finished an excellent season with a South Shore League title.

Skippers in semifinals

The Cohasset baseball team's championship chase hit a minor bump Wednesday, as their scheduled game against No. 1 seeded West Bridgewater at Bishop Connolly High School in Fall River was postponed twice.

The Skippers opened the tourney with a 16-0 win over Old Colony, powered by Jeff Cavanaro, Drew Cobin, and Shane Haggerty, who combined to throw a one-hitter.

The Skippers followed with a gem from Brendan Doonan, who fanned 15 Mashpee batters in eight

DeLuca's first ace earns him a Buick

TEE TIME

PAUL HARBER

With one swing of the club, John DeLuca has a sweet ride these days.

The 78-year-old Milton native launched a dead-solid perfect 5-wood at the 169-yard par-3 17th hole on the Jones Course at The Pinehills in Plymouth last Tuesday.

"It was right at the stick," said DeLuca, "but then it drifted and landed to the left of the pin."

He sighed.

But the ball took a roll right, and kept rolling toward the flagstick.

"Finally, the white ball disappeared and I knew I had a hole-and-one," said DeLuca.

"I was in shock. I couldn't believe it," added the 22-handicapper, after notching his first ace ever.

For his hole-in-one, DeLuca won a 2010 Buick LaCrosse, a luxury sports sedan offered by Marty's GMC in Kingston. The suggested retail price of the car is in the high $30Ks.

No, Marty's GMC isn't out a boatload of cash. They bought hole-in-one insurance and are happy that DeLuca got the car.

"I think it's terrific," said Karen Pereria of Marty's GMC. "Yes, it cost a couple of thousand for the insurance, but it's our donation to this worthy cause."

The charity tournament was for the Jett Foundation, named after a local youngster afflicted with Duchenne muscular dystrophy (DMD).

The foundation holds tournaments, raffles, auctions and other functions to raise awareness of and funds for the research and treatment in order to create new resources for families affected by Duchenne and to find a cure for the disease.

The Kingston-based organization has been around since 2001 and Christine McSherry, whose son is afflicted with DMD, has been involved in the tournament every year.

Ironically, DeLuca wasn't even going to play in the tournament.

"Some company sponsored a foursome for the tournament and one of the guys couldn't make it," said DeLuca. "Two days before the tournament, I got a call from a friend, Paul Bellenoit, asking me to fill in. I said, 'Sure, why not?'"

DeLuca's team wasn't doing too well; they were not in the hunt for any prizes, but of course, they were having a good time.

When they got to the 17th hole, they had no illusions about winning a car.

"A woman was working the tee and she was telling us about the hole-in-one prize," said DeLuca.

He told her that they way they were playing, forget about it

"You don't see Tiger Woods making holes-in-one," said DeLuca. "Then the woman then told me her husband has one and even her mother had a hole-in-one. That didn't make me feel good. But after I made the shot, I told her that to tell her mother that I tied her."

The group was so excited DeLuca can't even remember what happened on the 18th hole.

"When we got in, I wanted to buy everybody a drink, and they told me it would cost about $2,000," said DeLuca, but nobody took him up on his offer. "So I bought my foursome a drink and, of course, they bought me a drink, too."

He felt so bad about winning the car and not having to pay an entry fee, that he felt he had to participate in the auction the followed the tournament. "I think I spent something like $2,000 or $3,000 on stuff."

He has yet to pick up the Buick LeCrosse. "Some affidavits need to be signed and taken care of first," said DeLuca.

Then he isn't sure what he will do. His current ride is a 2006 Mercedes.

DeLuca plays to "about a 20-22 handicap" at public courses in the region. In the summer, he is a member at Bass Rocks in Gloucester, where he has a summer home. In the winter, he plays in Naples, Fla., near his winter home.

A former athlete at Boston English High School, DeLuca never played much golf until his 60s.

"We had five kids and they took up all of our time when they were growing up," said DeLuca, "but when we started going to Florida for the winters, I had to do something so I started playing more golf."

He says his biggest problem is his short game. "I can hit the tee shot pretty well, but chipping and putting costs me so many strokes," said DeLuca.

He solved that on the 17th hole at The Pinehills last week. Just hit your tee shot in the cup and you don't have to bother with a chip or a putt.

What's in your bag?
Ben Hogan Apex irons 4-SW, No. 1 Hogan Hybrid, No. 3 Hogan Metal, Taylor Made Driver, Hogan Putter

Describe your best round (where, when, highlights):
One of my more memorable rounds of golf came at the Inverrary Country Club in Lauderhill, Florida, home of the Jackie Gleason Inverrary Classic. I shot a 5-under par 31 on the front 9 and my friends were telling me to keep playing, go for it you are playing great. I stopped after the 9 because that was what we were planning to do so I never completed the round. On that special course it was one of my most special rounds of golf.

If you could be in a dream foursome, who would be in it?
My dream foursome would be Bobby Jones, Ben Hogan, my father and myself.

Describe your introduction to golf (who, where, how old you where, and how the game attracted you):
My father was a golf member at Shaker Farms CC in Westfield. My brothers and sisters were pool members. I would watch my father finish on No. 18 many a day until I finally went out and started pulling his cart. I'd even hit a few shots when we got out of view from the clubhouse. At 11 years old, I became a junior member.

What is your favorite golf course (and why?)
For the complete history of golf my most favorite course is St. Andrews in Scotland. A sales rep told me years ago that anyone who is worth a darn in the game of golf has played this course and he was right. A special place to play.

Best golf tip you ever received:
"Mr. Hockey" Eddie Shore once told me that when I addressed the golf ball I wasn't in balance. He said "are you ready to hit the ball?" I said, "yes." He then proceeded to give me a shot with his right palm and knocked me over. He then told me how I should be standing.

Why South Shore is special:
South Shore to me is one of the finest golf courses in the state. You can play it seven days a week and never tire of the course. It has it all: undulations, quick greens, scenic beauty, difficulty of the course, it's a wonderful test of golf.

A minimalist course that offers maximum pleasure

Paul Harber
PHARBER@CNC.COM

Atlantic Country Club does not give you a panoramic view of the seacoast, like you have at White Cliffs or the 19th hole at Plymouth Country Club.

Course of the Week

It wasn't designed by the biggest names in golf course architecture, such as Rees Jones or the Jack Nicklaus firms, as the two upscale courses at The Pinehills.

Nor is it destined to someday become a movie studio, which is in the plans for Waverly Oaks Golf Course if everything comes through.

Atlantic doesn't have 27 holes like Crosswinds, neighbors to Waverly Oaks on the west side of Route 3's southbound lanes.

You don't play through cranberry bogs like you do at Southers Marsh.

And Atlantic will never be confused with Squirrel Run, the executive size track that is basically a couple of par 4s sandwiched around a basketful of par-3s.

Atlantic Country Club is simply a great golf course. It sells itself – and at a fair price.

There are 18 solid holes – no bells or whistles, no shots demanding 200-yard tee shots over water or unfair blind pins or greens with ridiculous dips and curls.

It is minimalist golf.

Even the clubhouse is a perfect fit.

It's not one of those ostentatious white elephants that tries to impress you as a great golf course when you arrive.

It fits the golf course like a glove, well planned with the pro shop overseeing the first and 10th tees and the 19th hole and its upstairs patio overlooking the finishing holes to both nines.

FILE PHOTO

Atlantic Country Club's clubhouse offers a 19th hole with a perfect place to watch incoming golfers.

There is even a place to get refreshments as you make the journey from the ninth green to the 10th tee.

Atlantic has received its share of accolades. Golf Digest gives Atlantic four stars and deservedly so. The New England Journal of Golf calls it one of the most underappreciated courses in Massachusetts.

But more importantly, what makes it special is how one hole leads to the next, no outlandish 300-yard walks from one green to the next tee; there is no Hell Hole, that one where you are certain to lose at least one ball.

If you are smart, you can play your entire round with the same ball.

The toughest hole to par is No. 8, a long and narrow par four that plays 448-yards from the tips to an elevated green. The 18th does not seem difficult off the tee, but a pond lurks in front of the green, hoping to catch that errant approach shot.

And the putting surface is deceptive and you certainly don't want to three-putt with everyone looking down from the second-deck patio.

My favorite hole is No. 15, a short par-4 where you have to gauge your tee shot so it doesn't roll into the pond. If you hit the left side of the fairway, it will kick toward the water so make sure you are right of center.

Then, it is only a short iron over water to a huge green. But so many golfers are white-knuckled when they prepare to swing, make a short choppy attempt at a swing and skull their Titleist toward the green. It skips a few times on the surface before disappearing into the pond.

If you could only play golf at one place for the rest of your life, Atlantic would not be a bad choice.

It isn't easy and you won't be bored. You are challenged on every hole.

And it isn't one of those heroic courses, where even a good golfer can lose a dozen balls if their game is slightly off.

What more can you ask from a golf course?

off, ran downfield, and dished it to Captain Will Wise who scored the goal only 13 seconds into the game. Kinnealey won the second face-off and this time decided to take it by himself, scoring the second goal to the game. After scoring, the relentless Kinnealey won the third face-off of the game. Again, he went downfield and passed it to Wise who put Cohasset up 3-0 just a minute and a half into the game.

Essentially, the game was over from that point on. Cohasset continued to rack up the points swiftly and early. By the five-minute mark, the Skippers had matched their score during the first game against Hanover and were up 8-0. When the first quarter ended, it was 10-0 Cohasset.

While the high powered and high scoring offense is to be noted, let us not forget the defense. Hanover, a solid offensive team, couldn't score until there were three minutes left in the first half. Their next goal was the last goal of the game, but at that point, it didn't even matter. At the conclusion of this first round meeting, the final was 19-2 in favor of Cohasset.

Dean Driscoll, Will Wise, Alex Kinnealey, Thomas Flibotte, Jack Carrier, John McGoldrick, Sam Leahy, and Ian Quinlan were all apart of the strong offensive against the Hanover Indians. Jake Kissick, Dana Valentine, Sam Leahy, and Jack Murphy were the main reasons for keeping Hanover's offense so quiet during the game.

"During the regular season, we only beat them by one," said goalie Jack Murphy. "We went into the game knowing that we would have to play very well to beat them. We played very well and didn't make many mistakes which led to us beating them by the margin we did."

Coach Stew Curran was pleased with the effort.

"That was as good of a lacrosse game as we've ever played," he said. "We played a good game. The faceoffs were out of sight from the gate. From the start we got the ball to Dean and Will. Ian Quinlan had a couple of good goals. It was a very good first period."

After disposing of their first round opponent in dominating fashion, Cohasset began preparing for an Austin Prep team, who scouted the Skippers during the Hanover game.

Unfortunately for Austin Prep, the scouting didn't help them at all. The 14-8 team, who had beaten Minuteman and Newburyport to get to the quarterfinals against the No.1 seed, shared a fate similar to Hanover's.

Again, Cohasset had jumped out to a quick 3-0 lead. Austin Prep scored their first goal of the game around the four- minute mark making it a 3-1 game. That was their only goal.

When it was all said and done, Cohasset handily defeated the Austin Prep team 17-1. The abundance of goals came from Wise, Driscoll, Flibotte, Kyle Livingstone, Carrier, and Kissick. And once again, outstanding play from the starting goalie and starting defenders prohibited the opposition's offense from getting anything going.

The Skippers started their quest for the State Title with similar and dominating performances against Hanover and Austin Prep. The lopsided games were won by Cohasset as they out muscled, out hustled, and out played their opponents in all aspects of the game.

In the semifinals, the CHS Lax team battles against the No. 5 seed in the Division 3 MIAA Lacrosse Tournament, Dover Sherborn.

That game was scheduled for last night.

"To find success in this game, we got to keep ourselves out of the penalty box and stay composed," said midfielder Thomas Flibotte. "That last game vs. Austin Prep was not a good display of that. We can't make those same mistakes against Dover Sherborn."

Cohasset and Dover Sherborn have a long history and a building lacrosse rivalry. In their last meeting, Cohasset definitively defeated the D-S Raiders 12-5, but the Raiders knocked Cohasset out of the tournament last season, denying the Skippers a chance at Scituate and a State Title.

The winner of the semifinal game plays at Harvard on June 16 against the winner of the Norwell vs. Weston game for the Division 3 MIAA Lacrosse State Championship.

World Cup guide

Players, lingo, and reasons to watch

By Ryan Wood
RWOOD@CNC.COM

More than 715 million people watched the 2006 World Cup, according to FIFA, the international governing body of association football. This year, that number should grow, particularly because the game has reached a much larger audience. Over the past four years, international soccer matches and domestic leagues have gotten more and more air time on television and not only of Fox Soccer Channel. This year, ESPN began airing English Premier League matches as well as select games from the top Spanish division, La Liga, which features two of the best teams in the world – Barcelona and Real Madrid. The Champions League, a tournament amongst the best clubs in all of Europe, had its final air nationally on Fox.

If you didn't watch a match this year or have never watched soccer period, you might be wondering what all the buzz is about and why the World Cup is such a massive event. Soccer is pretty much the lowest on the sports totem pole here in the U.S. The country's professional league – Major League Soccer – doesn't exactly have the best talent in the world, save for a few of the guys on the U.S. men's national team. If the New England Revolution won the MLS Cup, the chances of the city of Boston having a rolling rally is extremely unlikely.

So, why watch? Well since every single World Cup game will be aired on TV between ESPN, ESPN2, and ABC over the next month, it'll be hard to miss a game, even if you're just channel surfing. Avid soccer fans will try to watch every game. But for new soccer fans, or for those who flip on a game because nothing else is on TV, here's some stuff to look for, and what may prove handy if you're watching the game with friends or people who religiously follow the game.

First, the players. Many of you are familiar with names like Portugal's Cristiano Ronaldo, the highest paid player in the world, who played for Manchester United and now plays for Real Madrid. If you've heard of Manchester United, you've heard the name Wayne Rooney, a dangerous forward with incredible speed, footwork, and accuracy, and a helluva attitude and one of England's top players.

Since there are 32 teams in the World Cup, here are 30 more players to watch for, broken down by country/club team. Thierry Henry (France/Barcelona), Steven Pienaar (South Africa/Everton), Carlos Vela (Mexico/Arsenal), Diego Forlan (Uruguay/Atlético Madrid), Lionel Messi (Argentina/Barcelona), Joseph Yobo (Nigeria/Everton), Ji Sung Park (South Korea/Manchester United), Theofanis Gekas (Greece/Eintracht Frankfurt), Landon Donovan (U.S./LA Galaxy), Abdelkader Ghezzal (Algeria/Siena), Zlatko Dedic (Solvenia/Bochum), Bastian Schweinsteiger (Germany/Bayern Munich), Tim Cahill (Australia/Everton), Milos Krasic (Serbia/CSKA Moscow), Sulley Muntari (Ghana/Inter Milan), Wesley Sneijder (Netherlands/Inter Milan), Thomas Sorensen (Denmark/Stoke City), Shunsuke Nakamura (Japan/ Yokohama F. Marinos), Sameul Eto'o (Cameroon/Inter Milan), Gianluca Zambrotta (Italy/A.C. Milan), Oscar Cardozo (Paraguay/Benfica), Ryan Nelsen (New Zealand/Blackburn), Marek Hamsik (Slovakia/Napoli), Kaka (Brazil/Real Madrid), Yong-Hak An (North Korea/Omiya Ardija), Salomon Kalou (Ivory innings in a 3-2 victory over the No. 13 seed (13-11).

Andrew McKenna singled home the game-winner with one down in the bottom of the eight to set up Cohasset's first trip to the Sectional Semifinal.

A win against West Bridgewater would give Cohasset a game on Saturday in the final at Brockton's Campanelli Stadium, where the Brockton Rox play.

Cavanaro, who got the win against Old Colony, struck out four batters. Haggerty also went 3 for 4 with a triple and two RBI.

Second baseman Jamie Faber had a bases-loaded double to begin the scoring and finished with four RBI.

Catcher Connor Goetz had a triple and two RBI.

Cohasset Girls Youth Lacrosse recaps

COURTESY PHOTO

The Cohasset team.

On a hot, humid night with thunderstorms lurking in the distance, the Cohasset seventh and eighth grade girls faced off against their toughest opponent, the Duxbury Green Dragons. The seventh grade girls hit the field first and left Duxbury in the dust quickly on their way to a commanding 9-0 lead. Annie McElgunn had the night of her life, as she won nearly every draw, scored five goals and assisted on several others. The ball movement in the Cohasset offensive end was incredible, as attackers Morgen Montgomery, Isabel McCarthy, Jackie Driscoll and Erin Driscoll buzzed the ball around the zone and scored at will.

The Cohasset seventh grade defense more than held up their end of the bargain, as they shut down a fast Duxbury attack. Goalie Taylor Frederick was not challenged early but she came up big when needed. Defenders Caroline Prescott, Caty Gilman, Megan Fitzgerald, Rebecca Brown and Allie O'Callaghan were outstanding marking their players and creating turnovers for quick transition goals. Middies Elizabeth Baker, Adaline Neuss, Grace Ryan and Valerie Farren helped Cohasset win the ground ball battle and made life tough on the Duxbury midfield. The seventh grade team would go on to win by a final of 14-6.

The eighth grade girls were up next and were faced with the tough task of beating an undefeated Duxbury squad. The girls were more than up to the challenge and the game was a great one as both teams traded goals early. The key to Cohasset's success in this game was the excellent ball movement, as nearly every goal was assisted. Kathryn Dunn would get the team on the board first off a great feed from behind the cage by Lexa Grasz. The Dunn-Grasz combination was a strong one on this night, as Dunn scored five goals along with an assist and Grasz would have five assists and one goal. Annie McElgunn was once again a key factor in this game as she pulled double duty and scored four more goals and Cohasset would lead by one going into halftime.

Duxbury features a very high powered attack and the Cohasset defense made life tough for them as goalie Hanna Cooper made eight saves, including three amazing stops in the last few minutes of the game. The defense of Molly Fitzgerald, Emily Robbins, Caroline Evans and Izzy Seal was strong all game as the Dux attackers kept charging to the cage. Middies Katherine Naughton, Maddie Curley, Christina Tedeschi and Mikayla McGrath also played great defense, with Naughton causing several turnovers with her aggressive play. Team MVP Maggie Ernst provided great insight for the coaches and motivation for her teammates.

The final minutes were nerve wracking in this game as Duxbury came back from a four goal deficit to tie the game at 10 with under a minute. After a timeout, the Cohasset girls were ready to finish this one off. Duxbury would gain possession off of the draw but Grasz made a heady interception right in front of Cooper and then went racing up field where she found McElgunn alone on the left post for the winning goal. This is the second year in a row the 8th grade girls have beaten an otherwise undefeated Duxbury team. It was an incredible night for Cohasset girls lacrosse and a look into a very bright future for our high school team!

Coast/Chelsea), Andres Iniesta (Spain/Barcelona), Alexander Frei (Switzerland/FC Basel), Wilson Palacios (Honduras/Tottenham Hotspur), and Humberto Suazo (Chile/Real Zaragoza).

Here's some terminology, some of which is obvious and you may know, and some you might here for the first, second, or third time and may not know. Advantage: when a player is fouled, but either himself of his team maintains possession, and play continues. Dispossessed: when a player takes the ball from an opposing player. Holding midfielder: a central midfielder who plays back and in front of the defenders. Injury time/stoppage time: time added to a half due to any injuries or stoppages in play during the half. Overlapping run: when a player runs around a teammate, often heading down the side and making himself open. Set piece: free kick, often takes place after a foul. Through ball: a ball passed behind/through a defensive player and connecting to a teammate on a run.

Women watch the World Cup. Imagine that. Think about when you go to a Major League Baseball game or an NFL game. Your significant other may ask, "What do I wear." Please, please do not wear pink anything. Pink Red Sox hats are bad enough. I'm no fashion plate by any means, but I know someone who is. I sat down one day with Leslie Osborne of the Boston Breakers and U.S. Women's National Team as she talked about what girls could wear to support their favorite team. Osborne's tips can be found in the June 1 issue of Our Game Magazine at http://tinyurl.com/ourgame0610.

Lastly, why watch the World Cup? Even if the U.S. doesn't make it past the group stage or get to the finals, you'll see the passion that soccer fans around the world share and how much the game means to them and their country. Go to a local Brazilian restaurant or places like the North End in Boston or Little Italy in New York. Or, kick back on your couch and just enjoy the game. It only comes around every four years.

Join us. You will not be disappointed. Like all great artists, our friend Seth ships!

'Sen10rs' out with a bang!

LIFE AT CHS

NATALIE DIGNAM

First off, congratulations class of 2010! The sen10rs went out with a bang, kicking off the summer with a very successful prom. Although the theme wasn't so clear, the dancing, henna tattoos, and.... mechanical bull?.... made it unforgettable and fun.

Thanks Sean/Parmesean for the great articles all year, but it takes a girl to know what's most important about prom: the dresses. This year was especially classy for the Cohasset Lady Skippers, seniors and underclassmen alike. Memorable and moving speeches by valedictorian Christine Coner, salutatorian Cam Lucitt, and their very own class president Parmesean made the 2010 graduation impressive, especially the incorporation of a few choice quotes that no doubt gave optimism and hope to the graduates.

As the seniors depart, off to begin the rest of their lives, or maybe just their summer plans, the rest of us are stuck wondering; when is summer going to start? Without the graduates, the halls of CHS are little lonely, but not too lonely as the senior lounge and courtyard are left vacant for the upcoming seniors (although we aren't prepared to handle the great outdoors for at least another week, since we all know it's pretty much a Bear Grylls experience).

Only one more week until summer, so hang in there CHS!

Natalie Dignam is a rising senior at CHS.

Helmet safety main focus

Spectacular event delivers message

Thursday afternoon (May 27) the Cohasset Middle-High School gym was transformed into an "extreme sports" bike and skate park. The Maximum Velocity Stunt Team, a group that has performed at everything from NBA halftime shows to First Night Boston, delivered a thrilling, action-packed show to Cohasset public school students in grades 5 through 8.

With national sponsors like Levi's and Gatorade, the individuals on the stunt team perform their signature feats to audiences across the country. Terry Synnott, who regularly performs with Cirque du Soleil in New York City, is currently ranked #2 in the world for flatland freestyle skateboarding. Biker Brian Hunt, sponsored by POC Helmets, is off to compete in the X Games this year.

Although the tricks by bicyclists, skateboarders and in-line skaters were the headline attraction, bike helmets were the main focus.

Bike helmets offered

Saturday, June 12, from 9 a.m. to 12noon, Cohasset Police will give away free bike helmets to Cohasset residents. There are 60 helmets, size S, M and L, and they will be available at the police station on a first-come, first-served basis.

Cohasset Police Chief Mark DeLuca kicked off the event with a friendly introduction and then got right down to business.

"How many of you know how old you have to be before you're allowed to stop wearing a helmet? Raise your hand if you think you know," DeLuca said.

A fifth grader answered "12." Wrong.

A seventh grader answered "16." Wrong again.

"The correct answer is 17," DeLuca said. "Under 17 is the law. It's not the smartest law, but it's the law. All ages should wear helmets, you shouldn't stop just because you turn 17.

"If you don't wear your helmets we're going to pull you over. We'll bring you to your parents and they'll pay a fine. And then we'll keep your bike for a week," he said.

There was dead silence from the bleachers.

The mood lightened a bit when Cohasset police officers Gregg Hartnett and Chris Bowers joined the stunt team on their own bikes and were egged on to try some modest stunts themselves. The 10- to 14-year-olds cheered as the officers rode up and down the ramps — looking cool and confident, even though they'd had no idea this was part of the job description for the day.

About the bike helmet law:

• The Massachusetts Bike Helmet Safety Law— According to state law, if you are 16 years old or younger, you must wear a helmet that meets ANSI requirements on any bike, anywhere, at all times. The helmet must fit your head and the chinstrap must be fastened. The same applies to in-line skates, skateboards and scooters. This is per the Massachusetts Bike Helmet Safety Law, which was written in 1993 and updated in 2004.

• Safety statistics — According to the U.S. Department of Transportation, 95% percent of bicyclists killed in 2006 reportedly weren't wearing helmets. Young cyclists are more likely than adult cyclists to die of head injuries, most of which are caused by motor vehicle collisions. Hospitalizations for head injuries are 10 times greater for bike accidents than for both baseball and football.

• Funding from school and community organizations — This event was coordinated by parent volunteers Cheryl Whetstone and Sally Sisson Game, who worked with Maureen Duffy, Health Education instructor at Cohasset Middle School, and Dr. Mike Gill, assistant principal of Cohasset Middle-High School. It was made possible through funding from the Cohasset Police Patrolman's Association, Mass Bay Road Club, Cohasset Middle School Student Council, and Cohasset Middle-High School PSO (Parent School Organization).

• For more information:

For statistics on bike accidents, see the Bike Helmet Safety Institute website at http://www.bhsi.org/stats.htm

For more info on Maximum Velocity, visit their website at: http://www.mvst.com/

They said it:

"My husband had a bike accident last year and ended up with a concussion. He was wearing a helmet, but the impact was so great that the helmet cracked. His doctor said that if he hadn't been wearing the helmet, he could have had serious brain injury — or worse. I really believe the helmet may have saved his life."

— Cheryl Whetstone, Deer Hill and Middle School parent and co-coordinator of event

"We want to teach kids the skills to make smart decisions when they're on their own, away from school. Skills for life."

Maureen Duffy, Health Education teacher, Cohasset Middle School

"When teachers, parents and the community-at-large work in concert, health education becomes the most basic and effective form of prevention."

— Dr. Mike Gill, Assistant Principal, Cohasset Middle-High School

"Skiers and snowboarders are now wearing helmets. Helmets are required in full-contact sports like football and hockey, so why not for biking? If your head hits the ground, that's full contact."

— Brian Hunt, biker with Maximum Velocity.

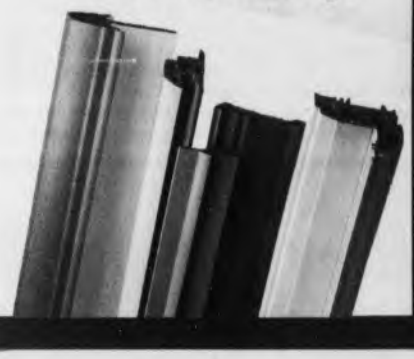
After 22 years in a Florida swamp, our window is as good as new.

For those who don't want to replace their replacement windows.



To ensure the durability of our patented Fibrex® material window, we've kept the same window frame submerged in a Florida swamp since 1988. To this day, our testing engineers inspect it every year, and there has been absolutely no change. Our other weather-testing sites in sub-zero Minnesota and the Arizona desert have yielded the same result: after 22 years in the worst conditions, the very same Fibrex® material has remained unchanged.

Why do we perform this crazy weather-testing? To build the best replacement window, that's why. Our practically indestructible Fibrex® frame keeps our glass from shifting and our insulating seals intact, even during drastic temperature changes. Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF
JUNE 21, 2010

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) A plan you've kept on hold for a long time finally could be greenlighted. But in typical Aries form, you'll need to be sure that everything is in place before you hit the "start" button.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Others might urge you to act more quickly on your ideas. But you'd be wise to follow your Bovine instincts and get more facts to bolster your position when you finally present it.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You might be tempted to accept the well-meaning offer of a friend to act as an intermediary in a dispute. But you know best what it's about, and you can handle the challenge. Good luck.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Entertainment can play an important role this week. Enjoy some well-earned diversion with people you care about. Something especially wonderful might come from this well-spent time.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Catnaps and playtime are in order for Leos and Leonas who need to take some time off from their hectic schedules to restore their energies and rebuild their mental muscles. Have fun.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Virgos will need to keep an open mind this week about choices that seem improbable. A closer study might well reveal possibilities that might have been overlooked. Stay with it.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A disappointing outcome of a well-intentioned effort should be seen as a lesson in how to do it right the next time. Note all your changes and have your new plan set up by week's end.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Travel plans might need readjusting because of changes in the costs previously agreed to. Deal with the problem as quickly as possible to minimize any delays that might result.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Your honest approach to an unsettling experience draws admiration from others. Use their positive feedback to build support for your program to introduce needed changes.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Travel is strong in your aspect this week, and so is nostalgia! You might want to consider planning a trip to a place that holds some very special meaning for you. Bon voyage.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A job-related situation could provide an opportunity you hadn't considered before. Look it over carefully and see where and how you can tailor it to fit your needs.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Showing strength as well as sympathy helps you deal with a difficult personal matter. It also helps you set an example for others when it's their turn to get involved in the situation.

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

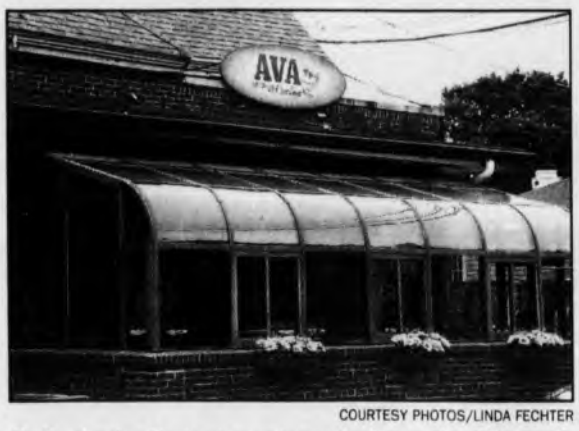
Now that's Italian!

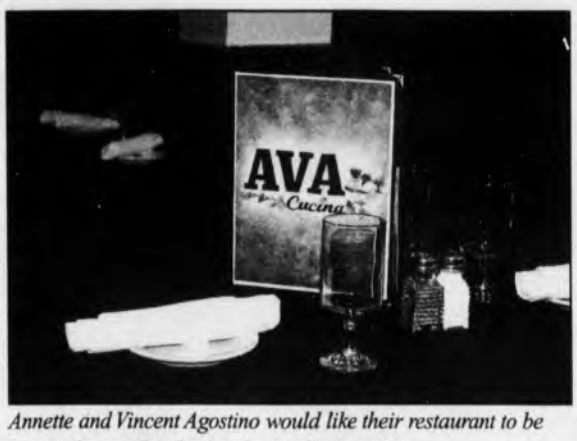
Ava Cucina opens at former Bernard's location



By Linda Fechter
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

This Sunday at 4 p.m. the doors will open for great dining at Ava Cucina, 107 Ripley Road. For some, the restaurant is best known as the former site of "Bernard's." For those whose memories go a little further back, they may still feel sentimental for pancakes once served when it was the Log n' Line. Annette and Vincent Agostino, the husband and wife team who are opening Ava Cucina, would like their restaurant to be known for comfort food and casual atmosphere, like that of your grandmother's kitchen — the Italian translation of the name.

"For years I dreamed of owning my own place," says co-owner Annette Agostino. "My father was a chef, he owned a pub in Brookline called the "Horn & Claw" when I was very young. He cooked and my mom helped out. I spent a lot of time there."



Agostino has waitressed since she was a teenager. She began at Mike Burns Pub in Hull and eventually found a home working at Mezza Mare. Most recently, she has worked at the Red Lion, as both waitress and manager for the past eight years. It was there that she built friendships and relationships with local residents who encouraged her to pursue her own place.

Co-owner, Vincent Agostino, has the restaurant business in his blood. Cooking is second nature for him, and to be the chef at his own place is truly realizing a dream. His parents have owned and operated Mezza Mare in Hull for more than 12 years. It's there that he helped build the restaurant's reputation for great family dining. In fact, it's where the husband and wife team met. The two both knew that someday they wanted their own place, however, it took a little time to sort through exactly what it should be. She wanted a restaurant; while he preferred to open an Italian deli that also served pizza. They decided to do a little of both.

On Sunday Ava Cucina is opening at the former site of Bernard's on Ripley Road.

Annette and Vincent Agostino would like their restaurant to be known for comfort food and casual atmosphere.

Ava Cucina's menu will offer Italian favorites like lasagna and pasta primavera as well as chicken parmigiana. The menu also includes pizza with make your own toppings (and a take out menu). In fact, a two topping pizza and mix green salad for two for $19.00, is a special that is sure to please. Easy on the wallet and great for the appetite.

The reason the Agostinos decided to open their "dream" in Cohasset is because of the wonderful encouragement they've received from the community. And as for the location itself, they both said that they walked into the space and it just "felt right."

Ava Cucina is truly a family business. The Agostinos have five children, all of whom will be working at the restaurant. Perhaps it will serve as a starting point for their next generation of restaurateurs. According to Annette, the vision for the restaurant is for diners to think of Ava Cucina as "a little piece of Boston's North End, right here in Cohasset."

Hours will be Tues., Wed., Thurs, and Sun. 4 - 9 p.m. and Fri-Sat. until 10. Call 781-383-8300 for reservations.

Plated Gourmet has Cohasset connection

The Plated Gourmet (www.theplatedgourmet.com), a catering company founded on the idea of bringing people together and enjoying healthy, home-cooked meals, has expanded its five-year old business with the opening of a Norwell location and the acquisition of a second catering company.

Cohasset's Allison J. DeLorenzo, President and Executive Chef of The Plated Gourmet, said that the company, which she founded in 2005 and which has served the Greater Boston area since that time, wanted to expand to the South Shore market. Earlier this year, she partnered with John Moore of The Navy Yard Bistro in Charlestown to be able to accomplish this goal with the acquisition of a second catering company and the leasing of a prime Norwell location on Washington Street.

The Plated Gourmet has completed the restoration and revitalization of the 1700-square-foot, stand-alone building at 35 Washington St., Norwell, which was the former home of Gimme the Skinny. DeLorenzo and Moore did not disclose the terms of the acquisition but said that they were pleased to be able to secure a lease for and restore the Norwell location that had housed the previous catering company.

The restorations to the property are finally complete, culminating a four-month effort.

"We were able to transform the space and create a quaint feel to the old Cape house, where you will walk in and feel very much at home. Working with Matt DeLuca of The DeLuca Group, each phase was completed on a timely schedule as agreed upon and educated advice was given when needed. Matt was a pleasure to work with and went above and beyond to ensure everything was done to our liking. Quick Flicks

Carrie (Sarah Jessica Parker) and Big (Chris Noth), together again in "Sex and the City 2."

BABIES (PG) An adorable documentary about four babies, from different corners of the world, and their first months of life. They cry, crawl and talk. Nothing Earth-shattering here. But it is awwww-inspiring. (B)

THE CITY OF YOUR FINAL DESTINATION (PG-13) Period piece from director James Ivory focuses on a young American writer attempting to secure the rights to a recently deceased writer's life story. (B)

CLASH OF THE TITANS (PG-13) Sam Worthington, Liam Neeson and Ralph Fiennes star in this largely faithful remake of the 1981cult classic. This one's so bad, it may have angered the gods. Titanic disaster. (D)

DATE NIGHT (PG-13) A night out takes an unexpectedly dangerous turn for a married couple (Tina Fey and Steve Carell) when they steal another pair's dinner reservations. The script is limited, but the ensemble is charming and engenders plenty of good will. Fey and Carell have chemistry to burn. (B-)

THE GHOST WRITER (PG-13) Roman Polanski directs this political thriller loosely based on Tony Blair's associations with the Bush administration. Pierce Brosnan stars. (B)

THE GIRL WITH THE DRAGON TATTOO (Not rated) Based on the worldwide best-seller by Stieg Larsson, this Swedish thriller deals in murder, mystery and mayhem in inventive ways. If you can handle the violence, then you're in for something unique and compelling. (B+)

GEORGE A. ROMERO'S SURVIVAL OF THE DEAD (R) An unnecessary zombie film from writer/director Romero. He uses the living dead as a humorous metaphor for our consumer-driven society. (C)

GET HIM TO THE GREEK (R) Jonah Hill plays a peon assigned the task of getting an oft-inebriated rock star (Russell Brand) from London to the Greek Theater in Los Angeles on time. Brand is reviving his over-medicated, under-talented rocker who just about stole the show in "Forgetting Sarah Marshall." He and Hill have great comic chemistry. The show has laughs and a heart. (B)

THE GIRL ON THE TRAIN (Unrated) In this fact-based tale, an opportunistic young woman claims she was attacked on a train by black and Arab youths who thought she was a Jew.

HOW TO TRAIN YOUR DRAGON (PG) Jay Baruchel voices a wimpy Viking kid who rejects his people to side with their dragon enemies in this fun animated feature. The film follows the friendship of the boy and his dragon, and tosses in a nice subtle message about tolerance. The movie's big heart will win you over. (B+)

IRON MAN 2 (PG-13) Robert Downey Jr. returns to do battle with fellow reclamation project Mickey Rourke and Scarlett Johansson in this sequel to the surprise 2008 blockbuster. This installment seems to underplay the franchise's most valuable player — Downey. The film gets off to a strong start, but ultimately, it suffers from an 'Iron' deficiency. (C-)

JUST WRIGHT (PG) Queen Latifah plays a physical therapist treating an NBA star who brings her heartache by falling in love with her best friend instead of her. It's just as predictable as every other rom-com we've recently been sent. A comedy with no laughs — that's "Just Wright." And that's just wrong. (C)

THE KILLERS (PG-13) A married couple (Ashton Kutcher and Katherine Heigl) fears someone is trying to kill them because Kutcher used to be a secret agent. (Not Reviewed)

LETTERS TO JULIET (PG) Amanda Seyfried plays a woman vacationing in Verona, Italy, who tries her hand at matchmaking after being inspired by the story of "Romeo & Juliet." We get lines like, "True love knows no expiration date." Not exactly Shakespearean. Not exactly good. (C-)

MACGRUBER (R) The popular "Saturday Night Live" sketch created by and starring Will Forte gets the big-screen treatment with Kristen Wiig and Ryan Philippe. It sounded like this film should be a disaster, but it's surprisingly good. (B)

MARMADUKE (PG) The cartoon world's famous great Dane in a comedy adventure melding live action and computer animation. With Steve Coogan, Fergie, George Lopez. (Not Reviewed)

MOTHER AND CHILD (R) Three women (Annette Bening, Naomi Watts and Kerry Washington) are all dealing with issues concerning adoption in this compelling drama. Smart and wonderfully acted. (A-)

PLEASE GIVE (R) Director Nicole Holofcener's film about morally conflicted women (Catherine Keener, Rebecca Hall, Amanda Peet, Sarah Steele) might be her best yet. Insightful writing pairs perfectly with the talented cast. You'll enjoy spending time with her lovable, deeply flawed characters. (A-)

PRINCE OF PERSIA: THE SANDS OF TIME (PG-13) Producer Jerry Bruckheimer taps a bulked-up Jake Gyllenhaal to play Dastan, the star of the popular video game on which this fantasy is based. (C)

ROBIN HOOD (PG-13) For their fifth collaboration, Ridley Scott and Russell Crowe venture into Sherwood Forest for a glum remake of the classic tale. The film is as heavy and clumsy as chain mail.(C-)

THE SECRET IN THEIR EYES (R) Oscar-winning tale of a criminal court employee determined to solve a 25-year-old murder case with the help of the young victim's still-grieving fiance. It's the kind of subtle and challenging film that rarely seems to make it to the movie theaters these days. (A)

SEX AND THE CITY 2 (R) The girls have a second go-round on the big screen with more bling and fashion. Unfortunately, the four women who were once confident, stylish and independent have turned into self-indulgent shrews. This sequel has lots of flash and dazzle, but "Sex" has lost its appeal. (D)

SHREK FOREVER AFTER (PG) Fed up with his humdrum life, Shrek is thrust into an alternative universe where he will learn to appreciate how much Fiona and the kids mean to him. The final installment, finally. (D)

SPECIAL TOWN MEETING

Water rates rising

Citizens grapple with financial crisis

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

No one walked out of the high school gymnasium smiling following Monday night's Town Meeting; approval of a significant water rate increase was not a victory for anyone.

But, a majority of town voters agreed there was no other way except to bail out the water department by assuming higher rates.

The increased revenue generated from the new rates will cover much, but not all, of the water department's projected $1.1-million shortfall next year (see sidebar).

Town Meeting actions will keep the water department's financial crisis at bay, but it is neither the end of the discussion nor the end-all fix.

Town officials will likely be back at the November Special Town Meeting with more recommendations to resolve the financial situation. The recommendations may come in the form of town operating budget cuts, additional fees, or other means.

A professional third-party financial audit will be performed to better understand how the department and the town got to this place.

Let there be music

Middle school program requires staffing changes

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Will the Middle School have a music program next year?

School officials say yes.

Although rumors to the contrary were circulating around town in recent weeks, school officials said the music programs at both the middle school and high school would be offered at the current level come the fall.

"There has been a lot of discussion with the music department over the past five or six weeks on how we can best serve the students."

– Principal Joel Antolini

However, there will be staffing changes and re-deployments in order to do so — and that requires teachers' union approval and additional negotiation.

The need for staffing changes was fueled by two factors: the middle school music teacher not returning next year and high school enrollment numbers in band and chorus.

Over the past two weeks a petition to express the community's support

Plenty of tender loving care

Long-time Deer Hill School nurse retires

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

School nurse, Karen Murphy, checks to make sure a student's snack is nut free. This is one of her daily tasks that in a school with 12 nut-free classrooms.

"I don't feel very good."

"I have a tummy ache."

For the last 24 years, Deer Hill School nurse Karen Murphy has heard these two sentences more times than she cares to even venture a guess at.

Murphy has been entrusted with the care of thousands of students during her tenure in Cohasset Schools. She's given them band-aids when they have been bleeding, comfort when they are feverish, and called many a child's bluff when they are perfectly healthy.

Today, the last day of school, Murphy will bid adieu to her long-held office and enter her retirement. But, over the years she has made a difference in countless children's lives.

"They come in scared, cut, scraped or sick and I want to make them feel comfortable," Murphy said.

She knows each child by name and greets him/her with a friendly smile and compassion when they walk through her door. After they tell her their ailment she gets to work – asking them more questions about how they're feeling to sending them to the sink to clean up a cut with soap and water.

"You never know what's going to come through that door," Murphy said.

Over the years she's had to deal with some pretty scary situations from broken bones to ruptured spleens.

"You have to adjust and have to be as flexible as possible," Murphy said.

She recalled three incidents that stand out in her mind as some of the strangest she has had to deal with.

Sharp grandfather does not fall for 'grandparent scam'

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

A sharp 80-year-old Cohasset grandfather, who has 12 grandchildren, got a call that turned out to be part of the infamous "grandparent scam" which has been around for more than a year.

However, this granddad — when he got a call from a male voice saying he was his grandson, was in trouble in Spain and wanted money wired to him via Western Union — became suspicious. He asked the caller if he was grandson Matt and the caller said he was. Then the grandfather asked for the caller's date of birth. The caller then swore at him and hung up the phone, police said.

The grandfather notified police about the incident that occurred last Wednesday (June 9).

In April of 2009, a Cohasset grandmother fell victim to a scam. She reported the incident to police after reading about the scam in the Mariner.

She sent $4,000 to the caller, whom she thought was her grandson. The caller said he was in trouble and needed bail money, police said.

The woman later made contact with her real grandson and confirmed that he was not involved.

Last fall, a 72-year-old Cohasset grandmother almost lost nearly $3,000 in the "grandparent scam." She received a phone call from a man, who said he was in Canada and claimed to be her grandson. The caller said he was in trouble and was crying. Before she could question him further another man took the phone who said he was a police officer. He explained that her grandson was not in trouble but his friends were and $2700 was needed right away to pay for the bond.

The Cohasset woman drove to Stop & Shop and completed a cash transaction to have the money wired to Canada. After leaving Stop & Shop, she drove to the police station to report the incident. The officer handling the matter recognized the scam right away and called Stop & Shop, which was able to stop the transaction.

Police said a senior citizen in Scituate also fell victim to one of these scams and wired $2,500 to Canada from a supermarket in Cohasset.

Cohasset Police continue to warn senior citizens to be aware of the telephone scam that is preying on grandparents nationwide.

The scam works like this: the grandparent receives a distressed phone call from who they believe is their grandchild. The supposed grandchild typically explains that they are traveling and have been arrested or involved in an auto accident and need the grandparent to wire money to post bail or pay for damages — usually amounting to a few thousand dollars.

It is believed that scammers are most likely calling random numbers until they happen to reach a senior citizen. The scammers' basic tactic is to pose as a grandchild and let the unsuspecting grandparent fill in the blanks.

Police are advising seniors to confirm the status of the individual by calling them directly or verifying the story with other family members before taking any further action.

Police also advise that any request to wire money through Western Union or MoneyGram should be seen as a "red flag" and an immediate tip-off that the call may be part of a scam. Funds sent via wire transfer are hard to track once received by scammers and are usually not recoverable by law enforcement or banking officials.

Asleep

Police responded to a report from a concerned citizen about a car with Connecticut plates parked behind the Dunkin Donuts on King Street at 12:57 a.m. on Monday (June 7) with a man inside. Police responded to see if the motorist was OK. The 29-year-old Norwalk, Conn. man in a 1987 Volvo had pulled off the road for a few hours to sleep and was about to get up anyway, police said. He had been feeling tired and had pulled off the road for safety reasons.

Mysterious bone

A concerned citizen from Forest Avenue brought a bone in to the police station at about 6:33 p.m. on Monday (June 7) that his dog had dug up. The bone was well aged, yellow and tan in color, and dirty. It measured about 12 inches long, was snapped at one end and had a ball joint at the other end. Detectives turned it over to the Chief Medical Examiner's Office in Boston, which will have an anthropologist examine it. Police do not think it is a human bone.

Missing dog

A Jerusalem Road woman went to the police station at about 7 a.m. on Thursday (June 10) to report that her dog — a 2-year-old, 100-pound, Lab/hound mix – had followed another dog out of the yard the day before and was missing. A short time later a resident of the Hingham side of Hull Street called police to report finding a dog. The owner and dog were reunited, police said.

Road rage

A 36-year-old Scituate woman reported to police at about 2:42 p.m. on Thursday (June 10) that the woman motorist behind her was tailgating her on Route 3A and then passed her, forcing her off the road. Cohasset police notified Hingham police. There was no description of the car except that it was a newer model, police said.

Eating, calling

The passenger in a taxicab in Cohasset reported to police at 12:22 a.m. on Friday (June 11) that the car in front was being driven erratically; the passenger provided detailed information about the direction the 1999 Volvo was headed. Police caught up with the car at the residence of the 47-year-old Cohasset woman who was driving. She had been eating and calling on her cell phone while driving, police said.

Documents taken

A 46-year-old Cohasset woman reported to police at 11:30 a.m. on Friday (June 11) that someone had entered her unlocked home and had taken personal documents. The incident is being investigated, police said.

Mirror ripped off

A 55-year-old Border Street woman reported that the side passenger mirror of her 1998 Lexus had been torn off while the car was parked. The wires were left hanging and the mirror is missing, police said. The incident was reported at 12:35 p.m. on Saturday (June 12).

Window egged

A 41-year-old Cohasset woman, who lives on Nichols Road, reported at 10:51 p.m. on Saturday (June 12) that several eggs were thrown at the large picture window on her home. The eggs had to be washed off; there are no suspects, police said.

Deer hit

A 2003 Jeep Grand Cherokee operated by a 29-year-old Marshfield woman hit a pregnant deer at about 11 p.m. on Saturday (June 12) on Forest Avenue. The woman told police the deer darted out. She was traveling toward North Main Street when the accident occurred. There was heavy damage to the front end of the Jeep, police said. The operator had an expired registration and she was cited for that violation. The impact killed the deer that was removed by the DPW.

Minors

A 20-year-old Cohasset man who lives on Margin Street is being summoned to court for being a minor in possession of liquor after police responded to calls about gunshots in the Mill Lane area. Police said the shots were likely firecrackers but while investigating they found a pickup truck with five youth in the bed of the truck drinking. There was a 30 pack of Busch Light beer and a bottle of rum. Police said the owner of the truck was intoxicated and he is being summonsed on the criminal charge of minor in possession. The mother of one of the five involved took custody of all the young men.

Cell phones

A 49-year-old Cohasset woman reported to police on Sunday (June 13) that two cell phones were taken out of her unlocked car while she was at a dinner party on Linden Drive. There was no damage to the car and the incident is being investigated.

Bake for Haiti is Saturday

Many volunteers from the South Shore are returning for the second or third time because this has been a life changing experience for them.

Light Path for Haiti, an organization based in Cohasset, is committed to providing medical relief to the Haitian people in Petit-Goave. Light Path is having a bake and yard sale on Saturday, June 19, at 282 Cedar St. to raise funds for volunteers going down to help the people of Haiti (rain date: Sunday, June 20).

The trip planned for July 25 will be the third for some volunteers from the South Shore for Light Path for Haiti. On the last two trips Light Path volunteers flew down to Haiti at their own expense to distribute food, water and medical supplies to earthquake victims. Many volunteers from the South Shore are returning for the second or third time because this has been a life changing experience for them.

Members of the community can get involved by donating: baked goods, artistic and entertainment services, unwanted memorabilia. All proceeds will go to Light Path for Haiti.

Also needed are non-perishable goods, baby clothes and diapers for the people of Haiti.

All donations from the yard and bake sale will help the people of Petit-Goave receive: medical attention, medication, food, baby clothes. Donations will also pay for lodging and food for Light Path volunteers.

Anyone interested in helping with this event and fundraiser may call Martha Drew at: 617-835-9043 or email: lightpath4haiti@gmail.com.

Light Path for Haiti will also be collecting donations throughout the month of June, people can feel free to drop off any donations at: 282 Cedar St., Cohasset, MA 02025

Newsweek: Cohasset in top 10 schools in state

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

This past week Newsweek magazine revealed their list of top 1,500 public schools in the US.

Cohasset High was ranked the eighth public high school in Massachusetts and 476 in the nation.

The annual ranking is based on the percentage of Advanced Placement (AP) tests being taken at the school.

"I'm impressed with the students that see the vision of doing the hard work and rising to that level. I'm impressed with the teachers who consistently encourage students and get them to perform successfully at that level," said Middle-High School principal Joel Antolini.

According to Newsweek.com, public schools are ranked according to a ratio devised by author and education reporter, Jay Mathews: the number of Advanced Placement, Intl. Baccalaureate and/or Cambridge tests taken by all students at a school in 2009 divided by the number of graduating seniors. All of the schools on the list have an index of at least 1.000; and collectively they are in the top 6 percent of public schools in the nation as measured this way.

Cohasset's ranking on this list has improved significantly over the last few years. As recently as 2008 it was ranked 1029. In 2009, CHS ranked 338.

The top two high schools in Massachusetts were charter schools (Sturgis Charter in Hyannis and MATCH Charter in Boston). Belmont, Weston and Hopkinton public high schools ranked ahead of Cohasset, as well as Boston Latin, one of the Boston Public School competitive entrance schools, and Mystic Valley Regional Charter School.

Antolini said the ranking is a reflection of a greater effort across the school system to ensure students are challenging themselves and performing to their ability. Enrollment in AP is just a piece of it, Antolini said. The school is also working to get more students to challenge themselves in honors level courses.

"So many of our students graduate and go on to college and AP classes are a training ground for the college (academic) experience," Antolini said. "Because of that all our students really should participate in at least one AP course."

Notable on the ranking as well is Cohasset High's "Equity and Excellence" rating, which is the percentage of seniors that passed (achieved a 3 or higher) on their AP exam. Last year, 59 percent of Cohasset High's AP test takers achieved a 3 or higher score (5 is the highest score).

"We're encouraging more and more students to take AP courses and they are passing the tests," Superintendent of Schools Denise Walsh said. "I am quite proud of the students and the teachers. It just shows if you build it, they will come."

Middle school program requires staffing changes

for music education and to restore the middle school music position has been circulating (see sidebar).

"There has been a lot of discussion with the music department over the past five or six weeks on how we can best serve the students," Middle-High School principal Joel Antolini said.

During what Antolini described as a collaborative discussion many options were put on the table.

A plan is currently designed and proposed by the administration that will staff the music program at the middle-high school without a dedicated middle school music teacher, Antolini said.

The proposed plan is to have high school band teacher Stephanie Moriarty and high school chorus teacher Bryan Marks split their time between the middle school and high school sections. Deer Hill music teacher Steven Biagini will teach music one period per day for the sixth -grade level.

Participation in music education is a requirement of the middle school curriculum. It is one of six "exploratory," or elective, areas where students must take a class. Students can choose either band or chorus and have a class once every three days. Other elective areas include health, physical education, technology education, math lab and visual art.

At the high school, graduation requirements call for three courses of visual or performance art.

Superintendent of Schools Denise Walsh said she hopes the staffing shift will strengthen the middle school program and provide continuity.

"Nothing will be lost; the same courses will be offered," Walsh said in a phone interview.

Roughly 135 students at Cohasset High School have signed up for band or chorus next year. All 325 middle school students participate in some form of music education.

"I'm very proud of the band and chorus programs at the middle-high school. They do excellent things here in the school and in the community," Antolini said.

Antolini said the new staffing configuration could allow for more opportunities for older students to model their skills and enthusiasm for music for younger participants and collaboration across grades.

It also creates continuity in the music education program as students make transitions from Deer Hill to middle school and middle school to high school.

"It will be the same teachers working with them and bringing them up to the next level," Walsh said.

A hurdle, which could be a substantial one, still remains: the change in staffing requires approval from the teacher's union because it is outside current contract language.

"We're still awaiting final word from the union," Antolini said. A sidebar or impact agreement will need to be made.

A similar staffing structure in the music department was implemented about five years ago.

Petition circulating about music program

For the past two weeks a group of parents have banded together to collect signatures for a petition to keep the music program and dedicated teacher at the Middle-High School. Parent Diane Kennedy was one of many who orchestrated the petition.

"We want to let the school department and school committee know how much the community values music and art education," Kennedy said. "And hope they can find some way to restore it in next year's budget."

The text of the petition affirms the importance of and support for the band and chorus programs in the school district.

"We implore the Cohasset School Department to reconsider the proposed cuts to the music program at the Middle School and High School in order to maintain the current (Academic Year 2010) level staffing at both schools," the petition reads.

Over the past two weeks, over 600 hundred have signed the petition to support music education, including students, parents, and residents.

Kennedy said no one refused to sign the petition and many raved about the music program and its merits.

Text of the petition

"We the undersigned residents of Cohasset strongly support the music program in the Cohasset Public Schools. We implore the Cohasset School Department to reconsider the proposed cuts to the music program at the Middle School and High School in order to maintain the current (Academic Year 2010) level staffing at both schools."

BRIEFLY

Part-time Latin teacher sought

Superintendent of Schools Denise Walsh said the Cohasset Schools are currently seeking a part-time, 20 hours a week, Latin teacher. The Latin program was cut last year based on low student interest, budget constraints and teacher certification. An introductory Latin course is currently offered to students through the only Virtual High School.

Walsh said it is very difficult position to fill and so far they haven't had any luck.

"People are just not going into the field because there are no jobs available," Walsh said.

Take time at the end of this school year to honor local educators by participating in the CEF Teacher Appreciation Program, Extra Credit. People can make a tax-deductible donation to the CEF in a teacher's name, and thank that educator for a job well done and also help fund CEF grant programs that foster innovation and excellence in teaching throughout the entire Cohasset Public School System.

Cohasset firefighters filled-the-boot to aid MDA

This past weekend, Saturday, June 12, and Sunday, June 13, firefighters from Cohasset Local #2804, members of the International Association of Fire Fighters, helped fight neuromuscular diseases by raising $1,100 during their two-day Fill-the-Boot drive at the Super Stop & Shop, 400 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy., benefiting the Muscular Dystrophy Association.

The International Association of Fire Fighters is a longtime friend and the single largest sponsor of MDA, contributing more than $400 million since 1954. Last year, the Massachusetts Fill-the-Boot campaign raised $845,729.44 making it the sixth highest raising state in the nation.

Fill-the-Boot funds support MDA's services locally and nationally, including medical clinics staffed by health professionals skilled in the diagnosis and medical management of neuromuscular diseases.

Fill-the-Boot funds support MDA's services locally and nationally, including medical clinics staffed by health professionals skilled in the diagnosis and medical management of neuromuscular diseases. Clinics also include consultations and recommendations for programs of physical, occupational, respiratory and speech therapy; genetic counseling; and assessments for needed mobility and communication equipment. UMass Memorial Medical Center, Mass General Hospital, Children's Hospital, Brigham and Women's Hospital, New England Medical Center and Lahey Clinic in Burlington are the local clinics that will benefit from Cohasset Local #2804 boot drive.

MDA is the nonprofit health agency dedicated to curing muscular dystrophy, ALS and related diseases by funding worldwide research. The association also provides heath care and support services, advocacy and education.

STATE CHAMPS!

Hello Cohasset! Congratulations to the Cohasset High School Boys Varsity Lacrosse Team as they played on Wednesday Harvard and came home the state champions! What an accomplishment for them and each and every one of the players should be so proud! Nice Job Boys! The Cohasset Skippers Boys Baseball team also pulled out a win to give them their first State title! What a great week and season you have all given and you have made your town of Cohasset very proud of you all! CONGRATULATIONS! Oh and by the way Cohasset, SCHOOLS OUT FOR THE SUMMER! Enjoy and be safe!

SCHOLARSHIP

Rockland Trust awarded Megan Richardson, a 2010 graduate of Cohasset High School, with the Rockland Trust Scholarship. Megan is one of five students who received a $2,500 scholarship in a competition administered by Rockland Trust. Applicants were judged on academic achievement, community service and an essay question. Megan is planning to attend Lafayette University in the fall.

The scholarship award was presented by Rockland Trust president and chief executive officer Christopher Oddleifson and executive vice president Jane Lundquist at a reception at the bank's corporate offices in Hanover on June 9.

"At Rockland Trust, we pride ourselves on our commitment to strengthening the communities in which we work and live," said Oddleifson. "We are focused on developing opportunities for our youth and I am delighted to award this scholarship to Megan Richardson, in recognition of her dedication to her studies and to her community."

EXETER GRAD

Samuel Game, son of Sally Sisson and David Game, graduated from Phillips Exeter Academy on June 6. He received two prizes – the A.A. Landers Prize in Music and the Prize in Theater – as well as the Timothy G. Taylor Trust Scholarship. In addition, he was named "Artist of the Year" by The Exonian newspaper. During his senior year he had singing roles in Lysistrata and the opera Dido and Aeneas; lead roles in The Complete Works of William Shakespeare (Abridged) and Fantasticks; sang with the Glee Club and Exeteras a capella group; and was bass section lead of the Concert Choir and co-president of DRAMAT, Exeter's student-run theater group.

Sam has received a scholarship to attend George Washington University, where he was selected as a Presidential Scholar in the Arts and was admitted to the Dean's Scholars in Shakespeare Program. This co-curricular program is held in conjunction with The Shakespeare Theatre and the Folger Shakespeare Library in Washington, D.C., home of the largest collection of Shakespeare manuscripts in the world, and includes study in England. Sam plans to study both Theatre and Economics at GW. Nice work Sam, congratulations and the best to you in the future.

BASIC TRAINING

Navy Seaman Recruit Michael T. Ernst, son of Mary M. and Robert C. Ernst of Cohasset, recently completed U.S. Navy basic training at Recruit Training Command, Great Lakes, Ill. Michael is a 2004 graduate of Thayer Academy in Braintree.

During the eight-week program, Michael completed a variety of training that included classroom study and practical instruction on naval customs, first aid, firefighting, water safety and survival, and shipboard and aircraft safety. An emphasis was also placed on physical fitness.

The capstone event of boot camp is "Battle Stations." This exercise gives recruits the skills and confidence they need to succeed in the fleet. "Battle Stations" is designed to galvanize the basic warrior attributes of sacrifice, dedication, teamwork and endurance in each recruit through the practical application of basic Navy skills and the core values of honor, courage and commitment. Its distinctly "Navy" flavor was designed to take into account what it means to be a Sailor.

SKIDMORE COLLEGE

Skidmore College awarded a total of 667 degrees at the college's 99th commencement exercises Saturday, May 22, 2010, at the Saratoga Performing Arts Center.

The following Cohasset students received degrees: Kathryn Evans, bachelor of arts; and Emilie Shea, bachelor of arts.

Co-chairs, Penny and Art Myles of Hingham have brought together more than 60 volunteers for the lobster roll project.

Lobster roll tradition continues

Lobster Lovers — it's time again for the lobster rolls at First Parish Church on Cohasset Common. The sale is held during the South Shore Art Festival on Father's Day Weekend, June 18, 19 and 20. First Parish has been offering these lobster rolls since Lucia Woods of Cohasset began the fundraiser in 2003. Nearly 1,200 rolls were sold last year.

Today Penny and Art Myles of Hingham continue Lucia's tradition as co-chairs by bringing together more than 60 volunteers for the success of this project. As Lucia always says, "Make it the perfect summer eating experience with a lobster roll from First Parish and a strawberry shortcake from across the common at the Second Congregational Church."

Preorders must be placed by 6 p.m. on Thursday, June 17.

Celebrate Father's Day by bringing rolls home for friends and family on Sunday. Walk-ins are welcome as long as supplies last.

The sale is extended this year into Sunday afternoon by popular demand. The all-meat lobster rolls with a bag of Cape Cod potato chips are offered for $13.

Arts Festival this weekend

South Shore Art Center Arts Festival greets summer with something for everyone: art exhibitions, handmade crafts, music, and summer fare, including lobster rolls and strawberry shortcake provided by local churches.

The centerpiece of the Arts Festival is the Main Exhibition Tent, showcasing hundreds of artists in a Juried Exhibition and a Members' Show. In addition, nearly 100 juried craft artists offer unique products. Art comes to life as ceramicists, wood carvers and painters demonstrate their work. The popular KidsTent showcases a Young Artists' Exhibition and offers children the opportunity for hands-on creativity. Musical entertainment ranges from bluegrass to jazz to the popular Irish band "The O'Reilly's." This year will also feature David Ogden, a singer-songwriter from Cohasset who will perform his homage to the South Shore "1-4-3, The Lighthouse Song."

Tents are spread out throughout the Common with studio artisans selling jewelry, ceramics, fine art, photography, clothing, home and garden products, and more.

Festival hours are Friday, June 18, 2 to 7 p.m.; Saturday, June 19, 10 a.m. to 7 p.m.; and Sunday, June 20, noon to 5 p.m. A free trolley shuttles visitors from parking at South Shore Music Circus. A $5 entrance donation is requested. For a complete schedule of events, visit www.ssac.org, or phone 781-383-2787.

Long-time Deer Hill school nurse retires

Many years ago at Osgood School a kid walked in to her office with the metal pull of his zipper wedged around his lower front tooth.

"I have no idea how that happened!" Murphy said. She called 911. The EMTs used a ring cutter to remove the zipper pull from his tooth and the boy was fine.

Another time a kindergartener arrived for his afternoon session and came to the nurse's office 15 minutes later. A look in his throat revealed penny balancing in the back of his throat on his tongue. Acting quickly, Murphy put on a pair of gloves, made her finger into a hook and told the child to hold very still. In one swift movement she was able to remove the penny safely.

Also at Osgood, Murphy said a student who was banging his head with his hand visited her. He told her, "I think a fly flew into my ear." Murphy was skeptical, but she called the EMTs and sure enough they found a fly in his ear.

"Kids do the craziest things, our job here is to figure out how to get them out of the predicament," Murphy said.

Over the past two and half decades the world, the school and school nursing has changed drastically.

"Cell phones have been a godsend," Murphy said with a laugh. She used to call the tennis club and Stop & Shop, or wherever else a child thought their mom or dad might be, in an effort to get in touch with them.

She's gone from handwritten records to computerized everything. She's seen the feel of the school change over the years, as the town (and schools) got bigger. The locked door (visitors have to be buzzed in) was one of the striking differences she mentioned.

"The health office feels more like an infirmary although I still know all the students' names, which helps to make them feel that I acknowledge them as people," Murphy said.

When Murphy first started a school nurse she split her time between Osgood and Deer Hill, spending a half a day with each.

"I didn't have the special health care needs that I do now," Murphy said. While most of the time she was able to juggle the two schools, there were occasions when she was needed in both schools at the same time.

"I remember one time I got called to Deer Hill and once I got here I was called back to Osgood," Murphy said with a smile.

Her responsibilities have expanded and changed over the years. School nurses now need to be licensed by the state and certified by the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education and have to hold a Bachelor's degree.

Each morning she goes to 12 classrooms to check the snacks brought from home to ensure they are "nut-free." This year she has 15 students with nut allergies. A wall in her office is lined with epi-pens in case one of the children has an allergic reaction.

"Years ago I only had one student with nut allergies and at Osgood the kids were eating in the classroom. (Nut allergies) are much more rampant now," Murphy said. Thankfully, she has only had to use an epi-pen on a child once.

Although there have been drastic changes in the school system and school nursing some things haven't changed.

"A tummy ache is not just a tummy ache, you have to sift through and sometimes figure out what's really wrong," Murphy said. "Sometimes it's hard to get a sense of who is telling the truth."

And September will always be a busy month in the nurse's office as the students get back into the swing and schedule of the school year.

She advises her replacement to get in to the school early and get to know the kids with special health needs and their parents.

Murphy is retiring to spend time with her nine-month-old granddaughter, Serena. She and her husband plan to relocate from their Haystack Lane home to New Jersey where their daughter, son-in-law, and granddaughter live.

"The kids are all great; I'm going to miss them the most," Murphy said.

Home Instead SENIOR CARE®

by Alan Carney, Director & Jennifer Moran, CSA, Community Liaison

PET CARE ASSISTANCE

Studies have found that seniors feel less lonely when they spend time with a pet. Many seniors own pets that have provided them with love and companionship for years. Unfortunately, the senior's ability to properly care for a pet may be compromised as time goes on. A home healthcare aide can assist by making sure that there is pet food in the house. If the senior has a cat, the aide can clean the litter box periodically. If there is a dog, the aide can take it on short walks to ensure that it gets some fresh air and exercise. These tasks provide the senior with peace of mind by allowing them the continued enjoyment of their beloved pet.

If your father truly believes that his dog is his best friend or if your mother is devoted to her beautiful Persian cat, then it's vital for your parents' continued health that they get to stay with that animal. Let us help your loved one take care of their four-footed loved one. In addition to pet care, our home health aides can provide the smaller services that will allow your parent to stay in their home, with their pet, for longer. That's better for everyone. Our services are flexible - we can provide occasional visits or provide full-time, round-the-clock care if that's what your parents need. Call 781-878-2994 to learn what we can do to make your life and your parents' lives easier. Our address is 145 Washington St., Suite 11. In-home help for Massachusetts seniors.

P.S. Home care services can arrange for temporary care of a pet when the senior client is hospitalized.

GIMME SHELTER

Identical twins are ready for adoption

COURTESY PHOTO

Ping and Pong are bright-eyed, identical twins and would make a welcome addition to most any cat lover's home.

This week, Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is looking for shelter for its newest additions. They are Ping and Pong. We do think these two are identical twins. They are 8-month-old females, jet black, and the only way we can tell them apart is that Ping has a few strands of white fur on her upper chest. Ping, or was it Pong, was quite happy to sit on our lap for quite a while the other day. They adore one another and are so cute together that we are hoping that someone will adopt them both. They are bright-eyed and would make a welcome addition to most any cat lover's home.

Please check out the website at www.hsar.org for more information on them and our other adoptable cats. Open hours at the shelter are 6:30 to 7:30 p.m., Mondays, and 2 to 3 p.m., on Saturdays. If these hours aren't convenient, call Shirl at 781-925-3380 to arrange an appointment.

The shelter is at 50 L Street, Hull. Mailing address is Hull Seaside Animal Rescue, P.O. Box 787, Hull, MA 02045. We're proud to be a no kill shelter and thank all who support us and give homes to our felines. The telephone number is 781-925-3121.

Hull Seaside Animal Rescue will host an Adoption Day/Open House from 2 to 4 p.m., on Saturday, June 26, at the shelter, 50 L Street, Hull. The public is encouraged to attend if interested in adopting a cat or kitten, or just to visit the facility.

Hull Seaside Animal Rescue will host its annual "Fur Ball" from 7 to 10 p.m., on Saturday, June 19, at Hull Yacht Club.

Also, Hull Seaside Animal Rescue will host its annual "Fur Ball" from 7 to 10 p.m., on Saturday, June 19, at Hull Yacht Club. Proceeds from the $30 per person admission fee will go toward keeping the shelter's felines safe and fed while waiting for their "forever homes." For tickets, call Polly Feinberg at 781-925-0073 or email her at danceforever@verizon.net. Tickets may also be purchased at the door.

The open house is being held in conjunction with Hull of a Day, which will take place across the street at L Street Playground. Mary, the shelter's operations manager, will be at the playground, applying washable animal tattoos to the little ones.

Also, Hull Seaside Animal Rescue will host its annual "Fur Ball" from 7 to 10 p.m., on Saturday, June 19, at Hull Yacht Club. Sandy Beach Happenings

Sandy Beach to open June 19

All facilities stickers are for sale at town hall. Stickers are required for all cars to park at Sandy Beach. Parking fines for parking without a permit is $50.

Every year in early June the annual beach clean up begins in preparation for the official opening of the beach. The clean up began June 14, and should last for most of the week. The beach will be closed during this clean up period. There will be a police officer there to assure that all are safe during this cleaning process. When the contractor, Ross Rosano, has completed the clean up of the sea weed, taken it to Holly Hill Farm for recycling, and removed all the debris from winter storms, the beach will be ready for the summer.

The beach will officially open on Saturday, June 19. Lifeguards will be on duty from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m. daily through Labor Day weekend. Jennifer DiSabatino will be returning as the beach manager for the third year. She will be in charge of scheduling and guard procedures for the staff of summer lifeguards and beach maintenance workers (cleaning staff). She has 20 years of lifeguard experience and is certified in advanced ocean rescue and safety. A Lightning Meter will be in use again this year to alert guards and beach-goers that lightning is in the area and that the beach needs to be closed. Remember that lifeguards are there to protect beachgoers and it is important that people follow their instructions.

The Sandy Beach Association is a non-profit organization run by eight volunteer Trustees. The land for Sandy Beach was donated to this trust in 1929 to ensure that the beach would forever be held for the citizens of Cohasset to enjoy. The Sandy Beach Association manages the beach property only. The town owns and manages the parking lot.

The Trustees are pleased to announce two recipients of the Sandy Beach Association Scholarship. These $500 scholarships are awarded to high school seniors who demonstrate a passion for marine biology and environmental studies. Recipients this year are Jenny Magruder and Tori Lehr. These two CHS seniors participated in studies of enterococci counts in the Cohasset Waters. These tests measured the quality and health of our waters in Cohasset. Thanks to them, the beaches are clean.

All facilities stickers are for sale at town hall. Stickers are required for all cars to park at Sandy Beach. Parking fines for parking without a permit is $50.

On June 27, the Cohasset Triathlon will be run through Cohasset. This race will begin at 8 a.m. A portion of the beach parking lot will be closed at 2 p.m. on Saturday June 26. The entire parking lot will be closed until noon on Sunday, June 27. Lifeguards will be on duty on Saturday the 26th until 7 p.m. Lifeguards will not be on the beach until noon on Sunday the 27th.

The Sandy Beach Association asks that you respect the rules of the beach. Alcohol, fires, fishing, glass bottles, or flotation devices are prohibited anywhere on the beach. Frisbees, hard balls, kites, skimmers and boogies boards are allowed in orange cone marked areas only. Climbing on rocks on either side of the beach is extremely dangerous and prohibited.

Dogs are not permitted on the beach from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m. from mid-June through Labor Day. If you bring your pet to the beach during off-hours, it is imperative that you pick up after your dog.

The column "Sandy Beach Happenings" will be in the paper each week. Remember to read this column each week for beach updates, information, and tide schedules.

By now you should have received the Sandy Beach Association annual fundraising letter. This mailing is the only source of fundraising for the Sandy Beach Association. The fee for your parking sticker funds the parking lot only – it does not cover the costs of beach cleanup, staffing or beach operations. The beach operations including staffing, cleaning and managing the bathhouse are run entirely through private donations to the Sandy Beach Association. The beach can't operate as it does without the generous support of Cohasset residents. Donations can be sent to P.O. Box 285 in Cohasset.

Garden Tour to benefit the Cohasset Historical Society

...the Gulf River is one of a vanishing number of relatively pristine and unspoiled tidal estuaries along the East Coast.

At the changing of the tides, saltwater rushes through white water rapids under the Mill Bridge separating Cohasset Harbor and the Gulf River, one of the most beautiful tidal rivers in New England. Fed by tributaries extending many miles inland and washed by the daily ebb and flow of the sea, the Gulf River is one of a vanishing number of relatively pristine and unspoiled tidal estuaries along the East Coast.

Cohasset Historical Society will host Gardens of the Gulf: Shall We Gather at the River?, a garden tour from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., on Wednesday, June 23, that will feature private gardens of eight homes with views of the river as it meanders from Cohasset into Scituate. Each tour participant will receive a booklet with information about the gardens, including landscape design and flower planting details. A picnic lunch is included and will be available at the Lightkeeper's Residence on Government Island, which overlooks Cohasset Harbor.

Tickets, with the picnic lunch included, are $35 for Cohasset Historical Society members and $40 for non-members, and can be purchased at the following Cohasset locations: Pratt Building, 106 Main St.; Fleming's, 24 Elm St.; Darilynn's, 64 South Main St.; and Buttonwoods Books and Toys, Shaw's Plaza Route 3A. Tickets should be purchased by Friday, June 18. For more information, call the Society at 781-383-1434 and ask for Kathy O'Malley.

Symbol of freedom

Oh! say, does that star-spangled banner yet wave,
O'er the land of the free and the home of the brave.
~Francis Scott Key, The Star-Spangled Banner

On a personal note, we will never forget a Swiss couple we knew when we lived in Minnesota. Fritz was an "Americanophile" – he loved everything American and it was his dream to come to the United States. He and Ursula bought a home on our street. Homeownership in Switzerland, Fritz explained, was beyond the reach of the majority of citizens there.

Fritz said one of his first impressions of the U.S. was seeing an ENORMOUS American flag flying above a Perkins Restaurant on his way from the airport just after their arrival. He was overcome with emotion at the sight, knowing for sure he had arrived in America.

We often think of that conversation and the impression of someone seeing our country with its flags flying for the first time.

We wonder what Fritz would have thought if that huge flag had been dirty, torn and tattered. He certainly would not have had the same feeling of awe.

Flag Day was June 14 – so it is apropos to talk about the American flag, a symbol of freedom here and around the world and the condition of the flags we so proudly fly.

There is something about the Stars and Stripes – it is absolutely one of the most beautiful national flags in the world. That may be part of the reason – in addition to our patriotism – that we love to fly our flag.

A good example of flags flying is the McDonald's on Route 53 in Norwell. There is a large flag or two on the roof and then about a dozen smaller U.S. flags, quite a sight.

However, in our travels around Cohasset and the South Shore we have been distressed to see so many tattered American flags being flown.

Winter was harsh and the early spring was wet, so we suspect that we can attribute the excessive number of worn flags to the weather. While we fully understand that towns, businesses, schools and homes that fly the flag are trying to do the right thing, a torn flag is not a fitting symbol of our country. The flag should be a source of pride and inspiration.

The U.S. flag code states the flag represents a living country and is itself considered a living thing.

· The Second Continental Congress passed the Flag Resolution of 1777 on June 14, 1777 making the Betsy Ross flag official (13 stars and 13 stripes).

· The composition by John Philip Sousa titled "The Stars and Stripes Forever" is the national march.

· When displayed either horizontally or vertically against a wall or window, the union should be uppermost and to the flag's own right, that is, to the observer's left.

· The first 50-star American flag was raised in 1960 over Fort McHenry in Baltimore, site of Francis Scott Key's writing of "The Star Spangled Banner," our national anthem.

· As of July 4, 2007, the 50-star flag became America's longest serving flag.

Nicknames for our flag include: Old Glory, the Stars and Stripes and the Star Spangled Banner.

But no matter what it is called – the American flag stands for freedom and hope for mankind.

American statesman and historian, Henry Cabot Lodge of Boston, said of our flag: "It is the flag just as much of the man who was naturalized yesterday as of the men whose people have been here many generations."

Arnold Schwarzenegger, Hollywood star and governor of California, said: "As long as I live, I will never forget that day… when I raised my hand and took the oath of citizenship. Do you know how proud I was? I was so proud that I walked around with an American flag around my shoulders all day long."

Cohasset, with its proud history, is an American a town as any. We hope that those who choose to fly the Stars and Stripes around town will give our flag the deep respect it deserves.

We need to remember to check the condition of our flags and replace them when necessary. Let's endeavor to have all U.S. flags being flown in Cohasset looking fresh and new for the Fourth of July.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Heartfelt appreciation for community support

TO THE EDITOR:

Dear friends, family and community members,

I sometimes wondered why my husband and I never moved from Cohasset. Having both grown up here, we knew we wanted a safe and loving place to raise our children. Recently, my husband suffered an illness and I understand now why we never left. The support, prayers and generosity from friends, family, co-workers, and my children's teachers were amazing.

I would like to thank all of you for the endless meals that were delivered every day after long and stressful days at the hospital and continued even when he came home. They were greatly appreciated. We can never thank you enough for your generosity and kindness. It has been truly overwhelming and heartfelt. It has shown us what a loving and caring community we live in when people pull together and are so supportive. We also realize how lucky we are to have such wonderful families and friends who were there when we needed them. My husband is feeling better and getting stronger each day and hopefully will be swinging a hammer soon. We believe all of your prayers and well wishes worked because he was very lucky with his outcome.

Again we thank you from the bottom of our hearts for everything you have done.

With sincere gratitude and appreciation,

Prom Night festivities, a group effort

TO THE EDITOR:

The Cohasset High School Class of 2010 enjoyed a memorable Prom Night this year along with the traditional Red Carpet Pre-Prom festivities and Post-Prom after party.

These Cohasset traditions continue to ensure that all prom-goers make the most of this memorable occasion and that everyone stays safe.

The 2010 Post Prom Committee could not have accomplished such a wonderful Red Carpet event and Post Prom party without the support and generosity of the Cohasset Community.

We would like to thank all of our contributors: JJ's, Fiori's Gulf, Rosano-Davis, Buttonwood Books, Pilgrim Bank, Good Sport, South Shore Community Center, POST Physical Therapy, Cohasset Collision, the Law Offices of James Canavan, Thomas Dental Association, Coastal Nissan, Lehr & Barnes, Henderson & Henderson, Balance Studio, Cohasset Rotary Club, Nail Essentials, Cohasset PSO, Nobles Camera Shop, Dependable Cleaners, Goodwin Graphics and the Village Greenery, who loaned all the beautiful plants that decorated the Red Carpet.

We also would not have had such a successful event without support from the Cohasset Board of Selectmen, Town Manager Bill Griffin and Jennifer Oram of the Selectman's office, the Rev. Gary Ritts, who loaned the PA system, Annjean Moody, a member of the Cohasset Garden Club, Dr. Gill and Denise Leahy of CHS, Chief DeLuca and the Cohasset Police Department.

Finally, it takes many, many volunteers and we would especially like to thank Dan Leahy and Pat Martin for photography, Matt Blaze, Eric MacCarthy and Ryan Crough for help with heavy lifting, Rich Ofsthun for emceeing the Red Carpet, Mike and Elsa Libby for donating an ice cream bar to the Post-Prom Party and Susan Franklin, who also generously donated Del's Lemonade and freshly-popped popcorn to the Post-Prom Party. A very special thank you goes to Nancy Kucinski for donating all the beautiful picture frames as gifts to the Class of 2010. And last, but not least, a great big thank-you to all of our chaperones and volunteers without whom, this event would have not happened.

COMMENTARY

KIMBERLY CARVETTE

There are many, many letters concerning tax dollars and sewage waste, quality of water, school committee, de-leveling and the like...but what about our early education system building futures for our youngest students?

There is a gnarly little six-letter word that starts with an "A" and ends in "m." It affects 1/90 children in the U.S. yet in our community it is hidden and unspoken amongst most in town. The "problem" is not going away; in fact it is growing and afflicting the families of even the most prestigious Hollywood stars like Jenny McCarthy and John Travolta.

Many young families with incoming preschoolers report that they too are treated unfairly and are intimidated at initial IEP meetings by the teachers and administration.

What if there was an affected preschooler in town who was strongly urged to "relocate" to another district while making nice progress here in town for "better" services. Is it because the child has A_ _ _ _ m or is it because the district wants her IEP plan 'hidden', so as not to set a precedent of offering a full program, consistent with laws in Massachusetts for this disability. What if I were to tell you the child was a twin and at 4 years old is being firmly pushed out by administration to be separated from her school, teachers, classmates, therapists and of course her twin with a disability unforgiving of change?

Perhaps, this child is unimportant to you since most of you don't have to directly deal with this problem. However, the statistics sug-

Finally the Paving Starts — We've spoken about the delays in getting the paving started for this summer. As we mentioned the delay was due to the need for the SSRSC (the South Shore bidding consortium) to rebid the cold planing. (Cold planing is the process where by a small amount of the old asphalt is ground off of the road to begin to reshape the old road in preparation for paving.) Several weeks ago the successful bidder was finally determined. So, we could now go forward with our paving plans.

In a way, we were quite lucky in how the bids turned out, since the successful cold planing bidder was also the successful bidder for paving. This makes the coordination of preparation and paving much easier. In past years there were two separate vendors involved. In fact, one vendor was even from out of state. Now, we have one stop shopping, which makes scheduling a breeze. One vendor will now cold plane, sweep the road, adjust the structures to the right level and pave.

So Where Are We For Beach Street? — As we mentioned cold planing is the first step. As of Wednesday of this past week, T L Edwards arrived at Beach Street to do the cold planing. After cold planing has been completed, the DPW will examine the road to see if any spots in the road "broke through." (Break through occurs when the road surface is in such bad shape that the cold planer just lifts all of the old crumbling asphalt exposing bare dirt.) If the break through is severe we will have another local contractor dig out and patch those spots. This is the only part of the process not being done by T L Edwards. But, since it is being done locally it is easy to control and schedule. By Thursday the patching should have been completed. And by today, Friday, the leveling course should be completed be completed by around noon. The leveling course is a thin layer of asphalt that will be laid in areas where the road is too low, and needs to be raised to properly level the topcoat of asphalt. With this out of the way by midday Friday, the South Shore Art Center can breathe a sigh of relief that their weekend should be free from construction.

Next week, all of the structures that are in the road (manholes, water, sewer, and gas valves) will be raised so they are at the correct height. This will make them flush with the surface of the final paving. Lastly, the final paving is laid. With cooperative weather, all should be completed by the Cohasset Triathlon on June 27.

We have included a few photos to show you the highly specialized preparation equipment at work. One photo shows the cold planer that easily grinds the top two inches, or so, from the old asphalt. This is a continuous process in that a large dump truck precedes the cold planer as it continuously collects the grindings. One truck fills up and another takes its place, and onward we go. It is important to note that cold planing is a critical process to give the road a proper shape so that rain water flows off of the road to where it is supposed to go.

Another picture is of a small highly maneuverable small cold planer. If you look carefully at the photo you will be able to see that it has three wheels so it can literally turn on a dime. This machine is used to grind the old asphalt in tight places such as around manholes and storm drains.

Border Street Traffic Change on Wednesday, June 23 — This coming Wednesday, June 23rd, the Cohasset Historical Society is sponsoring an event called "Gardens of the Gulf." This is a very special viewing that has been arranged for guests to peruse some of the special gardens located at private homes along Border Street from the Lightkeepers to just over the Scituate line. The reason we are mentioning this in our column is because there will be a change in traffic flow on Border Street during this event, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Border Street will be made one way from the Scituate and there will be No Parking on Border Street from just before Parker Avenue to the Scituate line. The reason for the one-way traffic is to assist in protecting the pedestrians walking along Border Street between gardens. Cars will be able to park at Atlantica, the Lightkeepers and in a field at 147 Border St. in Scituate. Along this route minibuses will circulate continuously to carry visitors between garden sites. A picnic luncheon will be provided at the Lightkeepers. For additional information about tickets for this event please call the Cohasset Historical Society at 781-383-1434.

HEALTH NOTES

Head lice, a pesky problem

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

While attempting to paint an eclectic picture of Cohasset's health scene using a broad brush, unfortunately, sometimes, a particular issue must be addressed immediately. Recently, children at the Deer Hill and Osgood schools have been reported to have contracted head lice (Pediculosis). A similar outbreak was reported in January 2009, a not uncommon occurrence. The recommended advice provided by state and federal agencies is given below.

While posing no health threat, head lice are a nuisance and apt to spread to other children if precautions are not taken. Lice, wingless insects that survive by feeding on human blood, cannot jump or fly and don't burrow under the skin. They live mainly on the scalp, at the base of the neck and in eyebrows and eyelashes laying up to six eggs per day, attaching their eggs, called nits, to strands of hair close to the scalp.

Generally spread through direct, person-to-person contact, children ages 3 through 12 are more often infested than adults, but anyone is vulnerable. Simply washing with soap and water has little effect. An infested person will continue to spread head lice to other people until receiving a course of treatment that kills all of the head lice and their eggs. Fortunately, pets cannot spread head lice.

Symptoms: Sometimes itching is caused by reaction to saliva and feces, but many children have no symptoms. The best way to confirm infestation is to find a living adult louse; difficult to accomplish because they are fast and hide well. Identification is usually made by detecting nits, tiny, grey, oval specks, commonly found behind the ears and near the hairline at the base of the neck. Nits found within one quarter of an inch from the scalp usually signal that treatment is necessary.

Remedy: Head lice are a ubiquitous problem in almost all communities. Schoolchildren should be checked regularly and treated when lice are found. Parents should learn to recognize head lice and, as an extra precaution, teach their children not to share hats and scarves or personal hair care items, such as brushes, combs and hair ties.

Treatment: Consists of shampooing the hair with a medicated shampoo or cream rinse containing one of the following chemicals: pyrethrin, permethrin, lindane or malathion. The chemicals used to kill the head lice and their nits are similar to those used for mosquito protection; may be toxic and should be used with medical advice. Follow label instructions carefully. Removal of all nits after treatment is not necessary to prevent further spread, although some schools and daycare centers may have "no-nits" policies. Finally, check the hair daily for 10 days for more nits or newly hatched head lice. If found, additional treatment may be necessary.

While posing no health threat, head lice are a nuisance and apt to spread to other children if precautions are not taken.

Head lice do not survive for long periods of time off the scalp and they do not tolerate common vegetable oils. Control may be accomplished using such substances, but elimination requires a mild pesticide like those mentioned above.

Follow up: Wash headgear, pillow cases and towels in hot water and dry in a dryer on the hot cycle. Un-washable headgear should be sealed in a plastic bag for two weeks to kill any lice. Combs and brushes can be washed with lice-killing shampoos or soaked in hot (130°F) water for 5 minutes. Thoroughly vacuum rugs, upholstered furniture and mattresses.

Do not use insecticide sprays to treat infested people.

Re-infection occurs with some regularity and can be frustrating for parents, teachers and children. YouTube has a rather long video called "Head Lice to Dead Lice," which youngsters may find fun. It describes a rather involved curing cycle. Probably better, contact your doctor, Mary Goodwin, the Public Health Nurse or the Board of Health for more information. It's not a stigma to contact head lice. Most of us have had them at one time or another. It's far better to discuss an infestation openly so that those who have had little or no exposure to the condition can learn from those who possess the experience.

Here Comes The Sun – Answers to burning questions about overexposure. Practicing sun safety can prevent skin cancer and other health problems. Following these tips will help everyone enjoy the summer months. Limit sun exposure when the sun's rays are the strongest — 10a.m. to 4 p.m. If your shadow is shorter than you are, the sun is at its most intense. Refer to the daily UV index when planning outdoor events. The index indicates the risk of overexposure to skin-damaging ultraviolet radiation. Seek shade whenever possible. Trees block about 60 percent of the sun's rays. Wear a wide-brimmed hat, sunglasses and long-sleeved, tightly woven clothing. Sunglasses should block out 100 percent of UVA and UVB radiation. Use sunscreens that block UVA and UVB rays and have a Sun Protective Factor (SPF) of at least of at least 15. Sunscreens should be used every day, even when hazy and cloudy outside. Apply sunscreen liberally and evenly 15 minutes before going out and reapply frequently, especially after swimming.

SPECIAL TOWN MEETING

Water rates are on the rise

"What has happened is egregious and indefensible," Selectmen chair Karen Quigley said. "We can only hope with (reforms) we can begin to restore your confidence."

There was some anger expressed at the elected officials at the state of financial affairs in the water department. But, in the end, the voice vote on the water rate increase was a clear majority.

With the new rates in place many homeowners, especially low users, will see as much as a 50 percent increase on their water bills. A fixed quarterly rate, re-named a capital recovery charge, will be $187 (an increase of $75 over what is currently charged for a fixed rate) for most residential customers. In addition, usage charges will increase 10 percent.

The new capital recovery charge fixed rate is retroactive to June 1, and will be charged on the September water bill. The first bill with all the increases, including the water usage charge, will be in December.

The discussion on the water rate article was complicated when Leland Jenkins brought forward an amendment. Jenkins is a selectman, but said he brought the amendment forward as a private citizen. He proposed setting a higher fixed rate — $115 over what is currently charged – and keeping the usage rate the same.

With over 60 percent of the water department's budget going to debt service, Jenkins said all users have benefited equally from the capital improvements made to the water system. The cost should then be equally distributed over the water users.

"We cannot pay our debt on variable revenue," Jenkins said, adding this fixed rate would go down as debt service was retired.

The amendment did not meet with much support from the Town Meeting floor.

Stuart Ivimey of Sankey Road proposed to his fellow voters a third option, but it was not in the form of an amendment.

"We can just say no," Ivimey said. "This has got to bring outrage to all of us and we need to send a message to all the groups entrusted with our money that this must end. There must be another solution other than reaching into our pockets for more money."

Ivimey called for a "polite revolution."

"The water department is not going out of business if we say no tonight," Ivimey said, adding voters needed to know what the problems are and what professional solutions will be. His comments got a round of applause from the audience.

Water Planning Group (and Capital Budget Committee) member Peter Decaprio refuted Ivimey's sentiments that there was another way. Decaprio said all the options, including "crazy lunatic ideas," were explored during the last few months.

"We all came in with the same outrage," Decaprio said, but came to understand there are no other options other than what was being proposed. "Listen to the facts, it's amazing what happens."

After about an hour discussion, town meeting voted down Jenkins' amendment.

The vote on the main motion, which included the water rate increase as originally proposed, was a clear majority, but there were a fair number of 'nays.'

Change in management

A lack of oversight for the water department was one of the ways the Water Planning Group found led the department to its current financial state.

"Only cursory figures were provided to Town Meeting," Paul Carlson, selectman and chair of the Water Planning Group, said.

To provide a legal means to mandate more oversight Town Meeting approved language to enable joint oversight between the elected water commission and the town manager. Voters approved the change unanimously.

Beyond the town manager's involvement, the Board of Selectmen, the Advisory Committee and the Capital Budget Committee will ask for more information from the department as well: monthly budget reports, quarterly financial updates, and more detailed budgets.

Former selectman Ralph Dormitzer said the reforms and oversight needed to go even further. He proposed, after a complete audit is done on the water department's inner workings and finances, that professional management be instituted for the water department and, possibly, the sewer department.

"What we have now is an extraordinary misuse of the funds," Dormitzer said.

Town Manager Bill Griffin was asked if he could handle the additional oversight of the water department. Griffin said he would be much more involved with the finances and would be put on notice more quickly if something were awry.

"I apologize I failed to do that in the past," Griffin said. He echoed Dormitzer's sentiments and said there is no one in the water department working day to day in the interest of the town.

"There are three volunteer water commissioners and a private company operating the water department," Griffin said.

Current year deficit

Before Special Town Meeting the Water Department was closing in on the end of the fiscal year with a $760,000 deficit.

With two advance connection payments from developers of the Cook Estate ($100,000) and Avalon Bay apartment complex ($335,000), the town expects to use those funds to close the gap on that deficit by June 30. But, $335,000 remained to be found in order to close out the year with a balanced budget.

A transfer from the stabilization fund of $335,000 to the water enterprise fund was requested of town meeting. The transfer would deplete the stabilization fund of about half of its monies. Selectman and water planning group chairman Paul Carlson said the stabilization fund would be re-paid when a second Avalon settlement payment (due when the first occupancy permit is issued from the town).

Some citizens questioned banking, once again, on the coming of the 200-unit Avalon project. The Water Department previously forecasted the Avalon monies, which, in part, led to current financial crisis.

Peter Brown of Atlantic Avenue asked how, if the transfer was not made, the town's bond rating would be affected.

Finance Director Michael Buckley said that if the water department's deficit is not resolved by the next time the town's bond rating is reviewed, it would have a negative impact.

Buckley also said if the deficit was not covered in this fiscal year (ending June 30) it would be carried over to fiscal 2011 – and throw off the entire fiscal schedule.

"Any time the town carries a deficit forward, there are consequences from the (Department of Revenue), on our bond rating," Buckley said.

Several residents asked if there were surpluses in other town department budgets that might cover some, or all, of the projected deficit.

Town Manager Bill Griffin said it was too late in the fiscal year to come up with any funds that would come close to covering the water budget gap.

Adrienne MacCarthy of Doane Street asked if the consequences were so severe that town meeting had to make a decision right now.

"Personally I'd prefer an independent audit before we do anything," MacCarthy said.

Water planning group and advisory committee member Ed Lappen tried to bring the discussion to a close.

"The fact is we owe the money and there is not other short-term solution," Lappen said.

The transfer of $335,000 from the stabilization fund to the water department was approved in a two-thirds majority vote.

A $300,000 question

Although the water rate increase will cover the majority of the water department's projected budget shortfall for fiscal 2011, it does not cover all of it. Roughly $300,000 of the $1.1 million deficit remains.

The Water Planning Group initially recommended moving the hydrant maintenance and fire protection cost, estimated at $300,000, to the town operating budget. Water ratepayers assumed the hydrant and fire protection cost in a vote at the 2007 Annual Town Meeting.

For a time, the $300,000 was to be added to the town budget through a Proposition 2-1/2 override. Then, last week, the water planning group instead recommended taking the $300,000 out of the already approved fiscal 2011 town operating budget. It was unclear how the $300,000 would be made up in the already tight budget.

"We have not had time to look at where it may impact the town budget," Advisory Committee chair Sam Wakeman said.

Recognizing that, town officials changed their recommendation and advised town meeting to indefinitely postpone the article.

More will be known in November when town officials could bring back additional recommendations to Special Town Meeting, Wakeman said.

No one spoke against the indefinite postponement and it was approved with a majority vote.

Capital projects get thumbs up

Projects will add $288K to water debt load

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Three capital projects totaling $288,000 were approved at the Special Town Meeting.

What made these capital requests a little different from previous water department capital projects is that wrapped up in their approval is a way to pay for the associated debt. The capital recovery charge will increase $3.40 as of June 1, 2011 to pay for this debt.

The most controversial capital request was the smallest request of all — $50,000 to implement a phosphate program for the water plant. The chemical, which is used in other local water departments, is designed to combat two major water quality issues: reducing discolored water and lead that leaches from pipes in customer's homes.

Water Commission chair Chris Seebeck said the phosphate programs was a requirement of the Department of Environmental Protection (DEP).

Several had questions about the safety of adding phosphate to the water and if it could have an impact on the harbor.

On of the consequences of the phosphate program is it will result in the Ellms Meadow well field, recently restored by the water department, being taken offline. Improvements to the well field pumping station to add phosphate there as well would cost close to $150,000 in capital cost. Currently, the Ellms Meadow pumping station is not set up to inject any chemicals into the water.

Ralph Dormitzer of Atlantic Avenue did not see the benefit, "why take some of the sweetest water we have in order to inject it with something that could be harmful to our harbor."

Martha Gjesteby of Old Pasture Road said she believed other chemicals could be added to the water in order to deal with the lead and manganese issues.

Water Department superintendent Jared Hill said other chemical additive options would have other, more harmful consequences, such as increasing the amount of disinfection by-products.

Seebeck said adding the phosphate was a requirement of the DEP, "this is a clear option for us and we need to go forward."

He added the request was not a referendum on the phosphate program.

"This article is about how we are going to pay for it, rather than whether we do it," Seebeck said. If the capital request was not approved Seebeck said the project would be paid for out of the operating budget.

Peggy Chapman, chair of the Board of Health, asked about the other capital improvements that have been talked about recently, particularly the plant retrofit that is necessary to get the water quality up to more stringent standards coming down the line in 2013.

"We're looking at what we need to do to meet the standards and do further analysis," Seebeck said.

The $50,000 phosphate program capital request was approved with the two-thirds majority vote. There were only a handful of nays.

A new scheme for the sludge lagoons, which hold the waste products of the treatment process, is requested for $100,000. Town officials said the new sludge process would pay for itself in a year's time. Earlier in the meeting the allocation was called a "no-brainer" because of the fast return on investment and the savings to the operating budget. The $100,000 request was approved.

A $138,000 request to pay for overruns on the Little Harbor project (and the entire $21 million distribution system update) was also approved with a two-thirds majority vote.

TOWN MEETING BRIEFS

Union contracts approved

Two union contracts were ratified by Town Meeting on Monday night in the first article discussed. The town and the two police unions (one for the lieutenants and the other for sergeants and patrolmen) reached a three-year agreement. It is consistent with the contract settlement reached with the fire department approved at the spring Annual Town Meeting, which includes a one percent increase for the next fiscal year.

Town Manager Bill Griffin said one of the major accomplishments of the new contract is creating flexibility in the minimum manning. Previously, minimum manning was always three officers across all shifts. During the overnight hours (midnight to 8a.m.) three officers is often not necessary. By allowing the police chief discretion on when to have three officers on the overnight shift, Griffin said there could be thousands in savings. Last year, the third officer cost the town $90,000.

"We won't save all of that, but we will see some savings," Griffin told town meeting.

Town Meeting unanimously adopted the union contracts.

Jacob's Meadow easements

Last year, Town Meeting approved a $450,000 appropriation to replace the Jacob's Meadow culvert. Subsequently, the state came through with a grant to cover the cost of the project. However, several easements – temporary and permanent – are necessary to move forward with the project construction. On Monday night, Town Meeting granted the Board of Selectmen authorization to acquire the necessary easement. There is no cost associated.

Town Meeting unanimously approved the article. Town Manager Bill Griffin said once the easements are in place the project could go forward later this summer.

Zoning amendment

A zoning bylaw change was made to get it in line with the town's two decades old practice.

Zoning Board of Appeals chairman Woody Chittick said the minor change would allow building projects on non-conforming lots that conformed with the bylaws to move forward with a visit to the Building Inspector.

"This is a matter of simple housekeeping," Chittick said. "(With the change) if you have a non-conforming structure and you want to build something that conforms the only stop you have to make is to the building inspector's office."

A portion of the zoning bylaws that deals with non-conforming uses, structures and lots stipulates any extension or alteration on a non-conforming property may be done if the extension complies with the area regulations (zoning bylaws 8.7.1). One of the regulations deals with lot size. Roughly three-quarters of the town's residences are built on "undersized lots" according to the zoning regulations deeming them "non-conforming."

The Advisory Committee voted unanimously not to recommend approval of the article citing the "timing" of the change and lack of urgency.

"A special town meeting called to deal with a water crisis is not the appropriate time or place to change zoning bylaws," Tom Reardon, advisory committee member, said.

Town Meeting passed the amendment with a required two-thirds majority vote.

Utility management going forward

COMMENTARY

TOM CALLAHAN

Town Meeting has spoken. It has made it choice between equally horrible financial alternatives. Kudos to the Water Planning Group for at least forthrightly tackling a tough issue in such a short time frame. There were no good solutions, but I appreciate the long-missing transparency regarding the Water Department. Now, step 2 to its job — to address the fundamental management problems that got us into this mess.

It is funny how old ideas can resurface. When I was a Selectman earlier in this decade, I had openly discussed with my colleagues reform to the structure of our public works boards. At the end of my tenure, there was even a Mass. Municipal Assoc. (unbiased third party) report done that actually recommended that my advocated changes be made in the name of more efficient government (and not just in the public works arena). Seeing the WPG's similar initial recommendations, I thought it time to revive some ideas.

First, in response to the present fiscal crisis, which to me is the direct result of a) the structural problems I would propose to change and either b) the conscious & deliberate lack of transparency and full disclosure or c) an inability to convey facts clearly, together with d) a lack of oversight for which neither the present nor previous Town Manager can be blamed.

Selectwoman Quigley's comments are right on the money. In private industry, heads would roll and they should here. One head has, and one more needs to go immediately. Having been in town government as I was, the responsibility clearly lies with these and other individuals. As to new Commissioner Seebeck's belief that we need experience on the Commission, respectfully, no we don't. The Water Commission and Sewer Commission have both experienced and survived substantial turnover over the last decade or so after previous crises. A clean slate is needed more than anything else, and if you have ever sat through an equivocating, convoluted presentation from this department at Town Meeting or a Selectmen's meeting as I have, you would agree. To be consistent with my recent commentary regarding the School Superintendent, one should separate the persons holding a job from the flaws in the institutional structure, but here, as in the schools, circumstances now require a change in people as well as a change in structure.

Second, I also understand that there will be an audit, and frankly it needs to reach back 10-15 years, reviewing not only the flawed budgetary process but also discretionary expenditures like attorney fees, engineering fees, glossy, equivocal or self-serving mailings and ridiculous excesses like putting the stuff in small bottles for some anniversary, as was done.

What prompted me years ago to advocate for restructuring was mostly sewer related — the then-latest permutation of "the sewer follies" (for you Cohasset historians) regarding the North Cohasset project and the moving target of its cost, and the then-Sewer Commissioners' lawsuit challenging the procurement authority of the then-new Town Manager Act. But of course the Water Dept. has contributed to this history as well — the 1994 water shortage in a town with an excess of water resulting from 100 years of benign neglect of the delivery system and the less than stellar Town Meeting explanations then, an earlier comical Town Meeting presentation I recall in the '80s about problems with the flat roof at the plant, and the current crisis resulting from poor projections and planning. I often ask readers not to forget the historical context of various issues we face, and I ask you to not forget past problems when assessing the current Water Dept. issues.

Another part of my problem years ago and that I still think is THE root cause of today's problem is that the Water & Sewer Commissions are a) elected and b) provide essentially non-professional management of utilities. With all due respect to the thankless tasks of our volunteers, and I was one for 20 years, I think the cause of all problems in both utility departments, then and now, trace to amateurs at the helm. Further, the election of and politicizing of these departments have led to policy conflicts or at least policy choices the whole town may not have wanted to take, as well as the actual, if not potential, exercise of personal agendas (such as thwarting universal sewering in this town in the '80s, engaging in an unwinnable 20-year litigation with the state resulting in a more expensive, piecemeal and incomplete sewering of the town, the initial reason Avalon was appealed, and perhaps other policy and expenditure decisions in both departments).

My proposal then and now would be to first merge the Water and Sewer Departments within the DPW. The DPW head, and above him, the Town Manager, would be the supervisor of all public works functions and operations, including budget and the retention of outside professionals. For both the water & sewer plants, we would continue to contract out plant operations if it makes best economic & operational sense to do so, and most certainly should have our town professionals negotiate these contracts. Or we could hire municipal employees to perform the tasks, if cheaper to do so. (Our neighbor Hull has both a contracted operator and a town employee overseer at its sewer plant, as an example). Such a consolidation would extend and continue the professionalization of management of the Town begun with passage of the Town Manager's Act and the appointment rather than election of the treasurer/collector and DPW head, i.e. the more technical and what should be non-political positions in our government. It would also bring better harmonization and consistency of town policies, and avoid conflict and stagnation where policy made by the chief executive authority is thwarted.

The Water & Sewer Commissions at minimum should be eliminated as separately elected boards, but indeed I would abolish them altogether. We thus take away the argument, heard too many times, that "we're independently elected, so you can't touch us" or "we don't have to do what you say" or, as the current crisis illustrates "we don't come under your oversight", and avoid both jurisdictionally-driven lack of oversight and ridiculous turf wars. Many have thought of these two boards as policy-making boards. Another favorite argument has been "separation of powers". Give me a break! What policy? What powers? These boards are not the chief executives of the town and we are not talking about high constitutional concepts or the differences between executive, legislative and judicial functions for which the separation of powers principle was created. We are talking about simply running utilities, and running utilities is not and should not be a policy position or an issue of constitutional dimensions. It is a mere function of government, a task. The efficiency of government operations is enhanced by consolidation and eliminations of "fiefdoms", the bane of all local government everywhere. A substantial problem, though, has been having those of the policy mindset on these and other boards, blocking any whisper of reform.

Again, let's not forget town history: the ineffectiveness of a volunteer-run water department for decades led to the water distribution crisis and the expensive 10-yr.+ capital plan we are now undergoing and apparently can no longer pay for, notwithstanding that we have more water than we can use. Historical Sewer Commission policy to defeat sewers led to a 20-year litigation with the state we were destined to lose and the inevitable and now more costly solution of piecemeal sewering. We should have zoned by zoning, not sewering policy. Granted, kudos are deserved by those recent members of these boards who effectively addressed the problems (and clearly communicated the problems and solutions, again something the most recent Water Commission seems to have had difficulty doing). But just because we have had good boards at times does not cure the inherent institutional problem of having these utilities run by part-time, amateur, and sometimes, to the contrary, absolutely incapable boards for whom utilities are not their life's work, in contrast to full-time professional management.

Both departments (within the DPW) could remain self-supporting via their enterprise funds. But as is now being put into place, those funds need to come within the management responsibility of our professional financial officials, and those funds should see the light of day at every Town Meeting, like the rest of the budget.

As for the boards themselves, I had formerly proposed to consolidate the boards with other public works-related boards (Sidewalks Committee, Public Ways Committee, Recycling Committee and perhaps Design Review) into a single, seven-member appointed Public Works Committee (PWC), with appointments done by the Selectmen as the chief executive authority of the town. The thought was that a new PWC could still act as an initial citizen reviewing and advisory authority for all public works projects, so as to allow public input. I had thought of even preserving in this committee the Water and Sewer Commission's rate-setting authority. However, the current financial crisis leads me to conclude that rate-setting should also be professionally managed and arrived at, with whatever professionals we hire to run the utilities, the finance director and the town manager jointly making the determinations. A PWC, if necessary at all, then would merely serve as a vehicle for citizen-input before Town Meeting, or an advisory role or as a step in the approval process (along with Selectmen and Advisory Comm.) before Town Meeting's vote on any new rates.

While all management models need to be thoroughly studied, I would tend to advise against full privatization. The profit motive has a way of increasing costs. One should ask Hingham and Hull (or our own North Cohasset) if they are happy with their privatized water service.

Going forward, I do not forget the important issue of water quality, for as we all know, our biggest collective perceptual problem is having to pay for what looks like and is perceived as a very poor product, despite all the money spent on system improvements over the last few years. It was interesting to hear the comment at the forum on June 8 about the lousy product we start with owing simply to the nature of Lily Pond and the Reservoir and what goes into them. It is expensive for us to clean them to drinking water quality no matter what, and we have an exceptionally small ratepayer base to pay for it. This leads me, of course, to again question the continued validity of Massachusetts municipalities going it alone, be it in terms of schools, public safety or utilities, and to look at regionalization, the goal being to maintain water availability while trying to improve quality and spread costs further. Everything must be on the table, and if I understand the WPG's statements, they will be.

Wherever we go, start close to home by looking at ideas like the above and/or the MMA recommendation of 2004 – i.e., get rid of the organizational and management structures of both utilities that have led us to numerous past and current problems ASAP, and will no doubt lead to future problems due to the fallibility of amateur management. Not only heads, but also institutions, must now roll.

Finally three asides that arise from Town Meeting: 1) On a personal level, I, too, apologize to the town for allowing the cursory information provided by these departments historically to get past me to Town Meeting, and I apologize for not fighting for change harder (although the deck was stacked against me). 2) The reason the Sewer Dept. was put under the Town Manager's oversight but not the Water Dept. was not an oversight. I recall it was a conscious decision pushed by the latter's then-substantial lobby within town government. 3) The cheap shot directed at former Town Manager Haddad Monday night about the hydrant fees was not warranted. I was on the BOS when this happened. Truth is, in dealing with another budget crisis (i.e., our yearly struggle to avoid or minimize overrides), all BOS members at the time and Haddad questioned the then-$250K hydrant fee. The Water Comm. could neither explain it, tell us how it was arrived at, nor tell us what it was paying for. Surprise, surprise! It was a figure pulled out of thin air. After at least two budget cycles of fighting about this, it was moved out of the town budget to help us make ends meet, and was agreed to by the Water Comm. It was not a unilateral act. I understand today's $300K hydrant fee is still a mystery – it comes from Aquarion only because that's what they convinced the state to accept as a cost, but no one really knows what the true cost of hydrant service and maintenance is anymore today than in the earlier part of this decade.

Finnerty to run for state Representative

Editor's note: The candidates provide their own press releases for Candidates' Corner.

Tim Finnerty has announced his candidacy for State Representative in Plymouth Third District (Cohasset, Hingham, Hull and Scituate). A successful campaign will set the stage for a challenge to incumbent five-term Representative Garrett Bradley. Finnerty believes now is the time to elect a new Representative who will vote for the best interests of our towns, as well as favor lower taxes and a smaller, more ethical government.

"The Commonwealth is on the wrong track symbolized by higher taxes and wasteful government spending," he says. Finnerty also notes ethical concerns specifying the indictments of the last three House Speakers and former Senator Diane Wilkerson's recent guilty plea to federal corruption charges.

The Legislative hopeful expresses gratitude toward Bradley for his years of service to the Commonwealth. However, Finnerty has many reservations about Bradley's voting record, which, he says, cut funding for our towns multiple times. These cuts at state level caused our towns to reduce local staffing and raise property taxes to cover the shortfall. While our towns lost funding and workers, the Commonwealth hired 4,000 new employees and rewarded politically powerful state agencies with budget increases. The most recent example of this is the Probation Department. This scandal just exposed in a Boston Globe report was the focus of the Mass Supreme Judicial Court last month, which appointed an independent counsel to investigate possible corruption within.

Tim Finnerty believes now is the time to elect a new Representative who will vote for the best interests of the district.

Another concern Finnerty has heard from voters is that six terms for any Representative is too long. New legislators can and should bring fresh ideas and new insight to Beacon Hill, keeping voters' interests paramount.

Finnerty and his wife of 19 years, Sheila, live in Hingham with their children George, Hugh and Caroline. He holds a BA in Economics from the University of Vermont and a Juris Doctorate from St. John's University School of Law. His professional career began as a bond trader at an investment firm where he did business with many of Boston's best known financial institutions. Recently, his focus is investment in high tech start-up companies based in Massachusetts.

"Beacon Hill is on the wrong track but we can change that," he says. As he campaigns in Cohasset and the third precinct of Scituate, Finnerty looks forward to working with voters toward a more ethical and financially responsible state government.

Adam Hardej of Hingham has discovered that Pilates is not just for women. Here works his obliques on the Pilates Tower at the Balance Studio in Cohasset.

Pilates is good for men, too

By Linda Fechter
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

"Most men know about running, lifting weights and personal trainers. Pilates is not on their radar screen, but I'm elated at the progress I've made."
— Dr. Loren Rees

A few months ago, the Balance Studio in Cohasset previewed a film called, "Enlighten Up," a documentary that asked the question, "Can yoga potentially transform the life of someone with no previous yoga experience or knowledge?" The challenge was specifically presented to a man. He was immersed in yoga and taken to the far reaches of the yoga universe by the show's producer. In the end the answer was unclear as to whether yoga had truly made a difference to his everyday life...and clearly it's a personal experience, yoga does and can transform. But what if that same "journey" had been a man immersing himself in Pilates? The feedback of three Cohasset men, ranging in age from 38 to67 years old, indicates that the outcome may have been markedly different.

Dr. Loren Rees, Adam Hardej and Jack McNamara began taking Pilates at the Balance Studio for different reasons. They are not alone. Pilates grew from 1.7 million practitioners in 2000 to 10.6 million in 2006. It continues to grow at a steady pace and though women fill most Pilates classes, Pilates itself was designed by a man.

Joseph Pilates, a nurse during World War I, developed a system of exercises, based on aerobics, in order to improve the rehabilitation of the many returning veterans. He recommended a few precise movements emphasizing control and form to aid injured soldiers in regaining their health by strengthening, stretching, and stabilizing key muscles. He designed exercise apparatus for bedridden patients by attaching springs to hospital beds. This system formed the foundation for his unique style of exercise and his Pilates Studio, which he opened in New York City in 1926. Pilates believed that mental and physical health is inter related. He said of exercise "it's not the mind OR body ...but mind AND body."

Dr. Loren Rees is a Chiropractor who began biweekly Pilates training about a year ago. Like so many, he said he knew of the Pilates method of training but didn't have a sense for what it truly is all about. Dr. Rees believes there might be a stigma associated with it the belief that it's for women only.

"Most men know about running, lifting weights and personal trainers. Pilates is not on their radar screen, but I'm elated at the progress I've made," says Rees, who has an old spinal fracture that gives him discomfort from time to time. "I've been through all the modalities. I've had ultrasounds and massage therapy; however since I began Pilates I have not had any pain. As far as I can tell it really has changed my physical wellbeing. I'm much happier and I'm suggesting Pilates to all my patients," he says.

Balance Studio instructor Shannon Lynch believes that Pilates has benefits that most people don't even realize. She points out that there are many people who are fit in ways that make them look good physically, but don't necessarily make them feel good.

Running, cycling and tennis can sometimes create sport specific tight muscles, an imbalance within the musculature of the body, and lack of flexibility, perhaps even pain in certain areas.

"Pilates can help make that pain go away," says Lynch, "Pilates has a way of getting into particular muscle groups that are so deep and/or neglected they normally go unnoticed. This method helps balance and strengthen proper body structure."

Adam Hardej has been practicing Pilates for more than a year. His wife, Beth, has been practicing with Balance Studio owner and Pilates instructor, Kellie Lynch, for years.

"I'm a 48 year old guy, 6 foot 5...I played sports in college and now I play lacrosse and basketball, but that had been hampered by hip pain. I went to a chiropractor and he said I needed to strengthen the muscles around the hip," says Hardej. "I was supposed to have an MRI, because I wasn't making any progress with my pain, but I just kept on doing Pilates. I was skeptical at first," he admits, "but last year I had a great lacrosse season and my basketball is better too. "

As with most men, Hardej associated Pilates as a "female" activity. "It's strenuous but it really tones. With Pilates I feel like I'm getting a good bang for my buck. I go twice a week for one hour and I've seen enormous results. I feel more muscular. My wife and I are not big runners, so this is what we do. I even brought my 15-year-old son to class with me," says Hardej.

Jack McNamara has been practicing Pilates at the Balance Studio for about six months. He had been working with a trainer in North Carolina where he goes each winter and wanted to continue a fitness regimen.

"My trainer said 'do Pilates' so I did and it has absolutely improved my strength, posture and flexibility, which, considering my back issues, surprised even me," says McNamara, who had previously undergone back fusion surgery and a laminectomy, (removal of bone spurs on the impinging disks). "A lot of guys, myself included, think of Pilates as 'women only.' I had no idea what to expect. In my first class with Shannon she introduced me to sets of muscles that I didn't know I had."

McNamara, a former Marine, believed Pilates would not be as challenging as working out with a personal trainer. He felt he was already in great shape when he started, but after several sessions realized he wasn't even close to his full potential. What would he say to other men who are curious about it?

McNamara says, "Try it. You'll be surprised. I would hardly call it female. From a fitness standpoint this is the best thing I've done."

Early intervention, fairness urged gest that 1 out of 90 children and families are now afflicted. Chances are that your kids will come into contact with one of 'these' children in school and the better educated and regulated these children are early on, the better experience for all involved.

What if "this" affects your third or fourth child and you live in a district that is well known to be extremely difficult to work with concerning special needs of any kind? Can WE as a small, family-friendly community speak out against the school administration (many of whom do NOT live in our district but whom are paid by our tax dollars) and insist that our kids, regardless of need, are treated the same as "typical" kids and their parents — treated fairly as respectable parents and taxpayers. Many young families with incoming preschoolers report that they too are treated unfairly and are intimidated at initial IEP meetings by the teachers and administration. When will it end? How many of our tax dollars are going to paying high salaries to these individuals?

The bottom line is there are a growing group of concerned families (and not concerned about whether their kids get into Ivy League), who hope that their children make it to the level of functioning to attend college at all — which inevitably affects everyone's home values as reported by statistics like "percentage of graduates that go on to college." Early intervention, especially at the preschool level, has proven data that supports for a higher level of programming at age 3 and 4 for better outcomes, therefore saving huge dollars (hundreds of thousands of ed. dollars) by supporting "these" kids early, long, long before first grade.

If you are reading this and pay taxes, please write to your superintendent and school committee insisting they employ respectful and ethical administrators, principals, and educators. Allowing the upper administration to dictate and intimidate families and the teachers/therapists paid by our tax dollars needs to be stopped. There is a history, now repeating itself, of disrespect and mitigation of issues affecting our young children with disabilities souring our kids' most formative years of education here that is completely unnecessary. There must be a change of scene here to become a district and community supportive and capable of making respectful, responsible, ethical decisions for all young children including those with disabilities.

Arthur Lehr's name goes up in lights

Honored for lifetime of dedication

The ceremony was the ideal way to celebrate the years of hard work and dedication Arthur Lehr has put into Troop 28 and the community.

By Kathryn Hillman
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

On Saturday, June 12, the refurbished amphitheater at Camp Squanto, the Old Colony Council Boy Scout Camp in Plymouth, was dedicated to long-time Cohasset resident Arthur Lehr, Jr. The dedication ceremony drew dozens of Cohasset residents, friends and family of Mr. Lehr and members of Troop 28, the Boy Scout troop that Mr. Lehr has been associated with as a scout, Scoutmaster and Troop Committee member for over 77 years. The dedication was held in the amphitheater, which is a natural bowl with log seating and a campfire area and stage.

The dedication ceremony was lead by Philip Faulkner, the President of the Cohasset Rotary Club, which is the organization, which provides the charter for Troop 28. Faulkner, an Eagle Scout himself, recognized Mr. Lehr for his service to both the Boy Scouts and the Cohasset community generally.

Speakers at the dedication included Chris Oddliefson, the co-chair of the Camp Squanto capital campaign and another Eagle Scout. Mr. Oddliefson cited Mr. Lehr's leadership and service with Troop 28, in which both of his sons have earned Eagle rank, and service to scouting generally. He also described the Camp Squanto capital campaign, which provided the funds for a major refurbishment of the Camp as a whole including new buildings, improved water and drainage facilities as well as the amphitheater. He cited the Boy Scouts' proud history of "low impact" camping, preserving the environment to the best of their abilities, and their "high impact" youth programs, building character and leaders for tomorrow.

Camp Squanto is a nucleus for such activities. The capital campaign is a campaign to raise money, which will go towards renovations around Camp Squanto. The campaign's funds have been put to good use, funding several important projects, including: a new health lodge, water system, parking lot, septic system, Silver Beaver Welcome Lodge, renovated front tower, restored parade grounds, rebuilt sports field, Energy Merit Badge Building, a new camp truck, and the Totem pole at the entrance. The most ambitious project is yet to come, renovating the complex, which serves as conference, training, and dining center. However, due in a large part to the generosity of the Cohasset residents, the project is progressing well, and some of the funds that were raised went to the amphitheatre dedicated to Arthur Lehr.

Mr. Oddliefson was followed by Merle Brown, another long-term supporter of Troop 28 and the current Troop Committee chairman. Mr. Brown traced the history of Cohasset's Troop 28, which was first charted in 1916 as Troop 1. Later, when the district was reorganized, Hingham kept the number 1 owing to its slight seniority, and Cohasset became Troop 28. Troop 28's first scoutmaster was the Reverend Fred Stanley of the Second Congregational Church of Cohasset, who remained scoutmaster until the mid 1930s. Rev. Stanley was Scoutmaster when Arthur Lehr began his career as a scout.

Mr. Lehr received his Eagle Scout Award, the highest award in the Boy Scouts, in 1937. He attended the first Scout Jamboree in Washington, D.C. in 1937, and was part of a group reviewed by President Roosevelt. At age 18, Mr. Lehr became Assistant Scoutmaster and effectively ran the Troop until he entered the service in 1941. When he returned, Mr. Lehr became Scoutmaster of Troop 28 and served for the next 25 years.

Mr. Lehr stepped down as Scoutmaster in order to organize the Town's Explorer Scout Post 28. Explorer Scouts was a program for older teenage boys with an emphasis on a single activity. Explorer Post 28, an emergency response post, worked closely with the fire department, in first aid and emergency preparedness. As Mr. Brown explained, the aid provided by the Post proved exceedingly valuable, to the extent where the police officers on the scene of an accident would wait for Post 28 to arrive to handle any medical emergencies. Explorer Post 28 provided a great deal of assistance to the town for the next 25 years, under the direction of Mr. Lehr.

Mr. Lehr is one of the 77 scouts who achieved the rank of Eagle Scout in Troop 28. He is part of several Cohasset family groups to earn Eagle Rank, but has the distinction of being a part of the only three-generation set of Eagle Scouts, along with hiss son, Philip Lehr, and grandson, Robert Lehr. Mr. Lehr is also one of the seven adults associated with Troop 28 to receive the Silver Beaver award, the highest award for an adult in Scouting which can be awarded by at the Council level.

Following remarks by Troop 28's Senior Patrol Leader, Christian Quebec about the meaning of Camp Squanto to the scouts in the Troop, and by Scoutmaster Richard Quebec, Mr. Lehr came forward to accept the thanks of those in attendance. In his brief remarks, he confirmed that the dedication had come as a complete surprise and that he had not suspected that he was there for a dedication, much less a dedication to himself. In his impromptu remarks, he told those present how he put his efforts into creating a lasting environment for future scouts, speaking directly to the nearly 30 Troop 28 Scouts who were present for the occasion.

Phil Lehr addressed those present, thanking them on behalf of the entire Lehr family. He concluded with a reading of The Bridge Builder, a particularly apt poem about effort spent on behalf of future travelers.

Escorted by his granddaughters, Tori and Samantha Lehr, Arthur Lehr and those assembled gathered at the entrance to the amphitheater for the unveiling of a sign over the gateway and a plaque next to the entrance. The gateway was built by Mr. Lehr's son and grandson from cedars taken from Troop 28's campsite adjacent to Wheelwright Park. Phil Lehr reported the most difficult part of the construction was extracting the trees under the watchful eye of his father.

After the unveiling, everyone was invited to attend a luncheon served in the dining hall. The ceremony was the ideal way to celebrate the years of hard work and dedication Arthur Lehr has put into Troop 28 and the community.

Library trust elects new president at annual meeting

The Cohasset Library Trust, Inc. (CLT) elected Sarah Pease as its new president at its Annual Meeting in May. She takes over the Library Trust's leadership from Jane Goedecke who was its first President. The Library Trust was established in 2007 to increase the library's endowment and to manage its endowment in an optimum way. The Annual Meeting affirmed that the Library Trust's first three years have been very productive, but that it must do more in the future to compensate for increasing library costs and decreasing tax support.

At inception, CLT recognized the need to introduce itself to Cohasset, and to invite Cohasset's support of CLT. To this end,

- an explanatory brochure was created in 2007 and is on the Library's website at www.cohassetlibrary.org ;
- an Endowment Wall was installed in the library entrance. It lists all gifts to the Library's endowment of $5,000 or more since 1901. The names of the donors of four new gifts have recently been added;
- other publicity about CLT has included stories about donors of early gifts to the endowment, published from time to time in the Cohasset Mariner;
- in late 2009, the Library Trust celebrated a major gift from the South Shore Music Circus by organizing a lecture "Evening with Tracy Kidder," held at the High School Auditorium. The sell-out event increased awareness of CLT, and its success added more than $11,000 to the endowment; and finally
- in the last three years, $155,000 has been added to the endowment from nine gifts of $5,000 or more!

The Annual Meeting affirmed that the Library Trust's first three years have been very productive, but that it must do more in the future to compensate for increasing library costs and decreasing tax support.

The Board of the Library Trust relies on the advice of its Investment Advisory Committee in managing the endowment. Over the last three years this Committee has recommended portfolio changes that have produced results matching or outperforming appropriate financial benchmarks. Bob Riley, a respected investment manager, chairs this committee, which currently includes John Flanagan, Nina Hughes, Todd Marshman, Richard Towle and Barbara Wipf, all successful investment professionals. Each year, the CLT supports the library's book budget with about 4 percent of the value of the total endowment. In each of the last three years, this has been about $36,000. A larger endowment would offer greater annual support.

Current members of the Board of Directors of the Library Trust are Sarah Pease, President, Sheila Evans, Clerk, Linda Litchfield, Treasurer, and as Directors, Susan Wakeman Davis, Douglas Eymer, Bernadette Faulkner, John Flanagan, Jane Goedecke, Rodney Hobson, Genevra Higginson, Todd Marshman, Sarah Morton, John P. Reardon, Jr., Robert E. Riley, Deborah Shadd, and Patience Towle.

Give a home to someone in need

Stop by the ShelterBox international 'tent' at Festival

By Linda Fechter
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

The South Shore Arts Festival is a sea of white tents under which you'll find merchants and artisans selling beautiful items. This year, among the sea of white, look for the khaki colored tent — that to the average person might seem like just a camping tent, but to those in need is a temporary home. The tent that will be pitched on the front lawn of the Unitarian Universalist Parish House (home of the lobster roll sales) and is just one very important element of a Shelter Box (www.shelterbox.org).

"When you're inside the tent and actually see the tools and supplies that come in the box, you realize how valuable it is to someone who has lost everything else in their life."
— Rich Fitzpatrick, ShelterBox coordinator

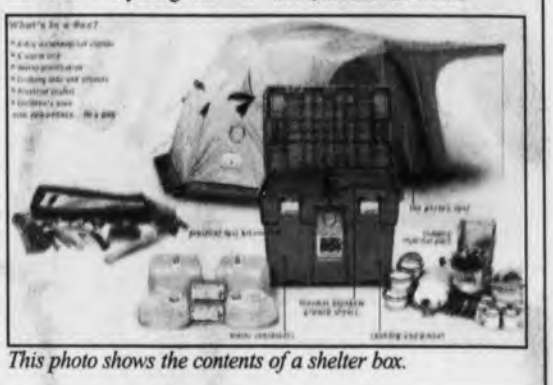
ShelterBox is an international disaster relief charity, which provides humanitarian aid worldwide in the form of shelter, warmth and dignity for people displaced by natural and other disasters. It is an independent charity that relies on public donations to carry out its work. It was founded by Rotarian Tom Henderson, a former Royal Navy search and rescue diver. ShelterBox is now the largest Rotary Club project in the world.

Members of First Parish Unitarian Universalist on Cohasset Common, in conjunction with Cohasset Rotary Club, will be raising money to buy one Shelter Box to be sent to where it is needed most. The cost of a box is $1,000 and funds will be collected throughout the weekend in the form of checks and cash donations. Donations of all amounts are welcome and appreciated!

Each Shelter Box contains a 10-person tent, blankets, water purification and cooking equipment, basic tools, a stove and other essentials. All boxes are numbered so they can be tracked by donors.

"Tell me and I'll forget; show me and I may remember; involve me and I'll understand."

"I think this quote applies especially well to the ShelterBox project," says Rich Fitzpatrick, ShelterBox coordinator and soon to be President of Cohasset Rotary Club. "When you're inside the tent and actually see the tools and supplies that come in the box, you realize how valuable it is to someone who has lost everything else in their life. It's really a 'survival' box."



ShelterBox was founded in 2000 and has responded to over 80 disasters in more than 50 countries including Haiti, the Indian Ocean Tsunami, Hurricane Katrina and Cyclone Nargis in Myanmar.

The Circle Ministry of First Parish is undertaking this fundraiser in conjunction with Cohasset Rotary Club. The goal is to raise $1,000 during festival weekend. Once purchased, the ShelterBox will be sent to whatever country is in need at the time. Each box can actually be tracked by donors to see where it winds up.

"It's easy to see why it's such an effective program," says Fitzpatrick. "Everyone I've spoken to who has set foot inside the tent has been inspired."

Volunteers from First Parish include: Bill Baird, Randy Bodner, Steve Brown, Linda Fechter, John Havorka, Kirk Jackisch, Eric Kluz, John Kornet, Jane Kyricos, Ned Tebbetts, and Pete Parker. Brochures will be on hand and donations will be gratefully accepted.

Everyone is encouraged to stop by the front lawn of the Parish house, diagonally directly across the street from the Common. The goal is to raise funds for at least one Shelter Box over the three days of festival activities. Come learn more and make a contribution to a charity that provides effective, and almost immediate shelter to those in need, around the world.

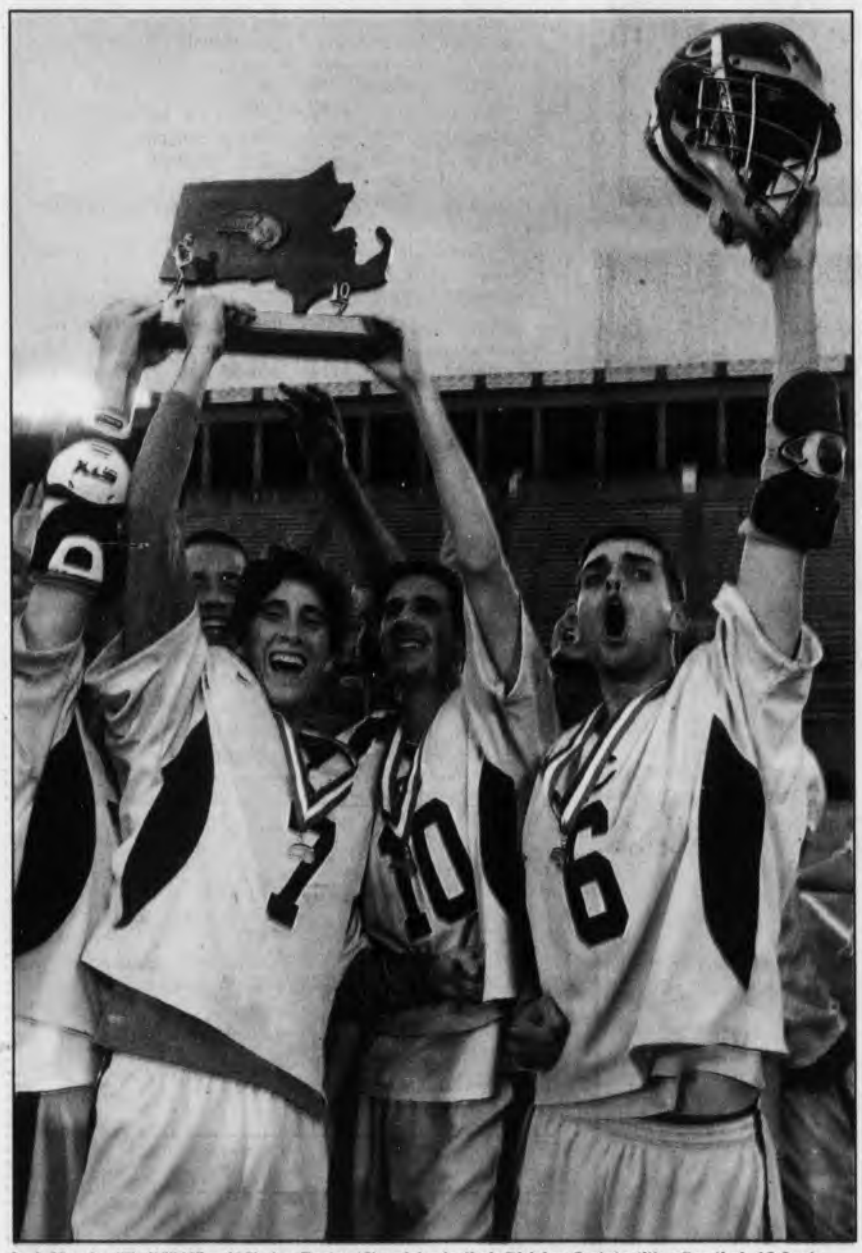
One day – two titles for Skippers

By William Wassersug

Like a famous Skipper on a three-hour tour, this year's Cohasset baseball team was on what could have been a three-hour tour that lasted a lot longer.



The Cohasset Skippers baseball team turned their tour into a beauty that ended with a 15-3 Div. 4 State Championship victory over Matignon at Lynn's Fraser Field on Wednesday night.

Even though the Cohasset High School boys lacrosse had seen and beat Norwell earlier this season, it didn't mean that a victory in Wednesday's state title game was a given.

"It definitely helped to know them from before because winning earlier in the season helped us get confidence going into the game," Cohasset sophomore defender Jake Kissick said. "But they're a great team, so we had to prepare like normal."

The Skippers led 7-3 at halftime, but a late Norwell surge made the game a lot closer. It came down to defense in the end, and a couple key stops by Kissick and the Cohasset defense pressured Norwell to the point that the Clippers couldn't get enough quality looks on net in the final minute. Cohasset managed to hang on to win the Division 3 state title, beating Norwell, 10-8.

"Since I've been here, we've been (to the state finals) five times, and we won it three," Cohasset Head Coach Stew Curran said. "So we're pretty pumped. The kids do the hard work. I always say good kids overcome mediocre coaching, and I live by that. I've you've got the horses, you're going to get it done."

The title was the first in three years for Cohasset.

Last season they were knocked out in the semifinals by Dover Sherborn, who they beat in the semifinals this year, and two years ago the fell to Scituate in the State Championship game. The Sailors

Doane has his days

TEE TIME

PAUL HARBER

Lyman Doane 3rd is easily recognizable at River Bend GC in West Bridgewater because he is the one with the ear-to-ear smile. The long-time head professional has had a colorful career that dates back to the 1950s when first took up the game.

He was a good stick. Doane won more than his share of junior tournaments in and around New England and in 1968 he qualified for the US Junior Championship, which was held at The Country Club in Brookline.

It was one of the best US Juniors ever with a field of rising young players who went on to illustrious careers, winning tournaments, fame and fortune.

Doane made it through the two days of stroke play to advance to the match play phase of the championship and in one of his matches; he beat a young Texan named Ben Crenshaw. You might have heard of him.

But Doane's dream ended when he faced Virginian Bobby Wadkins.

"I knew I was done when we played the first two holes," recollected Doane. "I hit driver, 4-wood to about 20 feet from the flag. Wadkins hit a drive and then hit a 7-iron over the green and out of bounds into the street behind the course. I think it was the only hole I won."

On the second hole, an uphill par-3, Wadkins hit a short-iron stiff. Doane scuffed a 4-iron, missed the green, lost the hole and Wadkins took over from there.

Doane did earn a scholarship to play golf at the University of Georgia. "My father thought it was a big mistake," said Done. "He thought I should have gone down to Florida and worked with a pro he knew."

Nevertheless, tournament golf was not in his future or his make-up said the jovial Doane.

"Back then, they didn't have leaderboards," he said. "I remember playing in the Florida Open and I was in or near the lead and our group starting drawing a gallery. I fell apart. I knew I didn't have the nerves for it. But this is what I wanted to do all along, I'm a club pro and I'm happy doing hat."

There is a huge difference between golf professional and professional golfer.

Berry Sweet!

The Berry Memorial at Furnace Brook Golf Course in Quincy is one of the better tournaments in the region and this year's finish was one of the best in the 38 years of the championship.

Danny Sullivan and Dan Najarian of Marshfield Country Club fashioned a first-round 65, giving them a one-stroke lead over Derek Nickerson and Ryan Riley.

On the second and final day, Najarian opened with a birdie on the first and eighth holes. Sullivan added a birdie on No. 12 to get to 8-under. But the next hole, No. 13, a bogey dropped them to 7-under.

"That's when we heard that Jim Feeney and Mitch McCormack were in with an 8-under," said Najarian, who birdied the 16th hole to get back to 8-under.

But it took Sullivan's par-saving six-footer on the final hole to force the playoff.

Sullivan and Najarian prevailed, winning on the second playoff hole.

On the second playoff hole, Sullivan ended all the tension by sinking a 24-foot birdie putt to secure the victory.

It's been a good spring for the twosome. Sullivan and Najarian to finish fourth in the prestigious Cronin Memorial tournament at the Country Club of Halifax in April.

No. 6 for Foberg

Donald Foberg of Indian Pond in Kingston earned medalist honors with a 4-under 67 at Cape Cod Country Club in East Falmouth June 8. Guy Lansing of Halifax, and Chris Tarallo and Bob Mancini of Thorny Lea also qualified with ease. It was a different matter for David Pomarico of South Shore Country Club and Nick Clarke of Bay Pointe. They were involved in a five-man playoff for two spots. It was a good week for Pomarico, who scored a hole-in-one last weekend at in Member-Guest at Presidents Golf Course in Quincy. No bad for a 60-something who underwent serious heart surgery a year ago. This is Foberg's fifth State Amateur. "It was a pretty normal day," said Foberg, who was paired with David Pierce of Halifax and Joe Keller of Oyster Harbors Club. "I hit it down the middle and was able to get it on the green. I didn't miss a lot of greens today, so I had a lot of putts for birdie."

One his more recent top finishers was a tie for third at last year's State Senior Amateur at Salem Country Club.

"The consistency was the key for me today," said Foberg, who moved to Pembroke and joined Indian Pond this year after being a member at the Country Club of Greenfield for 25 seasons. "I just hit smart shots to the right side of the hole and gave myself lots of opportunity." Foberg is hoping that this type of solid play and his calm demeanor will make this sixth trip to the Amateur the best . . . "I have never made match play, but Myopia Hunt Club may be good for me to break through." Teenager Christopher Melvin of Walpole Country Club earned medalist honors at the State Amateur qualifier at Sharon Country Club June 8. The Bowling Green University-bound Melvin fashioned a 1-under 71. Also qualifying were Chris Congdon of Foxborough Country Club, John Mazzocca of Walpole and Bob Monahan of South Shore Country Club . . . Jack Weeks of Wollaston, Jim Rose of Segregansett, Colin Andrade of LeBaron Hills earned a spot in the championship at Segregansett Country Club in Taunton June 9.

KNOW THE PRO

John Tuffin

Pinehills Golf Club

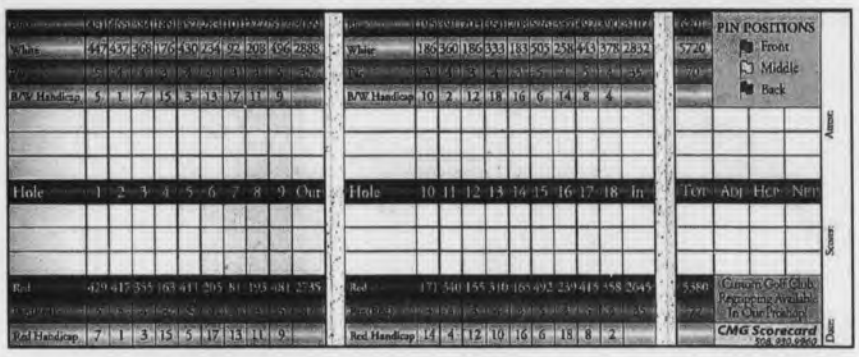
John Tuffin as been the director of golf at The Pinehills since the first tee shot was hit.

What's in your bag?
Titleist 909 Driver, Titleist 909 Fairway, Titleist, Z-Blend irons, Titleist Vokey Wedges, Scotty Cameron putter

Describe your best round (where, when, highlights):
67 at TPC Heron Bay in Coral Springs, Florida. It was during a mini-tour event there and with the course playing over 7,200 yards and the wind blowing it was about as good as I could play. Six birdies were offset by a lone bogey.

If you could be a dream foursome, who would be in it?
My brother Mike, Arnold Palmer and Bill Clinton

Describe your introduction to golf (who, where, how old you where, and how the game attracted you):
My father took me for lessons with PGA professional Joe Catalano at Concord Country Club when I was 11 years old. I have been hooked ever since. I love the challenge of trying to improve which as everyone knows is an endless quest.



Besides your current club, what is your favorite golf course (and why?):
Kiawah Island Ocean Course. The incredible beauty and seclusion of the course coupled with the extreme challenge it poses makes it my favorite course.

What's the best golf tip you ever received?
I was fortunate enough to work as an assistant pro at a course 1964 US Open winner Ken Venturi belonged to in Florida. He explained to me how most good players swings do not get out of whack rather their fundamentals do. Whether it be your grip, alignment or ball position constantly checking on the fundamentals is the surest way to play at a consistently high level.

What makes your home golf course so special?
There are many things that make both the Jones and Nicklaus courses at Pinehills special. They are both true championship tests from the back tees while remaining very playable for all skill levels from three other sets of tees. Our Superintendent, Joe Felicetti, always keeps them in phenomenal condition. In addition we pride ourselves on providing the best service possible.

Bay Pointe keeps it fresh

By Paul Harber
PHARBER@CNC.COM

Bay Pointe Country Club is a course that continues to evolve.

When it was first opened in the 1950s, it was called Wareham Country Club.

Course of the Week

Designed by the dean of New England architects, Geoffrey Cornish, it was a stern test of golf and most noteworthy was the approach shot on the first hole, which offered a quaint background of Onset Bay and it had its own Amen Corner, a three-hole trifecta that was as difficult as you could find.

But everything changes.

First, the name; it was sold and renamed Bay Pointe Country Club.

Second, some of the holes were reconfigured.

A new island hole, a thrill-making par-3, much like the 17th at TPC Sawgrass, home of the Players' Championship, was added.

With the addition of some housing, a segment of its notorious Amen Corner, three bearish holes, has been soften some. But they all can bite.

Still later, they reversed the nines.

And now, they are in the process of making a new fourth hole to increase the course from a par-70 to a par 71.

But one of the best moves Bay Pointe made was hiring Russ Bragdon as its course superintendent.

"He's really turned this place around. He's special," said Tom Tobey, the head professional at Bay Pointe. Bragdon, who can play a mean game, was the superintendent for many years at Hyannis Golf Club before coming aboard.

Tobey has been through most of the changes, first as a raw newcomer to the game, later as a club champion and presently as its head professional.

All of the changes make sense and for a better round of golf.

With the front and back nine switched, it gives you what may be the most difficult pair of starting holes you will ever play.

The former 10th, now the first hole, is an uphill par-5 that plays to just less than 500 yards.

Long hitters might be licking their chops, figuring they can reach the green in two blows.

But it's not that easy. You don't get much roll because it seems as if you are playing up a ski slope.

And even if you launch your drive into the next county and think you can reach the green in two, you have a difficult second shot because the green is tucked to the left and if you miss the putting surface, you probably won't find your golf ball.

It's only the No. 5 stroke hole on the card, but it is deceptive.

After that, you face the No. 1 stroke hole.

It's a beauty.

You can't see the green from the tee.

You might not be able to see the foursome ahead of you in the fairway.

It's a dramatic downhill drive, but be warned: everything kicks to the right.

You'll know when to hit your tee shot because the group ahead of you must ring a bell to let you know they are out of harm's way.

If you are fortunate enough to blast it down to the end of the fairway, you have a difficult up hill approach shot to a green that is protected by a gaping bunker on the left side.

Just reaching this green in two shots is noteworthy. If you do, whatever happens, don't ruin it with a three-putt.

The third hole, the old 12th hole, has been mellowed.

No longer is it a yardage beast. But that doesn't mean it is easy.

If anything, it is a one of the prettiest tee shots at Bay Pointe. This par-4 plays to about 360 yards and downhill. The fairway has been widened.

Orioles win Cohasset A.L. title

The atmosphere was electric before the start of the American League Championship Game last Friday between Brian Murphy's Angels and Bill Marsden's Orioles.

On a beautiful summer night under the lights at Barnes Field over a hundred fans watched a terrific game that featured spectacular defense, lots of strikeouts, one mammoth blast, an unassisted triple play, and great sportsmanship by both teams and coaches. It was Little League at its best.

The Orioles jumped to a quick 1-0 lead in the second when Sean McElhinney raced home from first on a two out single by Declan Havlicek off Angel starter Charlie Devin.

Trevor Glavin started on the mound for the Orioles and cruised through the first two innings striking out 4. He ran into trouble in the 3rd after walking Nick Stavis and hitting Charlie Devin with two outs. Mity Hill saved at least one run by making a great backhand diving grab off a Matt Lund line drive to end the inning on Glavin's 70th and final pitch.

Devin pitched valiantly striking out 5 in 4 innings but needed some big help in the bottom of the 3rd after hitting Liam Geyer and walking Chris Furtado and Jack Tolman. With the bases loaded and no outs Sean McElhinney hit a rocket between 3rd and short that looked to break open the game for the Orioles. Angel's shortstop Judge Murphy ranged to his right and snared the line drive for out one, tagged Furtado for out two and stepped on 3rd to erase Geyer for out three to complete an amazing unassisted triple play in the blink of an eye. Coaches Marsden and Fechter of the Orioles were stunned.

Mity Hill came in the top of the 4th and stopped the Angels momentum by striking out Jack Mahoney and getting ground ball outs from Scott Whelan and Finn Doherty.

The Orioles scored again in the 4th when Jack Fechter singled in Havlicek from third after Declan pulverized a long triple to the left field fence.

Hill struck out the side in the top of the 5th and the Orioles could feel it.

Matt Lund struck out 5 in three innings for the Angels but got nicked for two runs in the 5th when Andrew McSheffrey and Danny Driscoll scored on a two run double by Jack Tolman.

Things got dicey for the Orioles in the top of the sixth when Hill beaned Joe Fox on an 0-2 count and Judge Murphy singled to leadoff the inning. Charlie Devin grounded to second and moved the runners along for out one. Matt Lund popped up to first for out two. Jack Mahoney came to the plate looking to do some damage but went down swinging as Hill notched his 5th strikeout and sealed the victory for the Orioles 4-0.

The Angels made it to the finals by beating the Yankees is the first round and knocking off the previously undefeated Indians 10-8 in the 2nd round. Jack Mahoney sparked the victory late in the game with a diving catch in the outfield and completing a double play by throwing out an Indian off 2nd base.

The Angel roster included Judge Murphy, Charlie Devin, Matt Lund, Jack Mahoney, Scott Whelan, Andy Karalekas, Finn Doherty, Michael, Brash, Sam Albino, Nick Stavis, and Joe Fox.

The Orioles made it to the Finals by beating the Rays in the 1st round and the Mariners in the 2nd round. Thomas Marsden collected two hits in the victory over the Mariners.

The Orioles roster included Jack Tolman, Sean McElhinney, Trevor Glavin, Declan Havlicek, Jack Fechter, Mity Hill, Thomas Marsden, Andrew McSheffrey, Patrick Hagearty, Danny Driscoll, Liam Geyer, and Chris Furtado.

Great job and congratulations are deserved by both teams and coaches.

Cohasset's Mity Hill

One day – two titles for Skippers

FROM CHAMPS, PAGE 17

Cohasset did it with pitching, hitting and patience at the plate to score 11 runs in a decisive first inning surge that made things a lot easier for Cohasset.

"I told the kids that we are the Skippers," Cohasset coach Pete Anafasiw said. "And we're sailing in uncharted waters without a map. The kids latched onto that and it helped them stay loose and stay focused."

Of course 11 first inning runs help to stay loose, although not always focused.

"Our dream situation was to start off like that," Afanasiw said. "It gives you a little extra confidence and lets you be a little looser in the field."

With Cohasset's pitching sizzling, it was even that much easier.

Jeff Cavanaro tossed five innings, fanning 10 while giving up two runs, and Brendan Doonan, possible the toughest athlete in the area, struck out four in two innings to close it out.

Doonan had been seriously injured during the hockey season and at one point had been told he wouldn't be able to play until the end of June. He has metal plates in his arm.

Instead he struck out 15 against Mashpee and pitched a complete game in Cohasset's 6-2 Div. 4 South Sectional championship win over Harwich on Saturday at Campanelli Stadium in Brockton.

"I can't grasp it all right now," Doonan said after the Sectional Championship. "It's awesome. I'm in the moment right now."

Awesome was a word used frequently with this group.

"Awesome is absolutely the correct word," Afanasiw said with a big smile and medal around his neck on Wednesday after the game. "I can't think of a better word. It describes the way the season progressed, the way our chemistry developed. In some ways it was like the '04 Red Sox. The chemistry grows and you fuel it. A belief builds from the ground up. This post season has been awesome."

Doonan had said similar things about chemistry on Saturday.

"We've always had a good team," he said. "But the chemistry has gone through the roof."

Afanasiw also coaches the Cohasset football team, which made the playoffs last season, but were knocked out before the Super Bowl.

He has several players on the baseball team and more playing lacrosse on the team that won the Div. 3 East State Title a few minutes before the baseball game.

"This is a nice piece of redemption for them," he said. "Half the team played football for me."

There was also the factor that last year the baseball team didn't even make the tournament.

"Last year we lost five one-run games and a few two run games," Afanasiw said. "The difference this year was that we stopped making mistakes on what should be easy plays. Last year's we'd make a mistake and didn't rebound. This year we didn't make those mistakes, and when we did make a mistake we rebounded quickly."

For the Skippers, the turning point may have been when they beat defending champ Abington on the road.

"After we beat Abington on the road, we only lost one more game to east Bridgewater," Afanasiw said. "I think when we won that game this group really started believing."

When the championship game was finished, there were smiles and joy, but no big pileup on the mound or crazy celebrations.

"We had such a big lead," said senior captain Andy McKenna as he cradled the State Championship trophy. "We knew it was coming. This was my last game. It was a great way to go out. I couldn't ask for more. We did our work and had a lot of fun along the way. I would rather finish with a game like this than a close one. It was less stressful. We haven't had a first inning like this all year."

McKenna enjoyed his turn with the trophy.

"Not many people get to do this," he said. "It's great. It still hasn't sunk in. I'm sure it will."

If you want to see a detailed account of the baseball or lacrosse game, visit www.wickedlocal.com/cohasset and check out the replay of our live blog.

The Skippers, in the last few games, struck early.

Wednesday Shane Haggerty and Anders Goetz walked to start things off and Cavanaro loaded the bases with a one-out single. Jamie faber followed with a bases-clearing triple as the Skippers had five straight hits to make it 6-0 before Chris Murphy flew out.

Haggerty added a single and Doonan doubled to make it 8-0.

The Skippers added three more before the inning ended.

Cohasset was quiet until the seventh when Haggerty had an RBI single and Cavanaro brought home two more with a double that hugged the first base line for a 15-2 lead.

In the Harwich win, Cohasset jumped to a 2-0 lead in the first and added two more in the second inning for a 4-0 advantage.

In the fourth and fifth, Cohasset scored single runs for a 6-0 lead before Harwich scored twice in the seventh to cut the lead to 6-2.

Back on the top

moved up to Div. 2 this year and didn't make the playoffs.

Cohasset beat them in the regular season this year.

It took the Skippers (20-2) nearly six minutes to get on the scoreboard. Will Wise scored the first of his two goals with 6:27 left in the first on a great cutback move. He came in cradling the ball to his right and then sharply turned direction with both his body and stick hand and found the back of the net with a quick wrister right in front of Norwell goalie Pat Johnston. Two minutes later, Thomas Flibbote made it a 2-0 game, and after a Norwell goal brought the Clippers back to within one, Flibotte opened the second quarter with a goal that put Cohasset up, 3-1.

Norwell tied the game on goals from Ryan Tierney and Brian Moore before Cohasset scored the final four goals of the first half and first goal of the third quarter to take an 8-3 lead. But the pesky Clippers never went away, outscoring Cohasset, 5-2 in the final 19 minutes of the game. Moore was a force for Norwell, scoring two goals in the second half, including one with 14.4 seconds left in regulation. But Cohasset's defense prevented the Clippers from getting any closer. Kissick played a tight man-to-man defense on Moore and twice prevented the 6-foot, 6-inch Norwell senior from getting into the lane.

"There were some good players in there. That big kid (Moore). He's good, and he's tough to keep control of, but the key was we talked as a defense and communication was huge, clearing, basically stopping them," Kissick said. "We were ready to play, essentially."

Kissick wouldn't take all the credit. He passed it along to his teammates.

"Sam Leahy, Dana (Valentine), Derek Froio, the whole defense. I can't really put a finger on who," he said. "Our defense, we're all so close. We've been playing together since we were little kids."

Flibbote led Cohasset with three goals, Wise and Ian Quinlan added two apiece, and Dean Driscoll, Kyle Livingstone, and Jack Carrier netted one apiece. In goal, Jack Murphy came up with some key stops, especially in the fourth quarter, to preserve the win. It was Flibbote, Curran said, who made a huge impact, not just in scoring, but his overall play.

"Thomas is just a bear, and the things he was doing today towards the end of the game made differences," Curran said. "We do this thing called dummy dodge. You're taking the ball to the net, but you're trying to go to the net. You're trying to just draw, draw, draw, and then you cycle the ball back the other way, and Thomas was doing it perfectly, and we got a goal or two out of that."

Curran also pointed to his team's work ethic and its dedication in the offseason as key factors this season.

"Offseason they trained, played ball together as a team," Curran said. "They go to summer leagues together. So, they're clicking, and you can see it behind the net with Driscoll and Wise. They know what the heck is going on. It's not a science. It's just good common lacrosse sense. If you shoot the ball well, you're going to get it in the net."

Service dogs get free eye exams

The notice about the free eye exams went out to all the dog owners involved in Dog B.O.N.E.S (Building Opportunities for Nurturing and Emotional Support), the Scituate-based non-profit group that is dedicated to providing well-trained, affectionate, obedient, registered and insured therapy dog teams to local organizations.

The theme of this year's Relay For Life is "Imagine a world with more birthdays." Survivors, John Dunn of Hull, Beth Tarpey of Cohasset, Martha Ogrodnik of Cohasset, Betsey Pinkus of Cohasset and Sarah Downing of Boston pretend to blow out the candles on a giant cake. Each candle represents the name of a survivor.

Led by co-chairman Harry St. Onge, the survivors take the first walk around to kick off the Relay For Life for the American Cancer Society last Friday (June 11).

RELAY CO-CHAIRS

This past weekend the annual American Cancer Society's Relay For Life took place in Cohasset. This event involved business sponsors and teams raising money from Cohasset, Hingham, Hull and Scituate to help us "Celebrate More Birthdays."

This year's Relay was held on the practice field behind the high school. The size of the field was a little smaller but it added an intimacy that we did not feel on Alumni Field. The weather was perfect, the entertainment and the food were terrific and the Rusty Skippers gave it a "home-town" atmosphere.

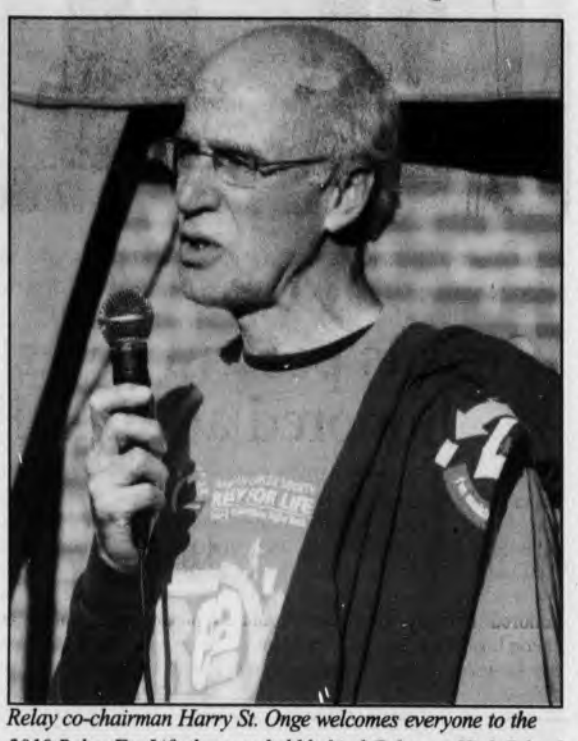
We cannot thank Brian Adams and Ron Ford enough for their support and help in making this change of location easy. Nothing was a problem and all our needs and request were met.

The goals of the Relay are to raise money for research, education, support and advocacy, create awareness of cancer and foster participation in the Relay event. We were successful on all counts. It was a great community event that came together to offer support for all those dealing with cancer, those who have lost their battle with cancer and all the caregivers that keep them going.

The teams that raised all of the money were: A Walk to Remember, Beach Street School, Bosom Buddies, Coconuts, Coffey Grinders, Cohasset Rotary, G-Force 14, Glastonbury Abbey, Hingham Harbormen, Hingham Harmony, Hull Kidz with Hope, ICEMAN22KRG, Mardiflies, Mighty Energizers, Re-Lei- For Life, Sals Pals, Scituate Sailors, Starbucks, Steps of Hope, Sweet Relief Family and Friends, Team Believe, Walk This Way, Walkie Talkies, Wilkinson & Friends and the Warriors.

To make this event successful we have to thank all who provided entertainment; Lisa Battista and Kelsey Gilbert, Lily Sestito, Rusty Skippers Band, Paula Coffey All Star Dance Team, Ray Papile and Kevin Griffin and Jen Rooney for donating her time doing children's face painting.

The excellent food for the Taste of the Relay was donated by Atlantica, Schooners, The Mill Wharf, The Red Lion, Mullaney's Seafood, Bia Bistro, Papa Gino's Cohasset, Cohasset Pizza House, Crow Point Pizzeria, 3A Pizza & Grill, Victoria's Pizzeria, Harbor House, Morning Glories, French Memories, 5 South Main, Scooter Scoops, Starbucks in Cohasset & Windsor Tea Shop, Atlantic Bagel, and Friends of the Relay.



Business Sponsors that help underwrite the event so more of our donated dollars can be used for our mission were Cohasset Rotary, Pilgrim Bank, Edward Jones, Cohasset Collision Center, South Shore Music Circus, GWS Graham Waste Services, Anderson Fuel, and Starbucks Coffee in Cohasset.

In-Kind Sponsors that donated space, gift items to raffle or flowers, water and other items were Cohasset High School, Curtis Liquors, Dependable Cleaners, Flemings of Cohasset, Precious Petals in Scituate, Second Congregational Church of Cohasset, Our World Museum, Shaw's in Cohasset, Starbucks in Cohasset, Stop & Shop in Cohasset, and The Village Greenery.

To help us set-up and clean up the event Andrew Swanson from the Tree and Park Department who mowed and trimmed the site and Derek Lincoln and Mark Kelly from Facilities Department who kept the site clean and safe throughout the event and we thank Coach Afanasiw and the Cohasset High School Football Team for all their help in helping us get ready.

It was a warm intimate community event that brought teams and participants together from Cohasset, Hingham, Hull and Scituate to show support for all cancer survivors and caregivers and to celebrate their lives and give all of us hope that a cure will be found soon.

All who were involved brought a spirit to the Relay that will stay with us for a long time. We thank all of you.

Relay co-chairman Harry St. Onge welcomes everyone to the 2010 Relay For Life that was held behind Cohasset High School on the practice field for the first time this year.

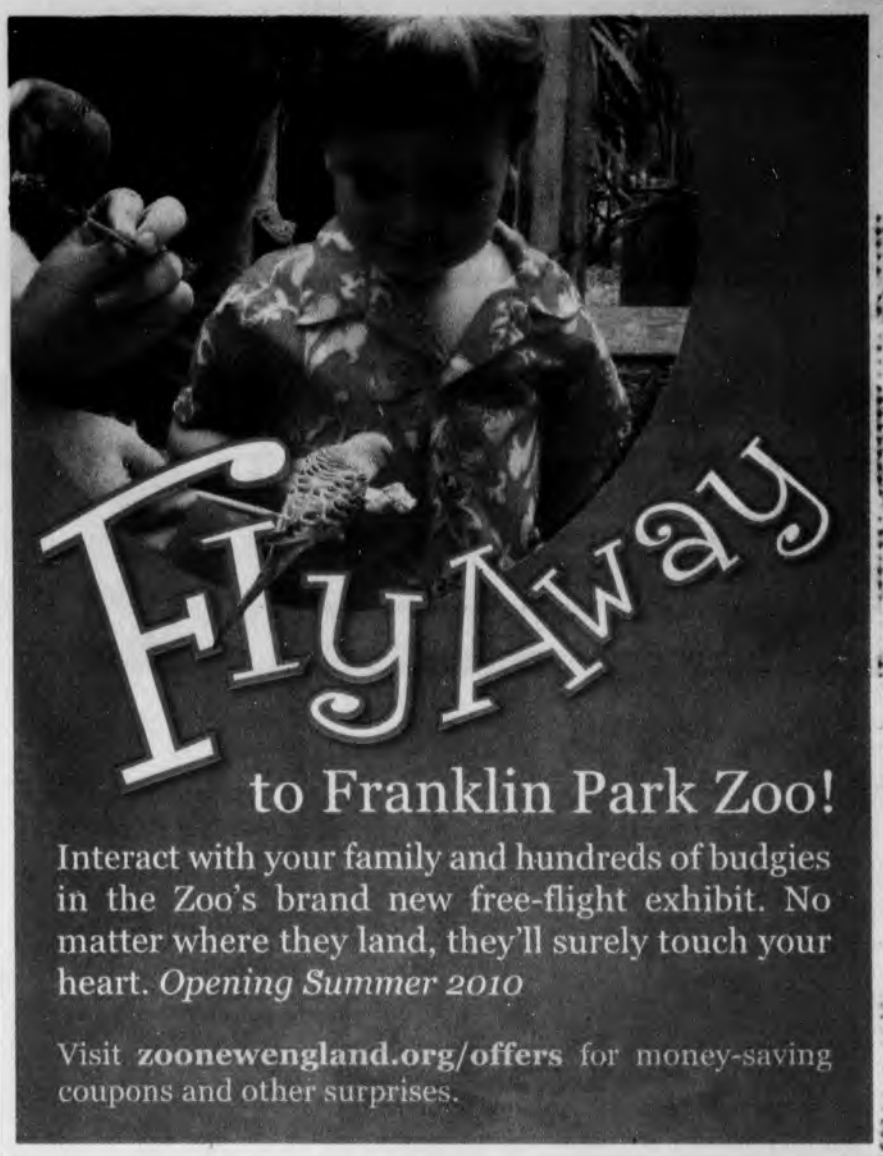
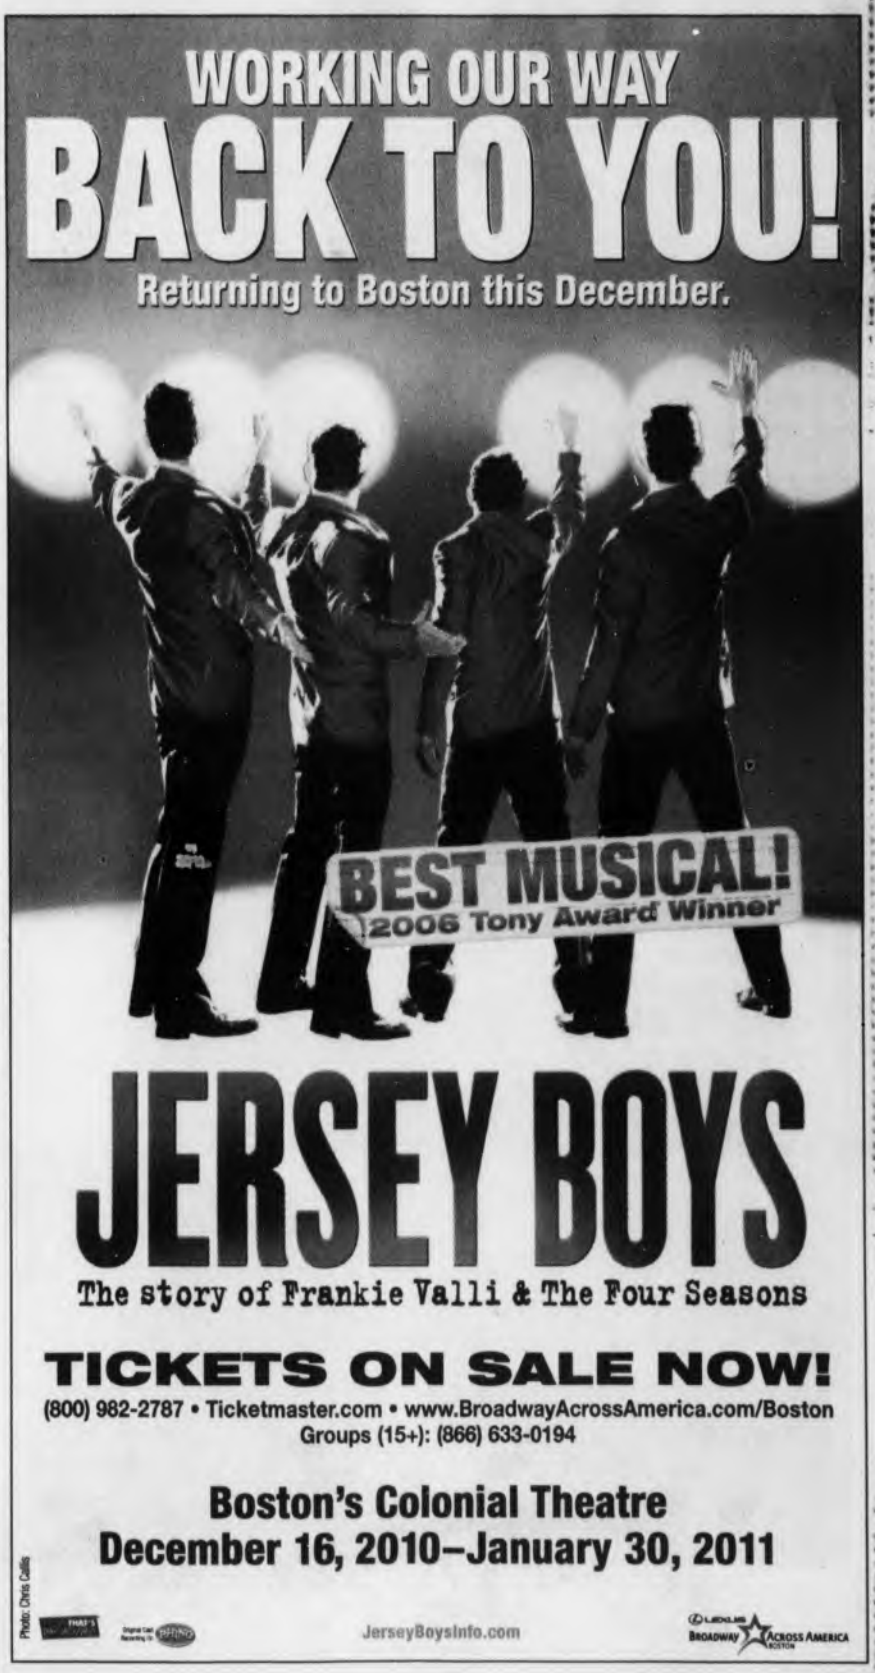
Census poster contest winners honored at State House

Winners of the 2010 Federal Census poster contest for Massachusetts schoolchildren, including Alexandra Leger and Reed Westcott of Cohasset, were honored recently at a luncheon hosted by Secretary of the Commonwealth William F. Galvin in the Great Hall of the State House. Winning posters were on display there and are on the website www.ma2010census.org.



"Getting as complete a count as possible is important to ensure that Massachusetts is not shortchanged in the coming decade," said Galvin, the state liaison to the 2010 Federal Census. "Our students have learned about the history of the Federal Census and have portrayed its importance well, as these winning posters demonstrate."



Sam Green in Economics for Leaders program

Sam Green, a junior at Cohasset High School in 2009-2010, has been selected to participate in the Economics for Leaders program being conducted at the University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, from July 11 through 18. Sam is one of 32 students from around the country who is honored by being accepted into the Foundation for Teaching Economics Minneapolis Economics for Leaders program. All of the students have been selected because they have demonstrated excellent leadership potential.

Sam is one of 32 students from around the country who is honored by being accepted...

During the weeklong Economics for Leaders program, students can attain an understanding of economic reasoning principles and how to employ these concepts for successful and effective leadership. Additionally, participants will achieve a heightened awareness of the impact their decisions have on others and the responsibility that awareness imposes. Students who have attended Economics for Leaders programs in prior years have called it "the experience of a lifetime."

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF JUNE 28, 2010

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Making things more complicated than they need to be can be a problem for the typically orderly Lamb. Try to look for a less intricate way to accomplish the same goals.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Avoiding personal involvement in a troubling situation might be advisable at this time, especially since you probably don't have all the facts. The weekend brings a surprise.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A problem with a colleague you thought had been resolved could recur. However, this time you'll be able to rely on your record to get a quick resolution in your favor. Good luck.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Giving your self-esteem a boost could be a good idea for the Moon Child, who might feel a bit daunted by the week's occurrences. Just focus on all your positive accomplishments.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) The "mane" attraction for the Lovable Lion this week is — what else? — love. New relationships move to new levels, while long-standing partnerships are strengthened.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A recent workplace problem will prove to be one of miscommunication, and once the matter is settled, you should have a better chance of getting your proposals approved.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Good news! After dealing pretty much in the dark with a matter that seemed to be taking forever to resolve, you should soon be seeing the light at the end of the tunnel.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A positive message should help lift that energy-draining sense of anxiety, and you should soon be able to deal with even the peskiest matter, whether at work or personal.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Try to control that heated Sagittarian temperament while dealing with what you believe to be an unfair matter. A cool approach is the best way to handle things.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Nursing hurt feelings could keep you from learning what went wrong. Ask your partner, a family member or a trusted friend to help you reassess your actions in the matter.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Nature is dominant this week. Try to spend time outdoors with someone special. An act of kindness in the past might be recalled by a person you believed was out of your life.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) An upcoming career decision could be based on how well you might be able to apply your artistic talents. Be sure to use the finest samples of your work to make a strong impression.

BORN THIS WEEK: Doing good things for others comes easily to you. You are considered a good friend, even by those you might hardly know.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

We have comfortable chairs if you'd like to stay and read, or you can buy a copy of this month's Bible Lessons, or the Christian Science Sentinel or the Christian Science Journal, which both have inspirational articles. You can also read or buy the weekly news-magazine The Christian Science Monitor, a Pulitzer Prize-winning source of national and international news.

Our Wednesday evening testimony meeting at 7:45 pm offers a quiet respite midweek. Listen to topical readings from the Bible and Science and Health, after which you can share or just listen to experiences of inspiration and healing. We hope you'll drop by!

Robert H. Herzfelder

HINGHAM – Robert H. Herzfelder, who served in the Pacific as a Naval aviator in World War II, then went on to become a senior executive for Sears Roebuck & Co., where he became one of the first Americans to do business in Communist China died Monday, June 14, 2010, after a short illness. He was 86.

Herzfelder was a longtime resident of Lake Forest, Ill., but he and his wife moved to Hingham, in 2008 to be near his children. Herzfelder was also a longtime treasurer of the Lake Forest-Lake Bluff Senior Citizens Foundation, and played a key role in building the Dickinson Hall Senior Center, which opened in 2001.

He was born in New York, on Nov. 29, 1923, the only son of Albert and Mildred Herzfelder. His father, who owned a brick factory, died during the Depression and his mother went to work to support the family.

Herzfelder joined the Navy in 1942 and was assigned to the PV-2 Ventura, a patrol bomber. In 1945 he deployed to the Pacific, where he flew anti-submarine patrols. Afterwards, he served in the US Naval Reserve, retiring in 1962 with the rank of Lieutenant.

He attended Hofstra University on the GI Bill and met Marguerite Virginia Duffy; the two were married in 1949. After graduating, he joined Sears Roebuck & Co.'s New York office. In 1955 he transferred to Sears' operations in Bogota, Colombia, and in 1965 became Vice President of Sears in Spain.

He returned to the US in 1969 as one of Sears' top clothing buyers, and pioneered sourcing fabric and clothing in Asia. He first visited China in 1972, shortly after President Richard Nixon opened relations with the Communist government. Herzfelder revisited China numerous times over the next 10 years.

In April 1976, he became one of the very few Americans to witness the mass mourning in Tiananmen Square that followed the death of Premier Zhou Enlai. In August 1976, he was shaken out of his bed at the Beijing Hotel by the massive Tangshan Earthquake, which killed over 200,000 people.

In retirement, he became an investor and an active member of the Lake Forest Senior Foundation before moving to Linden Ponds in Hingham. His hobbies included stamp collecting, bridge, fishing, golf and reading.

He is survived by Marguerite, his wife of 61 years; three children, Richard, who now lives in Beijing, China; Bruce, of Cohasset; and Eileen Gumport of Manhattan, and three grandchildren.

A Funeral Mass will be celebrated on Friday, June 18, 2010, at 10 a.m., in St. Anthony's Church, Cohasset.

A 55-year tradition that never gets old

Annual South Shore Art Center Arts Festival: June 18-20

The main exhibition tent of the South Shore Art Center Arts Festival.

Every Father's Day weekend, a sprawling eight-pole tent, hundreds of artists and thousands of visitors transform the ocean-side Cohasset Common into one of New England's premier arts festivals. The South Shore Art Center Arts Festival has become a tradition for many South Shore and Greater Boston residents—greeting summer with something for everyone: art exhibitions, handmade crafts, music, and summer fare, including lobster rolls and strawberry shortcake provided by local churches.

The centerpiece of the Arts Festival is the main exhibition tent, showcasing hundreds of artists in a juried exhibition and a members' show. In addition, nearly 100-juried craft artists offer unique products. Art comes to life as ceramicists, wood carvers and painters demonstrate their work. The popular kids tent showcases a young artists' exhibition and offers children the opportunity for hands-on creativity. Musical entertainment ranges from bluegrass to jazz to the popular Irish band "The O'Reilly's." This year will also feature David Ogden, a singer-songwriter from Cohasset who will perform his homage to the South Shore "1-4-3, The Lighthouse Song," from his album No Better Place.

Festival hours are Friday, June 18, from 2 to 7 p.m.; Saturday, June 19, from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m.; and Sunday, June 20, from noon to 5 p.m.

In addition to the art exhibitions, tents are spread out throughout the Cohasset Common with studio artisans selling jewelry, ceramics, fine art, photography, clothing, home and garden products, and more.

Festival hours are Friday, June 18, from 2 to 7 p.m.; Saturday, June 19, from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m.; and Sunday, June 20, from noon to 5 p.m. A free trolley shuttles visitors from parking at South Shore Music Circus. Boston Pops closes season with celebrations of past, present and future

By: R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

Arlo Guthrie

The Boston Pops closes out its 125th season at Symphony Hall this week with concerts on Thursday and Friday featuring two sons of music legends and a pair of weekend shows that mark the Pops debut of a legend in the making.

Folk music icon Arlo Guthrie joins Keith Lockhart and the Boston Pops for a special tribute to his father Woody Guthrie and their family's musical legacy on Thursday and Friday. Songwriter, storyteller, and social commentator Guthrie will perform classic songs "Alice's Restaurant," "City of New Orleans" and tell timeless tales. The two concerts will also feature the Boston Pops debut of the string trio Time for Three performing the Boston premiere of the new "Travels in Time for Three" by jazz musician and composer Chris Brubeck.

String trio Time for Three, whose music blends classical, country western, gypsy, and jazz, will perform the work by Brubeck who himself began performing with his father, jazz pianist extraordinaire Dave Brubeck over 30 years ago. The younger Brubeck, a jazz and rock performer on the bass, trombone, piano, and guitar, is now also earning worldwide acclaim as a composer.

This weekend, in celebration of its 125-year history, Lockhart and the Pops present a three-part program highlighting the orchestra's past, present, and future through the musical contributions of its three most famous maestros—Arthur Fiedler, John Williams, and Lockhart himself. Haitian-American artist Daniel Bernard Roumain, a composer, violinist, and bandleader who melds classical music with his own cultural references, joins Lockhart and the orchestra for his Boston Pops debut, June 19 and 20. The concerts feature the world premiere of "The Woodbox" violin concerto, Roumain's new work for six-string violin and orchestra. A genre-bending repertoire, not to mention a radical approach to the technical possibilities of the violin, have made Roumain one of the hottest stars in contemporary classical music today

Additional highlights of the Saturday program include movie music composed by Pops Conductor Laureate—and five-time Academy Award- winner—John Williams, including selections from "Star Wars" and "E.T. the Extra-Terrestrial." The Father's Day concert on Sunday will again feature Roumain, some of Williams' best-known film scores as well as two of the most beloved classic works written for children: Prokofiev's timeless musical tale "Peter and the Wolf" and Saints-Saëns' whimsical suite "Carnival of the Animals." In a collaboration with Cambridge's Underground Railway Theater, young members of the audience will participate in the performance using movement and puppetry.

Tickets may be purchased at Symphony Hall, 301 Massachusetts Avenue, Boston, online at www.bostonpops.org or by telephone at 617-266-1200 or 888-266-1200, Monday through Saturday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Two summer strolls

Village events capitalize on Thursday happenings

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Sometimes it all comes together.

On two Thursday afternoons and into the evening four organizations will coalesce to put on display some of the best Cohasset has to offer: a concert on the Common, the Farmer's Market, a show at the Music Circus and the village shops open late for a Summer Village Stroll.

For the first time this year the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce is putting on two nights of Summer Strolls — an event that has the village bustling until sundown. The first will take place on Thursday, July 1 and the next on Thursday, August 5.

The stroll is scheduled to coincide with the other events to capitalize and augment the options available for residents and visitors.

"This event is creating a good synergy between the music circus crowd, the farmers' market and the rec department concert series," said Darilynn Evans, president of the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce.

The village merchants are banding together to bring a little nightlife (or at least early evening) activity to downtown area, where many of the shops typically close at 5p.m. Their aim is to have the families who regularly attend the farmers' market mosey on down to the village for summer stroll activities, then return to the Common for the patriotic concert by the Sharon Concert Band at 6:30p.m.

The stroll is scheduled to coincide with the other events to capitalize and augment the options available for residents and visitors.

In the village, most of the shops will have open houses from 4:30 to 7:30p.m. Much like the Holiday Stroll and the October Night Out on Main Street, the Summer Stroll will have different activities throughout the village.

There will be music, snacks, activities and a passport feature for raffle prizes. The Village will be dressed up for the occasion — balloons will signify the businesses participating.

"It will be a nice night to attract people to come to the village as well as for our townspeople. Last year we had a lot of people going back and forth between the Common and the village," Evans said.

All four of the organizations work to support each other. The Music Circus and Chamber have partnered to promote Cohasset businesses, including the stroll event through e-mail newsletter announcements. For several years, the Chamber is a sponsor of the Farmers' Market by carrying the required insurance for the event. The Farmers' Market is sponsoring one of the five concerts on the Common this summer.

The family-friendly Farmers' Market takes place on the Common each summer Thursday from 2 to 6p.m. Locally

Village work not complete

Town may seek grant for improvements

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Over the past five years lot of changes have occurred in the village. There have been new buildings built, plenty of changes in merchants and streetscape improvements.

Yet, the work is still not complete. "Greenbush Guys" Tom Gruber and Mark Brennan have been working to find a way to implement village revitalization phase 3. Gruber and Brennan are town employees who assist the town manager with managing the many engineering and construction projects that come up.

"There are new needs that have cropped up (in the village)," Tom Gruber told the selectmen Monday night. To pay for the improvements, Gruber and Brennan have been working on drafting a Public Works Economic Development (PWED) grant application.

"PWED grants can be used in any commercial area for efforts that will improve the economic viability of the town," Gruber said.

The draft grant application, which is due on June 30, will focus primarily on the town parking lot, including creating additional spaces on a one-acre town-owned parcel behind the Red Lion, Ripley Road and the Depot Court/Ripley Road intersection.

The preliminary costing for the work is $1.3 million. A public forum, which is an advertised public hearing and a requirement of the grant application, will be held on Monday, June 28 at 7:10p.m.

According to the application, the focus in the town parking lot would be to enhance the rear part of the South Main Street properties. Pedestrian streetscape improvements, lighting and other ways to make that area a more "hospitable place," Gruber said.

Connected to the parking lot is a one-acre parcel of town-owned land bordered by the MBTA tracks on one side, the town parking lot on another and on two sides by the Red Lion Inn. Gruber said there is a possibility of creating 70 to 80 additional parking spaces.

"From time to time we hear from merchants that more parking spaces are needed," Gruber said. Blasting and/or hammering of the ledge in the area would be needed to create the parking.

"PWED grants can be used in any commercial area for efforts that will improve the economic viability of the town."
— Tom Gruber

Further, improvements on Ripley Road are targeted. Gruber said this commercial area is somewhat of a "stepchild" to the South Main Street and could benefit from improvements to the road, sidewalk, and drainage.

"We want to better integrate this area into the village," Gruber said.

Lastly, the grant application will also call for improvements at the intersection of Depot Court and Ripley Road, in particular changes to make a safer pedestrian crossing and vehicular intersection.

This would not be the first PWED

Home Instead SENIOR CARE
by Alan Carney, Director & Jennifer Moran, CSA, Community Liaison
ACTIVE, NOT PASSIVE
Prevention is as important as rehabilitation when it comes to seniors. After a medical professional determines a simple exercise routine to address the individualized needs of the senior, a home healthcare aide can help the client remain active by assisting them with the basic exercise regimen. Simple movements emphasizing strength, balance, stretching, and endurance can help the senior achieve overall conditioning and a sense of well-being. Even short walks outside on a nice day promote a more active lifestyle. Such exercise and caring companionship can help the senior feel better and enjoy life more. By offering encouragement and praise, the home healthcare aide can motivate the senior to achieve his or her "personal best."
Of course, exercise is a vital component of continued health. Our aides will encourage this healthy lifestyle. But we also provide other services that are just as important. We shop for and cook healthy meals, provide mental stimulation with conversation and books, and maintain a clean and pleasant home. If you think that your loved one deserves all of those things, please call 781-878-2994 today to set up an initial meeting to discuss your needs and your parent's needs. We'll be happy to provide whatever level of care your loved one needs, from occasional respite visits to round-the-clock care. Our address is 145 Washington St., Suite 11. In-home help for Massachusetts seniors.
P.S. Staying active may help seniors prevent or delay numerous diseases and disabilities, including dementia.

POLICE BEAT

Alleged aggressor smashes Lexus with baseball bat

Road rage incident under investigation

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

A 56-year-old Cohasset man went to the police station at 12:54 a.m. on Sunday (June 20) after having been the apparent victim of a road rage incident on Atlantic Avenue a short time earlier. The man, who was driving a Lexus SUV on Jerusalem Road from the direction of Hull, explained he drifted over into the southbound lane near Deep Run to avoid some rough road, and pulled back into his lane as a vehicle was coming in the opposite direction.

He then observed in his rearview mirror the same green SUV — that had been traveling toward him when he drifted into the oncoming lane — was now behind him approaching at a high rate of speed.

The man said the SUV passed him and then cut him off, blocking him at Cunningham Bridge.

The alleged victim reported that the three young men in the vehicle got out. The operator had a baseball bat, which he allegedly used to smash the driver's side of the Lexus, police said. The alleged victim, who did not have a cell phone with him and could not back his vehicle up, also reported the young man with the baseball bat had threatened to kill him.

The two other young men calmed down the teen with the bat; then the three then got back into the SUV and drove off, the alleged victim told police.

The alleged victim provided a description of the SUV and a partial plate. The incident is under investigation and charges are imminent, police said.

Huge bill

A 23-year-old Cohasset woman reported to police last Monday (June 14) that she had received an outstanding bill dating back to 2003 from National Grid for $16,353. She was only 16 at the time of the bill and living with her parents. She said she had no idea why it was sent to her and wanted the matter on file, police said.

Verizon

Solicitors selling the FiOS Verizon system have been going around town. However, not all have registered with the police as required under the town's bylaw. A concerned caller notified police on Tuesday (June 15) at about 7:58 p.m. that two Verizon solicitors had failed to show ID when asked. Police spoke to the solicitors, who agreed to leave the area, and advised them of the bylaw. Properly registered solicitors should have an ID/Cohasset permit on a lanyard around their necks.

California call

A 56-year-old Cohasset woman reported to police having received a phone call from a man who said he was calling from a company in California and was going to take $455 out of her bank account to pay for light bulbs. The Cohasset resident, who had received similar calls in the past, planned to check with her local bank in the morning to make sure no money had been withdrawn. Police said the call might have been a scam in which the caller was "fishing" for information about a bank account. However, in this case the potential victim cut him off before he could get any information.

Wallet taken

A 51-year-old Scituate woman reported to Cohasset police on Thursday (June 17) that she had left her wallet at the checkout counter while bagging her groceries at Shaw's and remembered that on her way home. When she returned to Shaw's to recover her wallet, she discovered it was gone. With the help of Shaw's clerks, she found the wallet in a shopping cart just outside of the store. Missing from the wallet was $10 in cash. No credit cards were taken, police said.

MV STOP/Summons

A 48-year-old Quincy man is being summonsed to court for operating without a license following a traffic stop on Chief Justice Cushing Highway on Thursday (June 17) at about 9:14 p.m. Police said the 1995 Nissan Altima the man was driving was going only 20-25 mph in a 50 mph zone. After being pulled over, the motorist produced a Brazilian passport but no other paperwork. He explained he had been driving slowly because his windows had fogged up. The car was towed.

Smashed window

The investigation of a smashed window in a 1995 Volvo station wagon parked in the MBTA commuter train parking lot on Thursday (June 17) was turned over the MBTA police. Cohasset received two reports about the smashed window, one at 11:42 p.m. on the 17th and one at 12:22 a.m. on June 18. A resident on Red Gate Lane owns the car, police said.

Cat upset

Cohasset police received an urgent call from a resident seeking the Animal Control Officer or "someone who knows about animals" to help with his cat that was "freaking out" because the residents are moving. The call came in at 7:36 a.m. on Friday (June 18). Police said the resident is moving from one location in Cohasset to another and the cat got upset and hid on a heating and air-conditioning vent. When the owner tried to get the cat off the vent, the cat went into attack mode, police said. The owner received a minor bite from the cat and called the ACO. The ACO responded and was able to capture the cat with a "rabies pole" and get it into its cage. The cat calmed down and was brought to its new home. The cat owner did not require medical attention.

Mirror damaged

A 77-year-old Cohasset woman reported to police on Saturday (June 19) that the driver's side mirror on her 2007 Ford Taurus was broken off while she was parked on North Main Street in front of the Senior Center. There were no witnesses, police said.

Bike accident

A 47-year-old Cohasset woman received some cuts and bruises, but was otherwise uninjured, after she and a landscaping truck collided on Atlantic Avenue on Saturday at about 10:24 a.m. Police said she was on Atlantic Avenue near Lothrop Lane when the accident occurred. The bike rider was coming around a sharp bend in the road and was confronted with a large lawn-care truck turning into a driveway near the intersection of Atlantic and Lothrop. A 23-year-old Sagamore Beach man was driving the truck.

Alcohol charge

At 3:20 a.m. on Sunday (June 20) police stopped a Chevrolet SUV on Margin Street for speeding and not using a turn signal. The officer asked for the operator's license and registration and in doing so, saw open containers of beer in the car. The driver, an 18-year-old Cohasset teen, was arrested for being a minor in possession of alcohol, speeding and for failure to use a turn signal. He was not intoxicated, police said.

The two passengers, also from Cohasset, were both intoxicated and were taken into protective custody; one of the passengers was passed out in the vehicle and was evaluated at the scene by the fire department.

Intoxicated teen

A Spring Street man reported to police at about 10:06 a.m. on Sunday (June 20) finding an intoxicated teenage boy asleep in his car around 9:30 a.m. The man said he woke up the boy who left. Nothing was missing from the car.

Cab incident

A cab driver, upset about not getting his fare, notified police at about 9:23 p.m. on Sunday (June 20) that his customer, whom he had taken from Quincy to North Main Street in Cohasset, refused to pay the $45. The 29-year-old Braintree woman, who police say was intoxicated, told police she had lost her wallet earlier. Police took her into protective custody and provided her information to the taxi company to seek compensation later.

Fox sightings

A caller reported to police at 8:08 a.m. on Monday (June 14) that a fox has been wandering around the Sohier Street and Fairoaks Lane area. The caller also reported that two teachers said the fox had tried to get into the Deer Hill School earlier that morning. The school reports were not confirmed, police said.

The animal control officer took a look around but did not find the fox, police said.

Debit card

A concerned citizen turned in a Bank of America Visa debit card to the police last Monday (June 14) that was found on Depot Court. The card belongs to a 48-year-old Cohasset woman and was returned to her, police said.

Dog in car

A woman reported to police that she put the "fear of God" into two people when they returned to their vehicle about leaving their dog locked in a 2000 Black Nissan in the heat in the parking lot of the medical building off Crocker Lane and Route 3A on Tuesday (June 15). She reported the incident because she had had some interaction with the people who had the dog.

Hurt hawk

Police received a call on Thursday (June 17) at 9:30 a.m. from a Jerusalem Road resident about an injured hawk in her backyard. Police said it was a red-tailed hawk that appeared to have been struck by a vehicle. It had a broken wing and appeared to be stunned from impact. It was brought to the New England Wildlife Center where they will nurse it back to health and release it.

Sunday storm rips through parts of Cohasset, region

By Carol Britton Meyer
CMEYER@CNC.COM

A severe localized thunderstorm with accompanying heavy rain, wind, and lightning tore through parts of Cohasset, Hull and Hingham Sunday afternoon, taking down trees and a few electrical wires.

The area around West Corner was hardest hit, with reports of 68 m.p.h. wind gusts at Hingham Harbor.

At 186 B Hull Street in Hingham, a neighbor's uprooted tree knocked down part of the Robbins family's wooden fence, their swing set, and aboveground swimming pool, Kerry Robbins reported. (Hull Street is split down the middle between Hingham and Cohasset).

"The storm was wild. It came and went so fast! Fortunately everyone was out of the pool at the time," she said. "During the storm my husband said he saw branches shooting into a neighbor's yard that looked like airplanes flying through the air. When one of our neighbors saw our yard, she said she got goosebumps."

Robbins was on the way to the Hingham landfill when the storm struck. "Hail was coming down and I couldn't see in front of or behind me," she said. "But I thought it was probably a freak storm that would end quickly, and that's what happened, because the sun came out soon after that."

Despite the wildness of the unexpected storm and the damage to their property, Robbins said, "The important thing is that everyone is safe."

Some streets around the three towns were lined with leafy branches that the wind had torn off trees. Other neighborhoods appeared untouched.

Kenny Thayer of the Cohasset DPW described the tree damage as "unbelievable." He said many residents hired private tree companies to clean up their yards and the companies were in town for three days.

Thayer said that he, Bobby Piepenbrink and Tony Sestito, all of the DPW, went out right after the storm to make the roads passable. He said they had to use the Sampson (a large vehicle) on Lamberts Lane to clear a tree that was three-to-four feet in diameter.

"The storm was something else," Thayer said.

At about 3:20 p.m., calls about downed trees and wires down came into the dispatch center at police/fire headquarters on Elm Street.

Downed trees and or power lines were reported on Hull Street, Lamberts Lane, Forest Avenue, Jerusalem Road, Nichols Road, Black Rock Road, Old Coach Road, Cushing Road and Norfolk Road. Outages were reported as well as a lightning strike on a pole on South Main Street.

Police said they heard reports that the storm was a microburst but those were not confirmed. There were no reported injuries in Cohasset.

Editor Mary Ford also contributed to this report.

grown vegetables, flowers and bakery and artisan goods are available. Music is also a component of the event.

The Recreation Department's Concert Series on the Common begins on Thursday, July 1. To celebrate Independence Day, the Sharon Concert Band, a group of 60 musicians ranging in age from early teens to seventies, will perform patriotic tunes.

After visiting the shops in the village, the Recreation Director Ted Carroll hopes many return to the common with a blanket or lawn chair to enjoy the concert.

The night of the first summer stroll event Boz Scaggs is performing at the Music Circus on July 1. George Thorogood & The Destroyers at the Music Circus the night of the second stroll on Thursday, July 5.

"It's going to be my nice summer event and it's great to have all those groups working together," Evans said. The summer strolls are just one of the many efforts the Chamber is working on to promote the town and the businesses.

grant applied to the village area. In 2006, the town received a $1.5 million PWED grant to revitalize the downtown village area, which was completed with new sidewalks, paved streets, trees, and enhanced pocket parks.

The area of focus was South Main Street, Depot Court, Brook and Elm streets in the center Village. The roads, sidewalks and drainage were largely reconstructed. Aesthetic improvements were made throughout the village to give it a fresh look.

In 2007, another $310,000 PWED grant was awarded – this time to finish additional parking spaces in the village lot as well as improve the aesthetics and landscaping.

Gruber said the town has solicited and received letter of endorsement from the Senator Bob Hedlund and Representative Garrett Bradley. They are also looking for support from the Planning Board, the Economic Development Committee, the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce, and the Board of Selectmen.

A public forum, which is an advertised public hearing and a requirement of the grant application, will be held on Monday, June 28 at 7:10p.m.at the Board of Selectmen's meeting, Town Hall.

Summer Sing with Choral Art Society

In an inaugural season of South Shore Summer Sings, the Choral Art Society, a community chorus of the South Shore since 1958, will offer a Summer Sing of Faure's "Requiem" and Schubert's "Mass in G" from 7 to 9 p.m., on Monday, July 26, at First Parish in Cohasset Unitarian Universalist, 23 North Main St. There will be an intermission for socializing, with refreshments provided by Choral Art Society members.

What is a Summer Sing? Similar to "Messiah" sings in December, all people who love to sing choral music are invited to come and sing through a choral work for the joy of it. The Summer Sing will be led by Danica A. Buckley, artistic director, and Susan Gilleece-Reilley, accompanist.

Admission is $10 for general admission, $8 for seniors, age 65 and older, and students in high school or college; full-time college students with ID. Those attending can bring their own score or rent a score for $2.

For more information, call Danica A. Buckley at 413-348-9423 or email sopranocon@yahoo.com. Visit the CAS Facebook page and website at www.choralartsociety.org.

More transparency being required

Open Meeting Law undergoes changes

By Carol Britton Meyer
CMEYER@CNC.COM

The Open Meeting Law is undergoing significant changes come July 1. Not only will the Attorney General be overseeing enforcement of the law (the county's district attorneys have done it for years), but also changes have been made to facilitate more transparency and government access.

To prepare for the impending changes, the Board of Selectmen reviewed the key points with Town Manager Bill Griffin on Monday night.

The revisions to the 35-year-old law go into effect July 1.

The changes include:

• Posting meetings 48 hours prior to the scheduled date and time – not including Saturdays, Sundays, and legal holidays — is required. For example, a meeting scheduled for Tuesday evening would have to be posted by Friday afternoon, or Thursday if Monday is a holiday. (Prior to the changes, Saturday counted.) In case of emergency, a meeting notice must be posted as soon as reasonably possible and must be a true emergency situation.

• More detailed agendas are required, including information beyond a "general business" notation. The chair is required to post with the notice of the meeting what he or she "reasonably anticipates will be discussed at the meeting."

"It doesn't preclude other things from being discussed," said Selectmen Chairman Karen Quigley. Other members of the committee and/or members of the public may bring forward other issues the chair would not have foreseen.

〈 The definition of what information must be included on agendas and in meeting minutes for open sessions is more clearly defined.

• Open session minutes, whether approved or in draft form, must be provided within 10 days of a request.

• Although "notice" of a meeting may be displayed in hard copy or electronic format, such notice of a local public body must be filed with Town Clerk Marion Douglas and posted in a location visible to the general public at all hours in or on the municipal building where the Town Clerk's office is located.

Town Manager Bill Griffin said students at the South Shore Vo-Tech are building a bulletin board case that will displayed at the front window of the Town Hall.

Other Open Meeting Law requirements include that:

•Attendees may make recordings of a public meeting via video or audio equipment, but the public body chair may reasonably regulate the number, placement, and use of equipment so as to not obstruct the conduct of the meeting. At the beginning of the meeting, the board or committee chair must notify those in attendance if the meeting is being recorded.

• Prior to an executive session, the board or committee chair must state the purpose and all subjects that may be revealed without compromising the purpose for entering into executive session. Previously, only the purpose had to be stated with minimal information provided.

Executive sessions are non-public, involving such matters as strategy sessions in preparation for negotiations with non-union personnel; conducting collective bargaining sessions or contract negotiations with non-union personnel; or discussing strategy with respect to collective bargaining or litigation.

• In order to enter executive session to consider the purchase, exchange, lease, or value of real estate, the public body chair must first declare that an open meeting may have a detrimental effect on the negotiating position of that body.

• An executive session may be held to consider or interview applicants for appointment or employment by a preliminary screening committee. (The prior version of the Open Meeting Law only addressed employment applicants.)

• Minutes must be made for all open and executive sessions, containing the time, date, place; members present or absent; a summary of the discussion for each agenda topic; a list of documents and other materials used at the meeting; decisions made; and actions taken, including a record of all votes.

• Open session minutes, notes, recordings, and other items used to prepare the minutes, as well as all documents and materials used at the meeting, are public records. Personnel records are exempted from this requirement.

• The public body, its chair, or a designee must periodically review the minutes of executive sessions to determine if nondisclosure remains appropriate.

The determination of whether disclosure of executive session minutes is appropriate must be announced at the next meeting of the involved board or committee and must be included in the minutes.

• A meeting notice must include the agenda items the chair reasonably anticipates will be discussed in addition to the date, time, and location.

The newly created Open Government Division of the Office of the Attorney General replaces the District Attorney's as the enforcing authority for the Open Meeting Law.

The Attorney General may conduct an investigation to determine whether a violation of the Open Meeting Law has occurred. This includes the authority to take testimony, examine any documents or materials, and require attendance during an examination.

The OML now imposes fines of up to $1,000 for each "intentional" violation by a state or municipal body, whereas the previous law allowed fines only against municipal bodies and did not require that violations be intentional in order to be subject to a fine.

The Attorney General may adopt Open Meeting Law regulations, interpret the Open Meeting Law, and issue written letter rulings and advisory opinions.

The Attorney General must prepare and distribute educational materials and provide training to public bodies on the Open Meeting Law.

Within two weeks of being qualified for office, all public body members must certify receipt of a copy of the Open Meeting Law and corresponding regulations.

The Open Meeting Law Advisory Commission reviews Open Meeting Law issues and periodically makes recommendations to the Attorney General on Open Meeting Law recommendations, training, and educational initiatives. The Attorney General is required to file a written report with the Advisory Commission.

Reporter Nancy White contributed to this report.

Open Meeting Law changes at a glance

The Open Meeting Law was revised as part of the 2009 Ethics Reform Bill, and will centralize responsibility for state-wide enforcement of the law in the Office of the Attorney General. The effective date of the revised law is July 1.

The purpose of the Open Meeting Law is to eliminate much of the secrecy surrounding the deliberations and decisions on which public policy is based. The Open Meeting Law supports the principle that the democratic process depends on the public having knowledge about the considerations underlying governmental action. The Open Meeting Law requires that most meetings of governmental bodies be held in public. There are some exceptions when a meeting may be held in executive, or closed, session.

There are major changes to the Open Meeting Law listed below.

• All persons serving on public bodies must receive a copy of the Open Meeting Law: MGL c. 30A, § 19(c).

Open Meeting Law Guidelines - April 2009 – This will be updated by the Attorney General's office in July 2010.

· The officer calling the meeting is responsible for complying with the following posting requirements:

1. 48-hour notice for meetings of boards and committees – the Town Clerk must receive a meeting posting, including a listing of topics (agenda) at least 48 hours prior to the meeting. This notice must be available to the public at all hours. The 48 hours notice cannot include Saturdays, Sundays or holidays.

For example:

· Monday night meetings must be posted before Thursday night.

· Tuesday night meetings must be posted before 1 p.m., on Friday (if Monday is a holiday, before Thursday night).

· Wednesday night meetings must be posted before Monday night.

· Thursday night meetings must be posted before Tuesday night.

· Friday night meetings must be posted before Wednesday night.

2. Notices must include the date, time and place of the meeting and the agenda (the list of topics that the chair reasonably anticipates will be discussed).

· Emails are included in the definition of "deliberation," which is prohibited outside of open session; but distribution of agendas, scheduling information or reports to be discussed at future meetings is permitted.

· Attendance by a quorum at a location is not considered to be a meeting if members are not intending to conduct business and no deliberation occurs.

For example:

Attendance at a conference, social event, or a meeting of another municipal board is not considered to be a meeting if no intention to conduct business or deliberation occurs.

· Meeting minutes must contain more detailed information then previously required.

The following must be included in the minutes:

1. Date, place, time and matters discussed.
2. Summaries of discussions.
3. List of documents used.
4. Decisions made.
5. Actions taken.
6. Record of all votes, yeas, nays and abstentions.
7. Documents and other exhibits, such as photographs, recordings, maps and presentations used by the body at the open or executive session shall be part of the official record of the session in addition to the minutes.

· Executive minutes must be reviewed by the chair periodically to determine if they should be released, or if purpose for executive session is still ongoing to keep minutes confidential.

· Attorney General will assume broad interpretation and enforcement authority over the Open Meeting Law. The District Attorney is no longer involved.

People making complaints of Open Meeting Law violations must file written complaint with the Public Body first. The Public Body then submits a reply to the complainant and to the Attorney General's office.

Cohasset EMT caught in training scam

Has license suspended for nine months

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

This past week, over 200 EMTs across the state have been implicated in falsifying training records after an investigation by the Department of Public Health.

One of Cohasset's own firefighter paramedics has been implicated in the scheme, which stems from two EMT instructors based in Lexington.

Fire Chief Robert Silvia confirmed on Tuesday that the Massachusetts Department of Public Health and Office of Emergency Medical Services notified him that Cohasset firefighter/paramedic John W. Haley has had his EMT-paramedic license suspended had notified him. Silvia said Haley is currently on administrative leave.

"The town is in the process of completing its own internal investigation into the matter and will take appropriate action in the near future," Silvia said. "The town is a public employer and public employees have certain privacy rights, as well as certain due process rights that need to be complied with prior to any disciplinary action being considered or taken against them."

According to the Boston Globe, Haley worked for Cohasset Fire and Atlantic Ambulance Corporation, and was among 213 EMTs who had their licenses suspended for falsifying their training records.

The Globe reported Haley is facing a nine-month suspension. According to the 2008 and 2009 Cohasset Town Reports, Haley has worked for Cohasset Fire since 2008 where he earned about $55,000 each year.

The Office of Emergency Medical Service requires EMT-paramedic license re-certification roughly every two years. It requires successful completion of a 48-hour EMT-paramedic refresher, 25 hours of continuing education approved at the EMT-paramedic level.

The town is then provided with a copy of the license from the state.

Silvia said typically Cohasset Fire pays for the paramedics time to complete the re-certification requirements as well as any cost associated with the classes and training.

According to the Globe, two EMT instructors, Mark Culleton and Leo Nault, will have their EMT-Paramedic certification permanently revoked. Both trainers failed to conduct required EMT refresher training courses. They also falsified training documentation and, in some cases, received money from EMTs in exchange for the false records.

An additional 211 EMTs, who worked for 10 private and 14 municipal ambulance services across the Commonwealth, were also found to have falsified training records. Based on the severity of offense, disciplinary action includes license revocations ranging from 45 days to nine months. Individual EMTs have the right to appeal their suspensions to the Division of Administrative Law Appeals (DALA).

According to a press release from the Department of Public Health (DPH), the suspensions will go into effect on July 1, 2010. In addition to the suspensions, the private ambulance services and municipalities who employ the EMTs may take their own disciplinary actions.

Town Manager Bill Griffin confirmed a member of Cohasset Fire Department's involvement, but would not give other details, including Haley's name, because of its nature as a personnel matter.

"We are very concerned with what we learned and we're taking it seriously," Griffin said on Tuesday.

Several EMTs implicated have already been terminated, the DPH press release said, and the matter has been turned over to the Attorney General's office.

"The vast majority of Massachusetts' 24,000 EMTs are properly certified and in compliance with required training," said Dr. JudyAnn Bigby, Secretary of Health and Human Services. "But the conduct of these individuals is in violation of regulations meant to protect the public's health and safety. The sanctions are appropriate given the serious nature of the offenses."

GOOD THOUGHTS

Hello Cohasset. Summer is here and the fun of the season has begun in earnest. It is so nice to see the beaches full, hear about the pool parties, evening get-togethers at Sandy with family and friends and a picnic for dinner, seeing people biking, walking and enjoying each day. Please take the time to also enjoy the tiny, small moments in a day like splashing in a rain puddle with no shoes on, watching the sunrise or sunset and realizing how lucky we are for another day and how special it is to be surrounded with the people we love and care about. If we all do not take the time to slow down in life even if just for a few moments, life will pass by before we know it.

It was wonderful for a reader of the column send me a note and asking me to share this with all. It does seem that as each day goes by, the stressful, hectic lives that we are leading are the lives that we are all complaining about. Maybe we just need to regroup and be thankful for what we have all around us at any given moment! Hmmm…I know that I want to try as hard as it can be. Let me know any of those moments that you find, either through a photo or a message. Enjoy your summer!

COHASSET ROTARY

Celebrating education and relief efforts

Monday night the Lightkeeper's House was the site of a very special Cohasset Rotary Meeting. It was the annual Scholarship Dinner, at which a group of very deserving young people and their parents were on hand to accept their scholarships and learn about Rotary. Students submitted applications and were selected based on their academic record, financial need and community service activities. This year, nine graduating Seniors received the award including: Hannah Burgess; Samantha Crough; Jackson Dean, Margaux Donze, James Earl, Michael Filbey, MacKensie Hart, Cameron Lucitt, Sean MacCarthy, John Maher, Ian Porter, Conor Queenan, Megan Richardson, Dominique Rioux, and Chelsea Silvia.

The class was presented with their scholarships by Ron Goodwin, a member of the Rotary Club's Scholarship Committee. Since 1947 more than $500,000 in scholarships have been awarded to local students. $15,000 in scholarships were awarded this year.

"Rotary does not consider these scholarships a gift," said Goodwin as he addressed the crowded room. "Each of you has earned this money through your hard work and dedication to learning."

Also at the meeting were Ken and Rhonda Kaplan, representatives of ShelterBox. ShelterBox is an international disaster relief charity that delivers emergency shelter, warmth and dignity to people affected by disaster worldwide organization. It was founded by a Rotarian and is currently the largest Rotary project worldwide, and the world's second largest relief organization, second only to the Red Cross.

ShelterBox representatives were there to receive money that was raised via a service project by the Circle Ministry of Cohasset's First Parish Unitarian Universalist, in partnership with the Cohasset Rotary Club. Led by Circle Group member, John Kornet, a group of 10 congregants set up one of the ShelterBox tents and had the contents of the box on display.

Each box supplies an extended family of up to 10 people with a tent and lifesaving equipment to use while they are displaced or homeless.

Over the three-day Arts Festival weekend more than $1,000 was raised, enough to buy one shelter box for those in need.

ShelterBox is the only international aid organization that provides shelter and life-saving equipment. We instantly respond to earthquake, volcano, flood, hurricane, cyclone, tsunami or conflict and have helped over 100 disasters in more than 70 countries.

Each box supplies an extended family of up to 10 people with a tent and lifesaving equipment to use while they are displaced or homeless. The contents are tailored depending on the nature and location of the disaster, with great care taken sourcing every item to ensure it is robust enough to be of lasting value.

The surprise of the evening came when it was announced that the Cohasset Rotary was would purchase one ShelterBox on behalf of the Cohasset High School Class of 2010 — a way to celebrate the achievement of all the graduates. The Rotary motto is "Service Above Self," and was evident by the efforts of all the students and volunteers in the room.

Rotary International is the world's first service club organization, with more than 1.2 million members in 33,000 clubs worldwide. Rotary club members are volunteers who work locally, regionally, and internationally to combat hunger, improve health and sanitation, provide education and job training, promote peace, and eradicate polio under the motto Service Above Self.

First Parish pastor heading to new ministry

Leaving after six years in Cohasset

COURTESY PHOTO

Rev. Dr. Jan Carlsson-Bull is heading west to New York State to assume the Interim Ministry of the Unitarian Universalist Congregation of the Catskills in Kingston, New York.

After six years as Minister at First Parish Unitarian Universalist in Cohasset, Rev. Dr. Jan Carlsson-Bull is heading west to New York State to assume the Interim Ministry of the Unitarian Universalist Congregation of the Catskills in Kingston, New York. She and her husband, Daniel Bull, will reside in Red Hook, N.Y. just across the Hudson River from Kingston. "While the Hudson isn't the Atlantic, it's a tidal river that flows into the Atlantic," says Jan, who has enjoyed so many delightful hours in the waters off Minot Beach.

Signature legacies of her ministry here include Circle Ministry, also known as Small Group Ministry, which has engaged almost a third of the congregation, and the Welcoming Congregation status of the congregation, which certifies that First Parish is intentionally welcoming of those among us who are gay, lesbian, bisexual, and transgender.

"The pastoral and the prophetic are two sides of the same coin of progressive religious community," asserts Jan. "The former tends to comfort and the latter, to chafe. 'Peace on earth, good will to all' is not an easy message."

On Sunday, June 13, right after worship, the members and friends of First Parish held a reception honoring Jan and her ministry and presented her with a framed photograph of Minot Ledge Lighthouse, taken by the esteemed Patriot Ledger photographer, Greg Derr. June 20, she preached her final sermon here, aptly titled "Benediction."

"I'll miss the congregants here, the caring community spirit of Cohasset — including the Cohasset Mariner, and all who have made possible a ministry that is shared. This community offers so much — from our congregations to the excellence of our schools to Holly Hill Farm to the magnificence of this shoreline," reflects Jan.

Community-wise, Jan has been active in Cohasset CARES (Caring and Responding Economically and Spiritually) and has participated in the ecumenical services of the Cohasset Clergy and the annual Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. Birthday Breakfasts. Denominationally Jan served for eight years on the Unitarian Universalist Association's Commission on Social Witness, two of them as chair, and on the Unitarian Universalist Trauma Response Ministry. From June 22-27 she will attend the General Assembly of the Unitarian Universalist Association in Minneapolis, during which she will join the board of the Small Group Ministry Network, which offers comprehensive small group ministry resources to congregations nationwide. She will return June 28, to conclude her ministry here by month's end.

In the words of Mary Parker, Chair of the Parish Committee of First Parish: "I have had the pleasure and privilege to have Jan Carlsson-Bull as my minister here at First Parish in Cohasset for six years. Jan and I both came to First Parish at the same time, she as the newly settled minister and I as a newcomer to Unitarian Universalism. It was through Jan's example and instruction that I have become a Unitarian Universalist for life. After only one year with First Parish I joined its governing body, the Parish Committee, and for the last three years I have chaired that committee. In that capacity I have worked closely with Jan and observed firsthand the boundless energy, dedication, hard work, and thoughtfulness which she brings to her ministry."

Mr. Wilmore is now accepting students for his summer session that begins on June 28. Participants of all ages are welcome. Working under his experienced eye, guided by his years of wisdom students will learn all aspects of building a traditional wooden boat. Fourth season of farm films to start

This is a witty and provocative documentary produced and directed by award-winning Catherine Gund about kids and food politics.

Holly Hill Farm, 236 Jerusalem Road, Cohasset, will present its fourth season of films about food and agriculture screened outside on the side of the Tomato Barn. Bring a blanket or lawn chairs and come check out these award-winning films. Donations will be accepted to benefit Friends of Holly Hill Farm. An indoor venue is available, so come rain or shine. Screenings begin at 8 p.m., but come early with a picnic.

The first film of the 2010 season will take place Saturday, June 26, with a showing of "What's on your plate?" This is a witty and provocative documentary produced and directed by award-winning Catherine Gund about kids and food politics. Filmed over the course of one year, the film follows two 11-year-old multi-racial city kids as they explore their place in the food chain. Sadie and Safiyah take a close look at food systems in New York City and its surrounding areas. With the camera as their companion, the girl guides talk to each other, food activists, farmers, new friends, storekeepers, their families and the viewer in their quest to understand what's on all of our plates.

GIMME SHELTER

Jet-Jet has purr-sonality!

This week, Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is looking for shelter for Jet-Jet. She's a three-year-old Tortoiseshell female. She's extremely good-natured and loves it when you pet her. She purrs as soon as you approach her. She gets along with other cats or would be fine on her own. She's great with children and though she has a fairly long coat, we've yet to see a snarl. She's looking for that special person or family to share their home with her. She will reward you with her purring and her good nature.

On Saturday, June 26, from 2 to 4 p.m. is Open House/Adoption Day. A dozen kittens are available for adoption. Half a dozen jet black, two gray, two tiger and two white. Visit the website at www.hsar.org. The kittens are not all on the web site but most of our cats are.

Open hours at the shelter are 6:30 to 7:30 p.m., Mondays, and 2 to 3 p.m., on Saturdays. If these hours aren't convenient, call Shirl at 781-925-3380 to arrange an appointment.

The shelter is at 50 L Street, Hull. Mailing address is Hull Seaside Animal Rescue, P.O. Box 787, Hull, MA 02045. We're proud to be a no kill shelter and thank all who support us and give homes to our felines. The telephone number is 781-925-3121.

RFP to be issued for independent audit

Selectmen discuss water department issues

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

On the heels of the Special Town Meeting largely devoted to the water department's financial crisis, the Board of Selectmen discussed this week the ways and methods to keep on top of the water finances.

Town Manager Bill Griffin, who was given the power of joint oversight of the water department with the elected water commission by Town Meeting, said new processes will be put in place.

A process has been agreed upon between Griffin and the Water Commission to more closely monitor and report revenues and expenditures on an on-going basis. Selectman Lee Jenkins requested the board received quarterly financial reports from not only the water commission, but also the school department and sewer commission.

Much of the discussion at Monday night's meeting centered on the water department's independent audit. Griffin has developed a draft Request for Proposals (RFP) to solicit an agency to audit the water department's finances, capital spending program and operations. An RFP is a solicitation and outline of services the town is seeking.

The RFP will call for a 60-day turnaround from the date of hire and Griffin estimates the cost to be between $30,000 and $50,000. The Advisory Committee has pledged a portion of its reserve funds to pay for the audit.

The board voted 4-0 (Paul Carlson was absent from the meeting) in favor of moving forward with the audit.

Griffin was looking for direction on how and by whom the auditor will be selected and hired, something that needs to be included in the RFP. The RFPs will be reviewed based on quality, meaning the cost will not be considered until after the proposals have been ranked.

"I really want to make sure that everyone sees this as an independent process," Griffin said.

Selectmen chair Karen Quigley said the project falls squarely under the Advisory Committee's expertise and charter and they should be ones to review the audit proposals.

However, there were some obstacles in placing the burden on the large committee of nine, which will have four-member turnover in July. Griffin said he typically looks to a group of three to five to help him in reviewing RFPs.

Quigley suggested the entire Advisory Committee review the RFP applications, but two or three be delegated to interview the various firms.

Another option was to have the chairs of the Board of Selectmen, Advisory Committee and Capital Budget Committee review the proposals.

"The less the Selectmen and the water department are involved the better," Selectman Fred Koed said. The Advisory Committee is viewed as a "less political" board.

Town Manager Bill Griffin said he would be meeting with the Advisory Committee on Thursday (after the Mariner went to press) and would get their input.

The Selectmen will re-visit the issue at their meeting next Monday, June 28.

Relief available

During the water rate increase discussion and development many were concerned about how the heavy increase would affect those on fixed incomes and limited incomes. Town Manager Bill Griffin said some relief is available for those who qualify.

If water rate payers are eligible for property tax exemptions as defined by the Board of Assessor's office, then they can also receive a 50 percent reduction on their quarterly payment.

Details are still being worked out, but more information will be available at the Assessor's office at Town Hall, the town manager's office and water department likely by next week.

Still waiting on payments

The town is counting on two payments from local real estate developers to close a large portion of the water department's budget gap — $435,000 to be exact.

As of Thursday morning, the town had yet to receive either payment from the Cook Estate ($100,000) or Avalon Bay ($335,000). Both developers have pledged to have the payment in by the close of the fiscal year, June 30, 2010.

Town Manager Bill Griffin read a statement from Selectman Paul Carlson who apologized for representing at the water forum held before Town Meeting that the $100,000 Cook Estate payment had been received. The town received an initial $100,000 payment from the Cook Estate, but not the second.

The Building Department is working on Avalon's building permit. The issuance of the 200-unit apartment complex's building permit is the stated trigger for Avalon payment.

"I really want to make sure that everyone sees this as an independent process."
— Town Manager Bill Griffin said.

Here Comes The Sun – Answers to burning questions about overexposure. Practicing sun safety can prevent skin cancer and other health problems. Following these tips will help everyone enjoy the summer months. Limit sun exposure when the sun's rays are the strongest — 10a.m. to 4 p.m. If your shadow is shorter than you are, the sun is at its most intense. Refer to the daily UV index when planning outdoor events. The index indicates the risk of overexposure to skin-damaging ultraviolet radiation. Seek shade whenever possible. Trees block about 60 percent of the sun's rays. Wear a wide-brimmed hat, sunglasses and long-sleeved, tightly woven clothing. Sunglasses should block out 100 percent of UVA and UVB radiation. Use sunscreens that block UVA and UVB rays and have a Sun Protective Factor (SPF) of at least of at least 15. Sunscreens should be used every day, even when hazy and cloudy outside. Apply sunscreen liberally and evenly 15 minutes before going out and reapply frequently, especially after swimming.

OPINION

EDITORIAL

A good bylaw

Most residents welcome spring and summer because it means Daylight Saving Time, flowers, green grass, and Little League games.

But most Cohasseters don't feel that way about door-to-door solicitors. In fact until Town Meeting passed restrictions on door-to-door solicitors in 2006 — complaints about them filled the police/fire log once spring arrived and those complaints continued throughout the summer.

Under the bylaw, solicitors are required to register with the police where they apply for a $25 license. They are required to wear an ID issued by the police that includes their name and photograph. In addition solicitors have to provide police with their name, address, date of birth and height, weight and eye color, social security number; dates and times of canvassing activities; name and address of employer; and a brief description of the purposes of the solicitation.

Exceptions to the bylaw would be town, state or federal officers or employees on official business; minors under 18 unless in connection with a commercial activity; candidates for public office or campaign workers; those promoting political causes and those soliciting for charitable organizations unless those solicitors are paid.

We used to write a lot about door-to-door solicitation complaints in our Police Beat on page 3.

But since the bylaw went into effect – complaints are down because there are fewer door-to-door solicitors in Cohasset.

The solicitation by-law has indeed been effective in limiting the number of solicitors who come to town with the intention of getting in and quickly getting out. It has also provided some comfort to residents that the people who are soliciting have background checks performed by the police department.

Still a few door-to-door solicitors get confused and think they are in Hingham, Hull or Scituate – when in fact they have ventured over the town line. Others are apparently are unaware about the bylaw.

This past week, two men were selling Verizon FiOS service in Cohasset without registering. A resident complained and the solicitors were advised of the bylaw.

Police note that any willful violation of a town bylaw is an "arrestable" offense.

This spring, police arrested a 34-year-old Chicago man who was selling magazines for a company that was warned about violating the bylaw last year. Police said the magazine company was warned they needed a permit and disregarded that.

Bylaw at a glance

⟨ Solicitors are required to register with the police, where they can apply for a $25 license.

⟨ Solicitors are required to wear a badge, issued by the police, that includes their name and photograph.

⟨ Solicitors have to provide police with their name, address, date of birth and height, weight and eye color, social security number; dates and times of canvassing activities; name and address of employer; and a brief description of the purposes of the solicitation.

⟨ Exceptions to the bylaw are town, state or federal officers or employees on official business; minors under 18, unless in connection with a commercial activity; candidates for public office or campaign workers; those promoting political causes; and those soliciting for charitable organizations, unless those solicitors are paid.

Some training for the Cohasset Triathlon don't mind the chilly water

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Quick response noted

TO THE EDITOR:

Wow! What a crazy storm we had here in North Cohasset. Lots of trees down all over the streets.

Thanks for the quick response from our Police and Fire departments and National Grid for helping.

Gosh, Public Works Department men moving trees from the roadway in minutes and this was a Sunday when the guys had to be called in – thanks!

A special thank you to a guy with Idaho plates on his strong pickup truck. Without hesitation he took out strong rope and pulled the very large heavy branch from the tree that was precariously hanging over Jerusalem Road.

Another successful scholarship yard sale

TO THE EDITOR:

The Cohasset Democratic Town Committee wishes to congratulate the organizers and volunteers of the ninth annual scholarship yard sale, particularly the chairpersons, Donna McGee, Agnes McCann and Susan Kent.

It surely wouldn't have been a success without the generous donations of a variety of items from supportive townspeople and from the folks who purchased their "treasured" finds. Many thanks to those who donated and to those who made purchases making the scholarship drive a great success.

The Joseph F. Walsh III Scholarship this year was earned by James Earle. James is a member of the National Honor Society and has been active in school organizations and sports as well as volunteering for several worthy community projects. The Committee wishes to congratulate him and wish him the best of luck for his future.

Trying to Tri

COMMENTARY

NANCY WHITE

I am doing the Cohasset Triathlon.

Even though the race is Sunday and I've been working toward that goal for five months it still sounds a little foreign to me. I am doing the Cohasset Triathlon.

Let me be honest: I have never competed in a triathlon – or a road race, for that matter. Before February I never worked out consistently. In short, I was out of shape. I signed up for the triathlon after some serious thought and with some friendly pressure from Race Director Bill Burnett, who has been asking me since we met 3-1/2 years ago when I am going to do the triathlon.

For some reason I thought it would be a good idea, a good challenge for me. A goal that if I put my mind (and body) to I could achieve. And I was right. The experience of training for the triathlon has been an absolutely rewarding one.

There have been milestones on this journey – if you can call it that. The first day I walked into the gym – mildly intimidated – but with a smile and a swimsuit. It was before 7a.m. on a Monday morning. It made me pause a bit and ask myself – who is this girl anyway?

Then, there was the afternoon a few weeks later when I ran a 5K on the treadmill for the first time.

Then, a few weeks after that I hit the pavement that is the run course on a lovely spring Saturday. The views I have seen a gazillion times had a new tint to them that day. That first glimpse of Little Harbor at the top of Jerusalem, and then that expansive Atlantic Ocean over the rocky coast anchored by Minot Light – those familiar sights pulled me along as if they were my personal cheerleaders.

The Cohasset Triathlon holds a special place in my heart. Over the last few years I've had the opportunity to do many stories on the triathlon.

Some were written with a sense of anticipation and excitement, another with profound sadness. The next were inspirational and uplifting as I was entrusted with telling a small piece of the story of an amazing woman, Karen Lyons.

The next year, I spoke with athletes who just happened to have Type-1 Diabetes. The Tri-Team for Diabetes (back and bigger this year) was brought together by Karen Lyons and her son, Sam, to further raise awareness for juvenile diabetes and the work the Tri's charitable partner, JDRF, does.

This year, I spoke with local athletes who have a special place in their heart for the tri, too, all for very different reasons.

As you might have guessed these stories have influenced me as a writer, as a reporter and a person. Looking back it seems almost inevitable that I would do the race.

My training for the triathlon has been rewarding in so many ways but, most of all, it's convinced me that I can do something I didn't think I could do.

So, on Sunday morning, look for me. I'll be without my notebook, of course, which is usually how people identify me, but, I'll have a short wetsuit (dug out from my high school sailing days), my borrowed bike (thanks, McNamaras!) and with any luck (and a lot of cheering) a big smile on my face.

I am doing the Cohasset Triathlon.

See you on the course!

Bet you did not know about 'paper joints'

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Beach Street Wraps Up – This week, T L Edwards, our paving contractor came back to Town to finish the Beach Street area. On Monday, their structure crew arrived to reset all of the various structures located in the roadway to their correct height. Following that, the paving crew came on Wednesday, the 23rd to pave the remaining side roads off of Beach Street. As we write this, the final paving is to be done on Thursday, the 24th.

First we'd like to call your attention to the photo of the Edwards paving truck parked on Beach Street, which as you know is not one of our wider roads. Fortunately, with the help of a police detail and the careful Cohasset drivers both the trucks and the traffic were able to co-exist reasonably well on Beach Street.

There is an interesting paving trick that Edwards has used in the past that we'd like to call to your attention. It is the use of a "paper Joint." You might ask, "Why would anyone make a road joint out of paper?" The joint isn't really made out of paper, as you could guess. But, paper plays an important role in its namesake. As paper joint is used when a newly paved road meets another road that hasn't been paved yet.

The newly paved road is created with a sharp vertical edge at its end and a strip of paper is laid on the not-yet-paved road extending away from the sharp edge. Then the paper is covered with asphalt and the whole shebang is rolled into a shallow ramp to bridge the old paving to the new paving. The idea is that when the old road is finally paved, the paper can be lifted up taking with it the asphalt transition ramp. Then a smooth joint can be made between the two areas. The included photo shows a paper joint in the process of being made.

A second photo is also included that shows a paper joint that was created last year at the junction of Nichols Road and Jerusalem Road. When we go to pave Jerusalem Road, the transitional ramp can be easily removed and the Nichols/Jerusalem seam will be made with a smooth joint. Note that on Nichols the extraneous paper has worn away so that it is no longer visible. But, it still exists under the asphalt ramp.

Pavers par excellence.

Then the paper is covered with asphalt and the whole shebang is rolled into a shallow ramp to bridge the old paving to the new paving.

One of the more mundane tasks of paving is the job of keeping track of the work being done by the contractor. In the case of paving, Cohasset pays a fixed rate for each ton of asphalt placed on the road. So, it becomes very important to keep track of each truck of asphalt and the tons of asphalt off loaded. Consequently, the DPW, or their representative must physically see each truck off-load its asphalt and collect the weight slips that record the weight of every load. Otherwise, we could be charged incorrectly. The same is true for other work such as structure adjustments that are paid on a per unit basis. Town representatives must count each structure that is adjusted so that the billing will be correct.

Lastly, we'd like to say a brief word about our paving contractor. We have received several compliments from residents who commented of the excellent quality of their work and their courteousness. Thank you T L Edwards.

HEALTH NOTES

The words we use

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

In some instances, language must remain rigidly the same to insure the safety and reliability of an instruction.

Everyone's probably noticed the changes in our vocabulary. Earlier generations would frequently notice the words our kids used to use and since many were not only clever but useful, they became common in our daily language. Now, however, with the advent of mass communication devices including spoken, texting and moving images, the higher levels of communication now require more words, if only to cover the inadequacy of an older vocabulary to convey clear information. Written text, as used in books and newspapers, etc., has been required to understand and adopt many new words. Also, the meaning, implications and use of many words have changed. The changes have been gradual, occurring with only a few problems. For example, we all know that texting is a special form of writing; creating words and phrases on an electrical device rather than using a pencil, pen or the old and blessedly forgotten typewriter.

Official languages — In some instances, language must remain rigidly the same to insure the safety and reliability of an instruction. For example, air traffic controllers use internationally regulated language containing words from every nationality where planes fly and easily understood by anyone in any way connected with aircraft. The world has also adopted a similar maritime language as have most activities practiced on an international basis. Indeed, electronics has caused the blossoming of an international language understandable, with few exceptions, everywhere. Only in countries with strong ethnic, cultural or religious rules have complete languages survived without radical changes in usage and context. In such areas, bilingual capability is a necessity if the speaker is to use modern technology.

Here, we discuss a few words heard in casual speech now rapidly becoming pervasive. Health Notes willingly admits that some overheard conversations have been seemingly incomprehensible. A small sampling of such words should suffice: emo — the speaker says that she never uses the long word (emotion) anymore: goth — both words have appeared in some peoples vocabulary because of the general popularity of vampires and a web based format housing a standard Google search engine but using a Halloween-type frontis design.

Medical Prescription Language — There is no problem with the expansion of a language filled with technical expressions; it is just that medicines are often needed to be administered with explicit instructions as to dosage, time of ingestion, cautions about consuming some foods together with the medications, etc. Some horrible examples have been reported. For example: Pharmacies using labels translated with a computer program often provide inaccurate or confusing drug instructions filled sometimes with a reported medication error rate of 50 percent. Other doctors have reported patient's failure to understand simple prescriptions. Sometimes Latin words appear in prescriptions. Today, the only part of a prescription where Latin still appears is in the directions for taking the drug. This use has become a kind of medical shorthand between doctors and pharmacists. Some of these abbreviated terms have the potential to cause medication errors because they look so similar in handwriting, so their use is slowly on the decline.

Combining the current problems prescriptions have conveying medical instructions with the current increased vocabulary needs of the information age, it's surprising that we can understand the right way to drink a glass of water. On your prescription your doctor may have written these abbreviations: "Sig: I tab po qid pc & hs" Unless you have a medical background, that bunch of letters is probably unintelligible. In this example, the prescription abbreviations instruct the pharmacist to, 'Label the container for this patient's medication with the following instructions: "Take one tablet by mouth 4 times a day, after meals and at bedtime."

It would also be desirable if anyone intent on thinking up something to say, could avoid coining yet another new word.

Tasty barbecue was a real treat

One of them offered to take anyone who wished for a ride around town on his motorcycle.

On June 16 the Cohasset Police Association treated Cohasset elders to a tasty barbecue. This is an annual event. After lunch Chief DeLuca introduced several officers. One of them offered to take anyone who wished for a ride around town on his motorcycle. One or two brave souls took him up on the offer, and they thoroughly enjoyed it.

State Rep. Garrett Bradley visited the Center a few weeks ago. He spoke about Prescription Advantage, the Federal healthcare reform, and safe driving legislation for senior drivers of 75 years of age and over. The state legislature is currently debating this last issue. They are considering road tests and vision testing every five years. The latter test would be more extensive than that now required of all license holders.

We have heard Paul Carlson speak about the water department deficit. He told about what water costs and how it gets from its origin to homes in town. It is a serious issue, and by the time you read this, it will have been discussed at a special town meeting.

Jean Martin from the Mass. Council of Compulsive Gambling spoke about how we use our leisure time. We were invited to share some of the things we are interested in. It sounds like we are a pretty active group. She touched lightly on the subject of gambling – when it is o.k. and when it becomes a real problem.

In a follow-up program, Jennifer Moran from Home Instead spoke about activities to stimulate the mind, body, and soul. She distributed cards with activities to do when we are home alone or perhaps with a friend.

We really have a great program for elders here in Cohasset. Coral Grande and the staff, along with many wonderful volunteers, make sure we have the care and stimulation we need. When I was growing up I knew very few "old" people. My grandparents had all passed away before I was old enough to remember them. Very few of my friends had living grandparents. It is amazing to me how great in number we now are.

School program supervisor model is under review

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The model has come under fire in recent months.

For the 2009-2010 school year Cohasset Middle-High School underwent a subtle change. It abandoned the traditional model of department heads for each main subject area and went with "program supervisor" model.

Each program supervisor oversees the curriculum and the teachers for a grouping of subject areas, areas that align with the 21st century learning. The change yielded a savings for the bottom line budget, in addition to promoting more cross-curriculum teaching and learning, school administrators have said.

"(It was presented) that there was a cost savings besides an actual operational reason," School Committee chairman Helene Lieb said in a phone interview this week.

Superintendent of Schools Denise Walsh could not be reached for comment for this story.

The model has come under fire in recent months. At the end of May, the teachers' union offered the shift to program supervisors as one of the many reasons for what they said was a loss of communication and solicitation of input. In a statement to the School Committee, they called the position "administrators who sometimes teach" rather than "teachers who had some administrative duties" in the department head model.

Even further back in March, program supervisors were faulted by some in the community – and teachers – for not seeking enough input from the faculty in changes made to the high school program of studies.

In the traditional department head model there is a department head for each of the six major subject groups (fine arts, math, foreign language, science, English, and social studies). In the department head model the Athletic Director is considered a department head as well. Department heads were teachers, who received a 15 percent of their salary stipend for performing the administrative duties of the department.

In the program supervisor model, there are three administrative positions. There is a program supervisor is for STEM, which is the umbrella name for science, technology, engineering, and mathematics, another is for humanities, which includes English, social studies and foreign language, and one for fine arts (art, music), which covers K through 12. There is also a wellness program supervisor for K-12 physical education, health and character, and another for athletics (middle-high school extracurricular sports).

The program supervisors are contract positions and are not part of the teachers' union. With the department head model teachers (the department heads) were evaluating teachers, Lieb said.

According to a handout drafted during the development of the fiscal 2010 budget, and reviewed again at the June 16 School Committee meeting, the plan also calls for "curriculum specialist/coaches." This position would be a $2,500 annual stipend position designed to support the program supervisor.

This portion of the program supervisor model was not implemented during the 2009-2010 school year.

Lieb said it was her understanding no one applied for the curriculum coach positions, adding she thought the coach positions would have been helpful to aid in communication.

According to the handout, which only gives the "projected salary" for the program supervisors, there was a projected $168,000 budget savings with the program supervisor model.

"At this point we're exploring what went wrong," Lieb said. "The fact that the teachers were not included in decision making concerns me…I'm concerned how we got to a place where the staff morale is so low – and it's complicated how it got that way."

Lieb said the discussion on the program supervisor model would continue with the School Committee in the coming months.

"It's going to take time and examination," Lieb said.

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. Beacon Hill Roll Call records local representatives' votes on two roll calls from the week of June 14-18. There were no roll calls in the Senate last week.

SEND GUN BILL BACK TO JUDICIARY COMMITTEE (H 4012)

House 111-32, approved a motion to send Gov. Deval Patrick's gun bill back to the Judiciary Committee. The lengthy measure includes provisions that would limit gun buyers to one firearm purchase per month; allow prosecutors to request a dangerousness hearing for individuals charged with illegally carrying a firearm and place additional restrictions on the licensing and handling of machine guns.

The bill had received an unfavorable report from the Judiciary Committee - whose 4-4 tie vote means the committee recommended that the bill be defeated when it reaches the House. The recommendation of a committee is very important in the Legislature as few bills are ever passed and signed into law without first receiving a favorable committee report.

Senate Judiciary Committee Chair Sen. Cynthia Creem (D-Newton) took issue with the tie vote and said that the result should have been 6-4 in favor of the bill. She argued that a pair of senators had met the deadline and voted in favor of the bill but their votes were not reflected in the tally.

House Judiciary Committee Chair Eugene O'Flaherty (D-Chelsea) disagreed with Creem and noted that the 4-4 count is accurate. He said the two senators in question had several days to vote on the matter and did not cast their votes by the deadline.

O'Flaherty made the motion to recommit the bill to the Judiciary Committee for another vote in light of the confusion. During debate, he said that although he insists that the tie vote is accurate, the House is a collegial body and he supports sending the bill back to committee.

Rep. George Peterson(R-Grafton) spoke on the House floor against sending the bill back to committee for another vote. He said that the rules had been followed and that supporters of Patrick's bill are unhappy with the tie vote and want to send it back to committee so that it will receive a favorable report.

Representatives had various reasons for voting in favor of or against sending the bill back to committee. Some supporters of sending it back are in favor of the bill and want it to receive a favorable report. Others said they voted to recommit because they did not want a cloud hanging over the handling of the bill.

Some opponents of sending it back oppose the bill and want it to remain on the House floor with an unfavorable report that would increase the chances that it is defeated. Others voted not to recommit because they said that the proper rules and procedures had been followed.

(A "Yes" vote is for sending the bill back to the Judiciary Committee for another vote. A "No" vote is against sending it back.)

Y

CHANGE CHARITY LAWS AND INCREASE FEES ON CHARITIES (H 4726)

House 139-0, approved a bill making changes to the state's charity laws including giving the attorney general the authority to impose civil penalties on charities that do not register with the state. The measure also changes the requirements for the dissolution of a charitable organization and requires only charities with assets to petition for dissolution with the Supreme Judicial Court.

Other provisions increase annual filing fees for charities that make over $1 million per year; impose a new one-time initial registration fee of $100 for all charities and increase the registration fee for professional solicitors from $300 to $1,000, professional fundraising counsel from $200 to $400 and commercial co-ventures from $50 to $200.

Supporters said that many charities fail to register with the state and that the bill would put teeth into the law by giving the attorney general enforcement power. They noted that the new and increased fees will generate an estimated $2.3 million in revenue for the state.

Although no one voted against the bill, critics say that the fee and registration hikes are outrageous in light of the recession and the state's faltering economy. They noted that many charities are already suffering financial problems as donations decline.

The Senate has approved a different version of this proposal. The House version now goes to the Senate for consideration.

(A "Yes" vote is for the bill and the new and increased fees.)

Y

ALSO UP ON BEACON HILL

ROTC AND UNION DUES (H 4759) - The House and Senate approved and sent to Gov. Patrick a $204 million supplemental budget that includes an amendment which would exempt high school instructors of the Reserve Officer Training Corps (ROTC) from being required to pay union dues.

The amendment was approved on a voice vote without a roll call. It was filed in reaction to an incident involving retired Marine Maj. Stephen Godin, an ROTC instructor at North High School in Worcester. The Education Association of Worcester has ordered Godin to start paying $452 in annual union dues or be fired from his job. Godin has refused to pay the dues. He says that his salary and health insurance are paid by the military and that he gets no union benefits.

REGULATE ROBO CALLS (H 4730) - The Telecommunications, Utilities and Energy Committee heard testimony on a bill that would restrict robo calls by allowing consumers to sign up for a "no robo calls" list and fining companies, groups or individuals up to $5,000 if they call someone on the list. Robo calls are automated phone calls that use a computerized autodialer and a computer-generated pre-recorded message that is broadcast to the person who is being called. They are most often used by candidates running for public office.

The measure is modeled after the 2002 law that bans telemarketers from calling consumers who sign up for the Do Not Call Registry. Other provisions restrict robo calls to between 8 a.m. and 8 p.m. and allow an individual on the list to sue for up to $5,000 any person or company that violates the list by calling an individual more than once a year. The proposal also mandates that any robo call be immediately preceded by a live operator who obtains the person's consent before the robo call is played.

Supporters said that this long overdue bill would allow people to put a stop to these annoying invasions of privacy and will restore some peace and tranquility to homes especially during the dinner hour. Some noted that the bill was filed in response to the millions of robo calls made during the special election to succeed the late Sen. Edward Kennedy.

IMPROVING ON NATURE

If you are wondering whether synthetic motor oils are worth the extra cost, consider that they also provide a wider performance envelope, with a number of significant advantages in several areas. For one, synthetic oils flow well at low temperatures, making them better for winter use. They also afford exceptional thermal stability, making them good choices for high load, high-heat summer conditions. They are less volatile (which can translate to reduced oil consumption), more forgiving of abuse, and less susceptible to the harmful effects of oxidation. However, although synthetic base stock may hold up longer, allowing longer intervals between oil changes is discouraged because the normal buildup of internal deposits goes on and the breakdown of additives continues to occur.

If you have any questions about what kind of oil is best for your car -- or if you can't remember the last time you had an oil change -- then you need to call ATLANTIC TIRE AND ALIGNMENT today. Our ASE-certified technicians will take the time to explain the pros and cons of each type of oil. We can also change your oil and provide the other forms of regular maintenance that will keep your car running longer. That can save you money and hassle down the road. Call 781-925-3200 for an appointment today. Our address is 25 Atlantic House Rd. If you've gotten in an accident, be sure to check out our sister store, Cohasset Collision Center, 179 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy., Cohasset, 781-383-3001.

Hint: Because synthetic oil is chemically produced, it contains no contaminants; conventional oils contain small amounts of sulfur, wax, and asphaltic material that can lead to detonation and varnish/sludge buildup.

Catrina Herman, 5, with her mother, Jeri, during the Relay For Life in Cohasset on July 11.

A big tribute for a tiny survivor

The highlight of the event, the Survivor's Lap, commenced at 6:30 p.m., and among those walking their lap was Cohasset's own Catrina Herman, age 5.

The American Cancer Society Relay For Life, which took place in Cohasset on Friday, July 11, was cause for both remembrance and celebration as teams joined together with one common goal: to end cancer.

The 19-hour walk-a-thon raised funds to help ensure that the ACS continues to meet the demand for its services. The highlight of the event, the Survivor's Lap, commenced at 6:30 p.m., and among those walking their lap was Cohasset's own Catrina Herman, age 5

Team Sweet Relief, led by co-captains Lyn Congdon Previte, director of Sweet Relief Private Nursery and Preschool, and Heather Nicholls, Sweet Relief parent and daughter of Cohasset Relay director, Harry St. Onge, formed their team in honor of Catrina and her successful battle with Wilm's Tumor cancer.

"Catrina is the reason we participate in the ACS Relay for Life – she is why we "Relay"! Together, we have the power to help create a world where cancer can no longer claim another year of anyone's life" said Previte, herself a 10-year cancer survivor.

Team Sweet Relief came ready to Relay, complete with their own tent, Happy Day posters created by Sweet Relief students, snacks to fuel participants and luminaries. Hearts were full of hope and love for Catrina and her family – all beating strong in support for a world that is cancer-free.

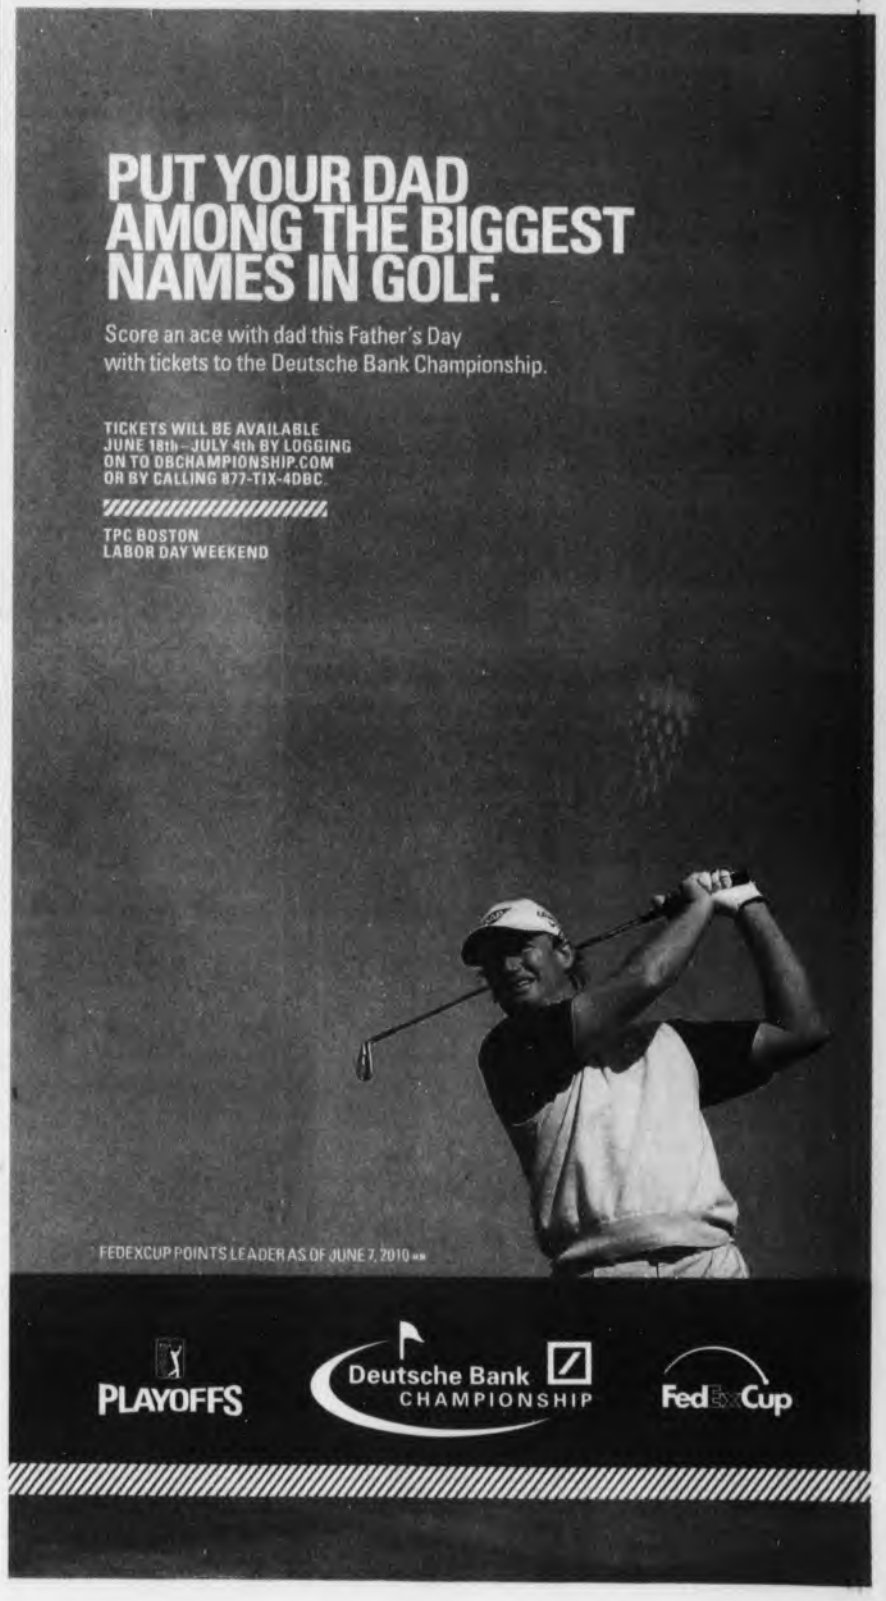
An early summer scene at Sandy Beach.

Portion of parking lot closed for Tri

If you plan on being at the beach after 2 p.m., we encourage you to park toward the entrance end by the bathhouse.



The first full week of beach operations is complete. We have been blessed with fantastic weather, a clean beach, no school and day-time low tides. Summer has officially started!

It is unfortunate but we can no longer offer garbage recycling at Sandy Beach. Our vendor from last year who graciously donated their recycling services can no longer do so because the garbage was never separated between the recycling cans and the general refuse cans. We encourage you to bring your recyclables home.

The fourth Annual Cohasset Triathlon will take place this Sunday at Sandy Beach. While the event is scheduled for Sunday June 27 from 8 a.m. to noon, the set-up will begin on Saturday June 26. Beginning at 2 p.m. on Saturday a portion of the parking lot will be closed to accommodate the set-up for this event. If you plan on being at the beach after 2 p.m., we encourage you to park toward the entrance end by the bathhouse. The set-up will take place at the north end of the parking lot. The beach will remain open until 7 p.m. on Saturday evening.

Lifeguards will not be on duty on Sunday morning. Sandy Beach will be officially closed until noon on Sunday.

Best of luck to all participants!

Letter to the Editor

Cohasset Harbormaster praised for help, graciousness

Editor's note: Mr. Corey asked the Town Manager to be sure the local paper received a copy of his letter.

Dear Mr. Griffin:

Thank you! I'm writing to tell you that you have an exemplary, generous, terrific Harbormaster, Ms. Gibbons.

About a month ago, I was motoring south (my mast was in Duxbury) from Boston to Duxbury, when by diesel overheated. I was a mile from the harbor, a half mile offshore, on 400-feet of rope, thinking I could fix it myself. I radioed your Harbormaster just to advise her of my location and that all was secure.

She offered a tow and a mooring, but I declined, saying I really couldn't afford it. She came out anyway to check on me. We agreed, given wind direction and strength, I'd be in good shape for the night. I slept quite well and the view was splendid!

The next morning, however, I couldn't re-start the engine and had to ask for a tow. Your Harbormaster could not have been more gracious!

She and an assistant towed me back to your stunning harbor, put me on a mooring, well-oversized for my 28-foot sailboat, let me leave my dinghy at your town dock and the assistant (about to enter military service) offered me a ride to the train station.

She allowed me to stay on the mooring while I became better friends with my diesel, coming to Cohasset on my days off from Lowe's. I found parts in Rhode Island and, with a reassuring consultation from her diesel experience, had the engine running well again.

I'm so thankful to Cohasset for your gracious consideration and help. She was really terrific, going way beyond the norms for harbormasters.

I've been looking for opportunities to help other strangers as a way of repaying her kindness.

Thank you!

Frederick Corey

COHASSET TRIATHLON

Every triathlete has a story

Sunday's event draws from all over and next door

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

This Sunday morning, hundreds of athletes will descend upon Sandy Beach for the fourth annual Cohasset Triathlon. They will dash off Sandy Beach, zoom on their bikes down North Main and run around Little Harbor.

Some will have never seen Cohasset before, while others know the kinks on Jerusalem Road like the back of their hand.

In its four-year existence, the Cohasset Triathlon has become one of the top sprint distance races in the area. It has attracted Olympians, some of the best athletes in the sport and amateurs from far and wide. It has also become the biggest volunteer-driven fundraiser for the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation (JDRF), an organization dedicated to finding a cure for Type-1 (juvenile) diabetes.

In spite of, or perhaps because of, the triathlon's tremendous growth over the past few years, more local athletes than ever have taken the plunge and signed up.

"The triathlon shows off the best our town has to offer – and I don't mean just the water views. It's the community coming together and putting its best foot forward."
— Bill Burnett, race director

These local triathletes have come to the race for different reasons – and each one has a story to tell. The Mariner spoke with five Cohasset athletes and a Scituate couple who will take on Sunday's race with all they've got.

"I am proud of Cohasset and it gives me great satisfaction to bring this race to our community. The triathlon shows off the best our town has to offer – and I don't mean just the water views. It's the community coming together and putting its best foot forward," said race director Bill Burnett. "When I see residents swimming laps at Sandy Beach, biking the course and running on our streets – it's the best."

This year, the tri includes the largest contingent of Cohasset racers – a total of 153 residents – in the history of the race, Burnett said.

The race will set off from Sandy Beach at 8:45 a.m. on Sunday (June 27) morning. A total of 850 individual racers and 40 relay teams will compete. While Cohasseters will see many familiar faces in the race field, there will be at least one nearly everyone will recognize – Massachusetts Senator Scott Brown is competing in the race.

Other notable athletes include: Olympian Gary Hall, Jr., Olympian swimmer Jenny Thompson, Olympian triathlete Jarrod Shoemaker, Pro triathlete Alicia Kaye (Cohasset female winner last two years) and Hall of Fame triathlete Karen Smyers.

★ Andrew Quigley: A new sport at middle age ★

Number of triathlons: Competed in each of the Cohasset Triathlons, two Nantasket Triathlons, and is set to do the Nantucket Triathlon in two weeks.

Age: 56.

Occupation: Clerk Magistrate at the Hingham Court.

Quote: "Participating in the Cohasset Triathlon is a lot of fun – someone told me that for middle-agers like myself, it's like going to a rock concert, but you also feel like you're part of something larger than yourself. The entire town is transformed and the people along the course are very supportive."

His triathlon story: The 56-year-old Andrew Quigley is a lifelong athlete. A rower in college, a softball and basketball league participant, road race runner (even completing a marathon) but, like many lifelong athletes, he was looking for something new – and something that put less stress on his body and joints.

Enter the Cohasset Triathlon in 2007. An event that just happens to go right by his house – and what has been for him "a life-enhancing event."

"Competing in a few triathlons each season now is what makes me get out and exercise," Quigley said. The nature of triathlon is cross-training, a necessity, he said, to ward off wear and tear on the body. The triathlon introduced him to true road cycling and he bikes to work a few times each week.

Andrew Quigley.

"You forget how much you had biking when you were younger. You just take off and fly," Quigley said.

The most rewarding part of the triathlon for him is, of course, finishing the race, and being in the kind of physical shape to do it well.

"Just to do it is its own reward," Quigley said.

★ Sarah Charron: Mother and marathoner ★

Number of triathlons: Competed in the last two Cohasset Triathlons, in addition to finishing the Boston Marathon the last three years.

Age: 40.

Occupation: Mother of two, Nathan, 6, and Hannah, 4.

Quote: "The race is great for our community. So many people set the triathlon as a fitness goal – and these are people where triathlon is a brand new thing and they are doing it because it's here in their town."

Her triathlon story: Sarah Charron is a runner who does the triathlon. She's been running since she joined the track team as a freshman in high school and hasn't stopped yet. She's competed in road races of all distances – 5K, 5-mile, 10K, 10-mile, half marathon, 25K, and seven marathons (four of them the Boston Marathon).

"I prefer to go out for a run," Charron said. Coming off the mid-April Boston Marathon, and the training that goes along with that long-distance race, she has to think differently about her triathlon training and picking up her pace. She starts getting out on the bike and swimming at Sandy Beach once the water has warmed up enough.

Last year, she was the third Cohasset woman to cross the finish line.

When she signed up for her first Cohasset Tri, she bought a wetsuit as a Mother's Day present to herself two years ago and dusted off her road bike that had been sitting in the basement for five years untouched.

Sarah Charron.

Given her busy schedule raising two kids, like many amateur triathletes, Charron said she does not train as much as she'd like to.

"I just do my best…the big thing for me is I have friends who train with me," Charron said, adding that's one of the things she's noticed about the tri is the group training aspect. "There are little groups of people training together."

And on race day she hopes the race and the many pieces of it come together smoothly.

"It's so nice to do a race in your town; there's a comfort level. Having friendly faces on the course is a benefit," Charron said.

Sarah Filion, Andrew Quigley, and Sarah Charron are among 153 Cohasset residents who will compete in Sunday's fourth annual Cohasset Triathlon.

★ Sarah Filion: First time triathlete ★

Number of triathlons: Cohasset Triathlon is her first one. Also registered to race in Nantucket Triathlon (July 10) and later this summer the Cranberry Olympic Distance Triathlon (in Olympic distance triathlons the legs are about double a sprint distance, like Cohasset Tri). She's also going to do the Scituate Duathlon in October.

Age: 39.

Occupation: Attorney, general counsel of a Boston-based hedge fund.

Quote: "I'm not in it to win it, but I want to feel comfortable and I want to be competitive."

Her triathlon story: Signing up for the Cohasset Triathlon was a bit of "spur of the moment" decision for Sarah Filion.

"It was something that always impressed me, but I wasn't sure I was triathlon material," Filion said. A faithful runner before she even thought about a triathlon, Filion has worked hard over the past few months to improve her biking and swimming skills.

Balancing full-time work and other responsibilities, training has found its way into all different time slots of her life – before work, at lunch, after work, weekends.

"Training for three different disciplines actually takes some effort," Filion said. But, once she got started she found a warm, inviting community of athletes.

"I've definitely gotten a lot more into it than I expected," Filion said. She worked with a triathlon swim coach on the North Shore to help ease her nerves about the swim portion. She bought a road bike sized just for her.

Sarah Filion.

"Everyone is super encouraging. When I told them I was doing my first triathlon, they would always say 'you can do this, you're going love it.'" Filion said.

And she agrees with them.

"I've really been liking it and what I'm getting out of it," Filion said. "I'm looking forward to the finish line, completing it and hopefully feeling good at the end of the race."

★ Josh Flanagan: Elite triathlete ★

Number of triathlons: Had competed in the Cohasset Triathlon since it started and has been racing triathlons since 2002, including sprint and Olympic distance triathlons and one Ironman triathlon.

Age: 30.

Occupation: Resident at UMASS Hospital in Worcester.

Quote: "The Cohasset Tri course is a course that works for everybody. Even on a cloudy day it's still beautiful."

His triathlon story: Josh Flanagan will begin the triathlon on Sunday morning with the first group to start off Sandy Beach – the elite and pro triathletes.

Triathlon is the ideal sport for Flanagan. An avid mountain biker and competitor growing up and a high school track participant, he did his first triathlon at the end of his senior year at Middlebury College in Vermont.

"I put all the pieces together and it's worked out really well," Flanagan said.

But, like all amateur athletes, he faces challenges in "fitting it all in." Now, a resident at a UMASS hospital in Worcester, Flanagan has strange and long hours.

"My workout schedule is different every week. Sometimes I'll run at night with a head lamp," Flanagan said.

While he's done triathlons all over the US competing in the Cohasset Tri is a special experience, "being a race you grew up running and training on is great. There's a sense of comfort."

The contingent of talent the Cohasset Tri brings out is impressive, he said. And the fundraising for the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation (JDRF) provides is an inspirational aspect that sets it apart.

Josh Flanagan.

"It's an amazing event, people who never heard of triathlon before are doing it…it's really impressive," Flanagan said.

COHASSET TRIATHLON

★ David Hosp: Cancer survivor ★

Number of triathlons: Cohasset will be his first tri.

Age: 41.

Occupation: Attorney and writer.

Quote: "I'd feel like I was giving up if I didn't finish."

His triathlon story: A year ago, David Hosp was all set to do the Cohasset Triathlon. He had trained for it for months and was completing his final swim off Sandy Beach before the big day. When he got out of the water a small signal told him something was wrong. He called his doctor. He told him he couldn't do the race. Instead, he spent the day of the race having tests done at the hospital.

They discovered a lump in his throat – thyroid cancer. Over the past year, Hosp has under gone surgery and radioactive treatment. Yet, the difficulties of the last year have pushed him to get out there, train and finish the race this year.

"Training has been more difficult than last year. I still don't have all my energy back," Hosp said. "Having the tri out there helps me get up early and work out. It has helped me take some control back."

Despite his strong desire to finish the race this year, Hosp said a triathlon is not something he has longed to do. He was drawn to the race after his wife competed in it as part of a relay team two years ago.

"Very little about what's actually involved in a triathlon appeals to me," Hosp said, with a laugh. He's never done a swim with a lot of people and has bad knees that are painful when running.

It's the atmosphere of the event that he was drawn to.

David Hosp.

"It's a great event and the people who do it walk away with a huge sense of accomplishment and community," and now it is a personal mission to cross that finish line.

"Doing it, having it behind me, knowing I finished it after all the stuff I dealt with the last year…There's an aspect of wanting to overcome it," Hosp said.

★ Mark and Clare Bast: Drawn by the cause, JDRF ★

Number of triathlons: This will be their fourth Cohasset Triathlon. The Basts are the founders of "Sarah's Soldiers," a team of triathletes that have raised more than $100,000 over the last four years.

Quote: "Sarah's Soldier's motto is 'Strength. Courage. Love.' because that's what you need to deal with what Type-1 diabetes. And Sarah can do anything because she has all that."

Their triathlon story: In 2005, Scituate residents Mark and Clare Bast's four-year-old daughter, Sarah, joined the more than three million in the US diagnosed with Type-1 (juvenile) diabetes. In the aftermath of the diagnosis there was a huge learning curve for them to learn about the disease and how to manage it effectively. Luckily, Mark said, they had a support group of friends and neighbors.

When it was announced that a new triathlon in next-door Cohasset would be a fundraiser for the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation (JDRF) they knew they had to be involved. They formed a team of 12 friends, named it "Sarah's Soldiers" and raised $33,000 in that first year.

Flash forward three years later the team is now 45 people strong and has surpassed the $100,000 mark for money raised for JDRF. An additional 15 people are volunteering at the race in support of Sarah's Soldiers.

"It's been phenomenal and it's really come from a grassroots-type movement," Mark said. "Our mission is to build a community that promotes healthy lifestyles, raises money and awareness for JDRF and support those that have the challenge of living with diabetes."

A team of 45 athletes calling themselves "Sarah's Soldiers" race for nine-year-old Sarah Bast, who has Type-1 (juvenile) Diabetes. They have raised more than $100,000 for JDRF in the last four years.

The competition is only part of it – participation and having fun is the focus, "for me it's the community that's come together to help us in the challenge of finding a solution for diabetes."

Many members of Sarah's Soldiers have gained a passion for the sport and have gone on to compete in other triathlons.

"We're going to keep getting bigger," Mark said.

Partnership with JDRF

The Cohasset Triathlon has partnered with the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation (JDRF) for the fourth consecutive year. A portion of the event's proceeds will go directly to the JDRF. In the past two years, the triathlon was the largest volunteer driven event for JDRF in the country. Over the last four years, through racers efforts the tri has raised over $500,000 for JDRF and the fight to find a cure for Type 1 diabetes.

The JDRF was founded in 1970 by the parents of children with juvenile, or Type 1, diabetes, who were desperate to find a cure for the disease as quickly as possible. Type 1 diabetes is a disease that strikes children suddenly, makes them insulin dependent for life, and carries the constant threat of devastating complications.

The devastating condition is diagnosed most often in childhood or adolescence, but it can strike adults as well. According to the JDRF website, type 1 diabetes is an auto-immune disease in which the body's immune system attacks and destroys the insulin-producing cells of the pancreas. While the causes of this process are not yet entirely understood, scientists believe that both genetic factors and environmental triggers are involved.

Kids with Type 1 diabetes no longer produce insulin, but without it, they cannot survive. Therefore, they must take insulin either through several shots each day or through an insulin pump, which is inserted by catheter into the child and worn 24 hours a day.

These kids must also have their blood sugar levels checked by pricking their fingers as many as ten times throughout every day and night in order to keep them at safe levels. The short-term effects of a severe low blood sugar can be dangerous, and the long-term complications from high blood sugars can include heart disease, kidney failure, blindness and amputations.

Since inception, JDRF has provided more than $1 billion to diabetes research worldwide. More than 80 percent of JDRF's expenditures directly support research and education about research.

To donate to JDRF, visit the Cohasset Triathlon website, www.cohassettri.com or the JDRF website, www.jdrf.org. For more information about juvenile diabetes and the JDRF, call (800) 533-CURE (2873) or e-mail info@jdrf.org.

Cohasset's Kierce wins F1 Boston title

By William Wassersug
WWASSERS@CNC.COM

In his first go-round in F1 racing, Cohasset's Chris Kierce finished second in his summer league while he was learning the ropes and finding out if it was the sport for him.

In the recent winter/spring season, Kierce found his answer.

The 11-year old Deer Hill student, who will start middle school next year, is definitely a racer.

In the winter/spring season, Kierce won a triple crown, winning the championship race at the end of the season, the point standings for the season and recorded the fastest average lap for the season in his age group.

Not bad for a driver in his second season.

He also started to do some endurance racing, which had been a goal, and paired up with younger drivers, racing against adults, he finished third in an endurance race in April.

"Chris always wanted to do an endurance race," said dad, Paul. "We were going to take him to Lime Rock, Conn. To race there, but he was an inch too short. That race was against adults. We ended up entering an endurance race at F1 in April and his team finished third."

In the endurance race, teams took turns racing 10 laps at a time before switching drivers while moving for an hour-and-a-half.

For the regular season, Kierce was thrilled to take home three trophies.

"That was exciting," he said. "My dad told me I should focus on winning the league title, but when I started in first in the last (championship series in the final week) I told myself I to stay in first the whole race. When I pulled into the pit all my relatives were screaming and clapping."

In the championship series the final day, the top six racers were pitted against each other for three races on a course that combined the facility's two courses, making for some serious driving.

"When they announced the winners, my dad had asked about the fastest driver, and they said, again, it's Chris Kierce.

Kierce finished the 22-week season with 179 points in the Junior Winter/Spring G2A Division to win it fairly easily.

His fastest speed of the season was 46.5 mph.

Every golfer should put together a bucket list

TEE TIME

PAUL HARBER

If you're a New England golfer, there are a few destinations you must put on your bucket list.

Locally, take the trip to Truro and play Highland Links. It's not golf like you play at your home course and don't worry about your overall score. Just absorb the ambience of golf the way it used to be played.

I would also feel cheated as a golfer if I didn't play Sugarloaf and Samoset Resort in Maine, Lake Winnapauskee CC and the Balsalms in New Hampshire or Okemo Valley and Quechee Lakes in Vermont. You have to go on road trips to Myrtle Beach or Hilton Head at least once and you can't call yourself a golfer if you haven't taken sojourns to Arizona and Florida while it is snowing back here at home.

Money? Golfers don't worry about money. You find a way, just like getting up and down from a fairway bunker.

Another destination is Augusta National, site of the Masters. You have to find a way to finagle a ticket, perhaps to a practice round, which won't set you back too many dollars.

A must is a visit to the old sod, where the game originated. Scotland, Ireland, England, it doesn't matter.

Rick Rodwell of Marshfield, Eamon Ridge of Hopkinton, Richard Powers of Milton and Tom Ridge of Braintree were fortunate enough to make the trip to Old Head Golf Links in Kinsale, Ireland this spring and it was a golfing adventure they will always treasure.

The caddy that the men had once caddied for Tiger Woods when he visited Old Head.

Making the trip even more enjoyable was the fact that this foursome did not pay for the trip.

They won it through a school charity raffle.

The trip included free round trip airfare for four, a private home for a week and two days of golf at Old Head in Kinsale, Ireland.

The highlight of the trip for Rodwell, who has only golfed a few times in his life, was when he sank a 50-foot put on the first day.

Old Head is world-class golf course on the southwest coast of Ireland, surrounded by the Atlantic Ocean. Nine holes play along the cliff tops, and all 18 holes provide stunning ocean views. With the ever-changing sea breezes, the course provides a stern test to the touring pro and the high handicapper alike.

What a week

Canton's Michael Philip had a week he won't forget for a long while. In a four-day span he turned 25, became engaged, was medalist in the State Amateur qualifier at Acushnet River Valley Golf Course, setting a competitive course record of 5-under 67. "I have never actually won a tournament," Philip told Becky Blaeser of the Massachusetts Golf Association. "This is just awesome." . . . Jim Forsgard of South Shore Country Club and Andy Falcone of Indian Pond Country Club shared medalist honors, fashioning a 2-over par 74 to share medalist honors at Bayberry Hills Golf Course on Cape Cod. A total of nine qualifying spots were available at that West Yarmouth site. Forsgard is one player who looks forward to the opportunity to return to Match Play at the Massachusetts Amateur Championship. Three years ago, Forsgard posted his best career finish at this event by advancing to the first round of Match Play at Concord Country Club. "It was the only time that I ever made match play in the Amateur and I got thumped really good in the first round by Joe Keller," said Forsgard. "I was really nervous back then, but I think that experience will help me this time around." An admitted nine-to-five guy who does his best to balance a career, two teenage daughters and a competitive golf game, Forsgard is hoping that his performance today bodes well for what is to come next month. "I love it," said Forsgard about Myopia Hunt Club. "I played the Mid-Amateur there (in 2003) and we played it in college and I have always loved it. I would have been disappointed to have not qualified because I am really looking forward to playing there."

Rochester CC is the soul of American golf

By Paul Harber
PHARBER@CNC.COM

Last week the eye of the golf world was on Pebble Beach for the 110th United States Open, where the true royalty of the game's elite congregated to hold their National Championship.

Course of the Week

But the soul of American golf is at places such as Rochester Golf Club, a home-made course where Joe Public can tee it up and search for the perfect drive and well-struck iron that makes the heart sing.

When Francis Ouimet won the US Open in 1913 he did all of us a favor by introducing working class America to this wonderful game that was so coveted by the wealthy who did everything they could to keep it away from the unwashed masses.

But it is folks like Humphrey Tallman, who built his own public golf course, who opened the game to everyone.

Tallman was a war hero.

As the story goes, Tallman was a Navy pilot who flew off the USS Hornet in World War II in the Pacific campaign.

There were anxious moments.

He ditched one plane at Midway and was shot down in the Coral Sea. His family received that telegram nobody wants to see coming.

People love Rochester Country Club says head professional Rusty Gunnarson, "not just because it's quiet. It's just a nice walk in the country."

"I saw the telegram. They still have it," said Rusty Gunnarson, the club's golf professional. "It said his plane went down, he was missing in action and presumed . . ."

"But the way I heard it, the next day the family got a telegram telling them he was OK," added Gunnarson.

Tallman was awarded the Navy Cross and remained in the service until 1971 when he retired.

He came to Rochester and built this golf course. It was nine holes.

His son, Stuart, who runs the course now, helped build the original nine when he was a youngster and he pretty much built the back nine in the early 1990s by himself.

"Every year, he makes a little improvement in the course and it keeps getting better and better," said Gunnarson. "Last winter, he rebuilt the 10th green; he elevated it and pitched it forward."

It's tougher than the yardage. The fairways are tight and the greens are small. "Just don't aim at the flags if they are on the edges," said Gunnarson.

During the weekends, you have to make a tee time. But during the week, just show up.

And, most importantly to some, it's affordable; For about $25, you get your money's worth. "It is $35 for a round with a cart during the week and it's two dollars more during the weekend," said Gunnarson. "Most people walk."

"People love it and not just because it's quiet. It's just a nice walk in the country," he added.

Gunnarson's favorite hole is No. 13, a 300-yard par-4. "It used to be the first hole," said the pro. "It's not a long hole, but you have to lay up off the tee and mange to hit your approach over a creek to a tiny green that has trouble everywhere," he said.

"All the par-3s are fun," said Gunnarson, "especially the fifth hole."

It's because you might have to hit your tee shot over a tree, that's about halfway to the green.

"If the pin is left and the tee markers on the left side, you don't have to worry about the tree," said Gunnarson. "But if everything is to the right, you've got a problem. You either have to take it up over the tree or have a pretty good cut shot to get at the pin."

It's a par 70 that stretches to 5,280 yards from the tips. There are two par-5s, the 465-yard sixth and the 515-yard finishing hole. The course rating is 66.1 and the slope is 119.

But the fun factor is off the charts.

Chris Kierce drives at F1 Boston. He won a triple crown of awards in the just completed season.

On the fast track

FROM KIERCE, PAGE 19

In his division, he notched the fastest times on both tracks.

He's still enjoying himself.

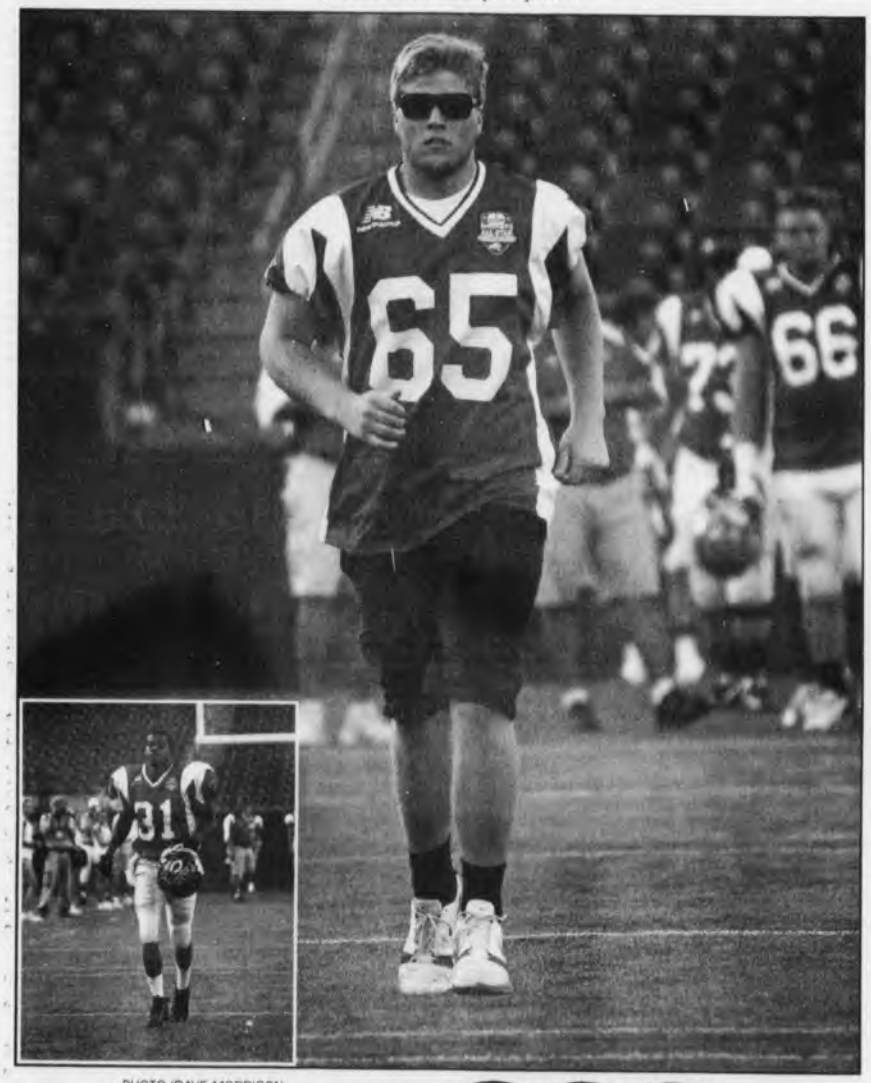
"I'm still having fun," he said. "I love driving around the track and going fast. It was great. I set the record for the whole season's fastest lap time."

For his birthday in March, Paul got Chris tickets to this weekend's NASCAR race in New Hampshire.

"I'm really excited," Chris said. "I haven't gone before. My favorite driver is Jeff Gordon. My birthday is in March, so I've been waiting for this day to come."

Paul said Chris surprised him with the championship race victory.

"They combined both tracks," he said. "Usually the race for the top six is one track. This time they combined the two, so it was like driving 30 laps per race. It was tough. It wore on him."



Trophies weren't awarded right away, because they were engraved, but when Chris picked them up, F1 made him feel like a celebrity, giving him and his family access to the facility for photos.

Down the stretch, Paul was getting worried about the points.

"He had been in first place for about a month-and-a-half," Paul said. "But he was close. It was only two or three points. By the last weel he was ahead by six points and won by eight. Of 11 races, he was the top driver or tied in six of 11 weeks."

As for the racing, Chris plans to stick with it.

"The new season is supposed to start this week, but I'll have to miss it," he said. "I can't wait for this weekend."

Cohasset Middle School Field Hockey club looking for coaches

The middle school field hockey club in Cohasset is looking for three coaches for our fall season. We are self funded and pay our coaches an hourly rate. There are four full teams. and the season starts September 2 and goes through November 1.

The 6th grade teams each will have three games and the 7th and 8th will each play 9-10 games. The teams practice twice per week from 3-5 p.m.

There is also a Jamboree in October involving other towns. We are looking for people who have played field hockey and would enjoy coaching and have a lot of enthusiasm. Each coach would have 2 practices per week and games both home and away.

Coaches do not have to be from Cohasset.

The South rises

South beats North in Shriners' Game

By Mike Hardman
MHARDMAN@CNC.COM

The last time Bridgewater-Raynham's Mike Connolly was quarterbacking a team at Gillette Stadium, it was in the middle of a snowstorm in a losing effort against Gloucester in a 33-13 loss.

When he came on to replace Natick quarterback Sean McCummings, it was a balmy night on the turf at the home of the New England Patriots and the result was different.

Connolly helped the South team to a 13-6 win over the North in the 33rd Shriners Football Classic Friday night. The game was moved to Gillette Stadium this year from its former home at Bentley University.

Cohasset's Dana Valentine and Will Lynner also played.

Unlike past Shriners' game, which have been offensive shootouts, defense dominated the action.

Still, for Connolly and Trojan teammate Neil Harrington, it was a chance to compete together one more time on the football field against high school opponents.

"I never thought be here again," Connolly said with a laugh. "It was unbelievable."

Connolly got to the Shriners late because of the Trojans being involved in the baseball tournament. He had to quickly trade his baseball shoes for football cleats and get back into football mode.

"We missed a couple of days," Connolly said, "but it came together for us."

Connolly entered the game on the second offensive series for the South team. In the third quarter, the B-R quarterback found Harrington open for a nine-yard gain that led to the winning touchdown run by New Bedford's Jonathan Williams at the start of the fourth quarter. At the 10:49 mark, Williams went off left tackle for a five-yard score and a 13-6 lead.

"It was good having someone I know in the game," Connolly said.

With only a couple of weeks to prepare for the game, the Shriners' game is usually a matter of what team is able to get on the same page quicker.

You're taking players from different offensive and defensive systems and putting in a game plan that works.

The only factor is that you're taking players who have been rivals and turning them into teammates.

"In two weeks, I got to know a lot of these kids," said Mansfield's Dakota Cullen, who played right offensive tackle. "We became really close and become a team in two weeks. That was really cool."

On their first drive of the game, the South team put together an impressive 16-play, 77-yard drive, but came up empty when Marshfield's Sean Griffith missed on a 40-yard field goal attempted. The keys to the drive was the running of Brockton High's Dominique Williams and Jonathan Williams. McCummings also connected with Dominique Williams and his high school teammate, Robbie Jackson, on two key pass plays.

After the South defense bottled up the North, Abington's Kristen LaPointe returned a punt 39 yards to get into the North end, but the drive stalled on fourth down.

Buckingham Browne & Nichols running back Derek Papagianopoulos put the North on the scoreboard. The North MVP bounced off a couple of South would-be tackler for a 12-yard score at the 5:03 mark. The kick failed and the North had a 6-0 lead.

Behind the running of Walpole's Ryan Izzo and the passing of McCummings, the South came right back down the field with an 80-yard drive. McCummings finished it off with a pretty 16-yard scoring strike to Jackson, who reached over two North defenders for a 16-yard score. Griffith kicked the extra-point for a 7-6 with 23 seconds remaining in the first half.

"They were jumping the outs and the curls, so I told Scott that I was going to run a quick stop-and-go," Jackson said of the touchdown play. "I ran it, looked up, the ball was there, and I just made the catch. It was painful that he overthrew me on that first play, but we knew we'd get one."

McCumming, who is headed to the University of Connecticut, thought the play would work for the score.

"Throughout the last few weeks in practice, we've been getting that all the time," McCummings said. "Just the deep balls, anything we wanted, basically. So we had confidence when we came here that we could do the same.

"Coaches had confidence in the play, and I knew as soon as they called it that it would be a touchdown."

North came right with the drive on their own, getting down to the South 12-yard line when the coaches elected to go for a field goal. Masconomet's Evan Bunker took attempt a field goal, but Whitman-Hanson's Kyle Daigneault blocked the attempt which was recovered by Millis' John Duffy, setting up the winning score by the South.

"We did it once in practice and I picked up the ball and dropped it," said Duffy of the blocked field goal recovery. "So during the game, I kind of expected it, I was just waiting for it. If I was a bit faster, I probably would've got a touchdown, but that was the best it could've been."

Led by Connolly, South drove down the field for the winning score.

"You're playing with the best of the best," Doherty said. "It was fun out there."

Plymouth South's Stefan Gustafson was part of a strong defensive backfield, which limited the North's scoring chances.

Other locals on the South team were Boston College High's Ryan McCourt and Andrew Tillman, Pembroke's Robert Gratzer, Jr., South Shore Voke's Sean Murphy, Marshfield's Robert McNeil and Scituate's Brendan Perkins.

Cohasset back on top

By Sean MacCarthy
CORRESPONDENT

Who are we? State Champs!

That's right; the Cohasset High School Boys Lacrosse team won the State Championship on Wednesday.

Playing like they always do, great, the Skippers won two games this week and brought home the Division 3 State Championship trophy in the process.

Captain Jack Murphy put it best, "Now all I have to say is lets go to Disney World!"

On Thursday, June 10, Cohasset squared off against Dover-Sherborn in the State Semi-Finals. In 2009, Dover-Sherborn defeated Cohasset in the State Semi-Finals sending Cohasset home early, denying them an anticipated title showdown rematch with Scituate.

In 2010, things went differently. After losing the first quarter 2-1, Cohasset scored five unanswered goals putting them up, comfortably 6-2. With a 9-3 lead, Cohasset had the pace pushed on them as Dover-Sherborn scored 4 fourth quarter goals. Solid defense and the All-American goalie helped fend off the Dover-Sherborn onslaught securing the 9-7 Cohasset win and a trip to their fifth State Championship game in the last six years.

In the Championship game, Cohasset looked to regain its spot as the Division 3 Lax Champs of Massachusetts as they haven't won the title since 2007. Hungry and determined, the Skippers faced off against the Norwell Clippers on June 16 at Harvard Stadium.

"It feels great," said Wise, talking about the getting to the finals. "This was our goal all year long and it's awesome to have it all come together. Our defense has been solid all year and Jack Murphy has been dominant in net."

Previously, when Cohasset and Norwell battled it out, the Skippers beat the Clippers 12-8. That game decided whothe South Shore League Championship. There second meeting, however, had a lot more riding on the line; the coveted State Championship Trophy.

With the stadium packed with numerous Cohasset and Norwell fans alike, the show began.

It took a while to get things going, as both teams were playing very physically, but Cohasset Captain Will Wise scored the first goal of the game about five-and-a half minutes in. Shortly after, All-American Midfielder, Thomas Flibotte netted another goal for the Skippers.

Not wanting to find themselves in a huge hole, Norwell scored to make it 2-1 as the first quarter came to a close.

One minute after the start of the second quarter, Flibotte, took a rip that found the back of the net making it 3-1 Cohasset. Not long after the Flibotte goal, Jack Murphy lost the ball as he was running down field. A Norwell attacker thought he had a wide open net until Kyle Livingstone made a phenomenal play as he batted the ball down, keeping Norwell from scoring. Livingstone's play was huge as Norwell scored the next two goals bringing the game to a 3-3 tie. Wise scored again to make it 4-3.

Feeling both the pressure of Norwell and the pressure of the first half coming to an end, Cohasset put on a laser show. With about a minute and a half left, Flibotte knocked one in to make it 5-3. At the 30 second mark, Dean "Doomsday" Driscoll, got the ball at the crease and plopped it in over the goalie. Then, at the 11 second mark, after Alex Kinnealey won another face off, Will Wise completed his hat trick giving Cohasset the 7-3 lead at the half.

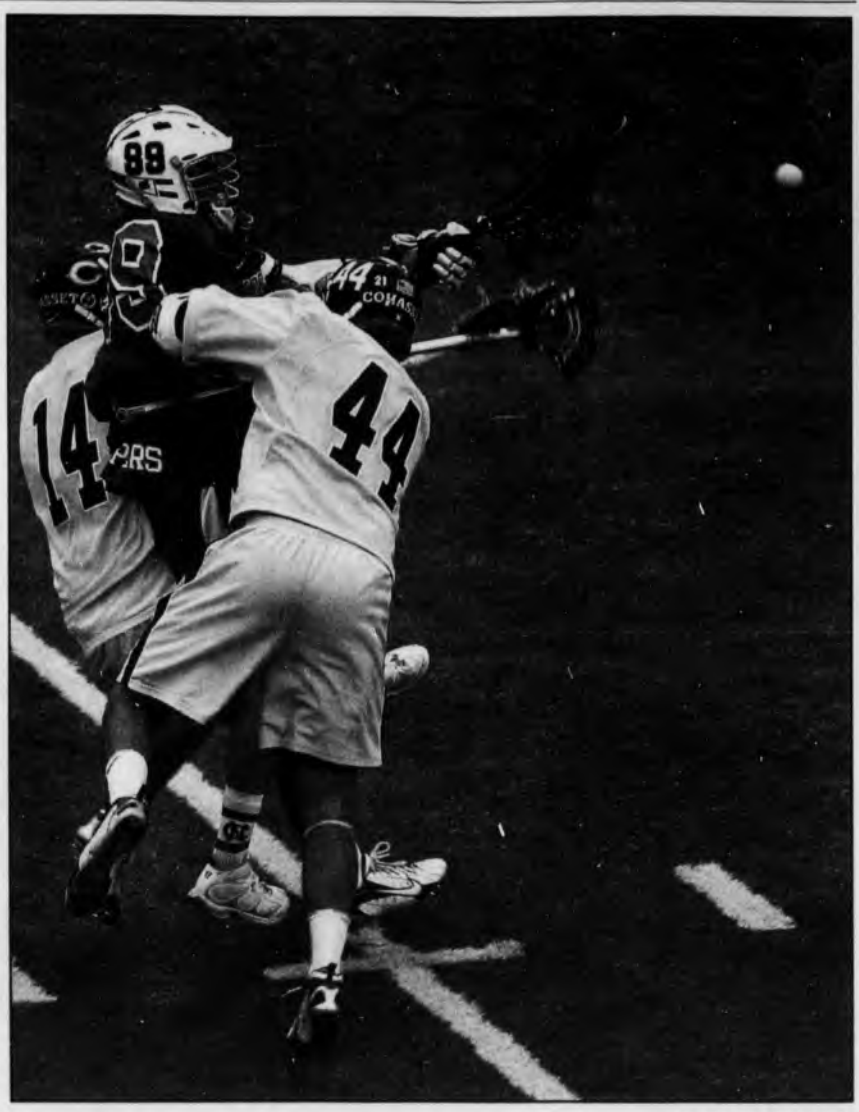
Similar to the start of the first half, the second half began slowly. With the energy raised, as many players had come to terms with the fact that this was the last half of high school lacrosse they would ever play, the two teams nullified each others offense with hard hitting defense.

Captain Ian Quinlan scored the first goal of the second half after an assist from Kinnealey making it 8-3 in favor of Cohasset. After a quick goal for the Clippers, Jack Carrier made it 9-4. As time was winding down in the third quarter, Norwell scored, cutting the deficit to 4 going into the fourth quarter.

Kyle Livingstone opened up the fourth with a goal making it 10-5. Down five in the final quarter, Norwell went into desperation mode, shutting the Cohasset offense down in the process. Pushing hard and constantly applying pressure the defense, Norwell scored three straight goals, and before your knew it, Cohasset was only up 10-8.

However, just like in the Semi-Final game, the defense buckled down in the midst of all of the pressure and, with the help of Murphy, kept the lead. The game, and the Championship, was won.

Time quickly wound down and Cohasset players stormed the field to celebrate with their teammates and friends.



"I'm feeling so great right now," said Quinlan. "That's what we worked for the whole season. We have so many great players and an awesome coaching staff this year. The combination of both is what made us so successful in the end. I just don't even know what to think. I'm so ecstatic."

Hoisting the trophy over their heads, with smiles across their faces, the team shared a final moment together as they relished in all of the glory of their victory.

"The win felt amazing. I didn't want that moment to end," explained Driscoll. "It is something that I will carry with me forever…I'm so happy that my teammates and I did it this year. I am so happy but also a little sad that I will never get to play with that special group of players again."

Driscoll went on to explain how the season was so successful because of the overall team work and experience the team had with each other. Those two factors are what made the team so special.

A special team, a special season, and big State Championship to show for it. Yeah, that's Cohasset Lacrosse for ya.

The Civil War 1st Massachusetts Cavalry and their horses will arrive at the Old Ship Church, 107 Main St., Hingham on Saturday and head to Hingham Cemetery for the start of a Civil War Encampment, a 375th Anniversary event.

The cavalry's coming! The infantry's coming!

Shortly before 10 a.m., on Saturday, June 26, the Civil War 1st Massachusetts Cavalry and their horses will arrive at the Old Ship Church, 107 Main St., Hingham, and head to Hingham Cemetery for the start of a Civil War Encampment, a 375th Anniversary event. They will be stationed near the cemetery's entrance by the Bell Tower and will patrol the encampment throughout the event.

At the same time, the 22nd Massachusetts Volunteer Infantry will arrive in full costume. They will proceed to the lawn of the church and into Hingham Cemetery, setting up their tents and a fire pit along the way. Their unit will include, among others, an officer, color bearer and medical cadet.

Costumed ladies will stroll the grounds, and all will interact with the public to tell of their life and duties during the Civil War.

Members of the Board of Directors of Hingham Cemetery will be near the Civil War Monument with information about two of Hingham's most notable Civil War heroes, Peter Ourish, Hingham's youngest volunteer in the war, and Gov. John Andrew. They will hand out field flowers to be placed at their monuments or those of other Civil War heroes who are buried nearby.

A private collection of Civil War memorabilia will be on display and explained by the owner, helping to enhance the public's understanding of the Civil War era.

This free family event will be the highlight of the town's 375th's Victorian era celebration. It is supported in part by grants from the Norwell and Hingham cultural councils, local agencies that are supported by the Massachusetts Cultural Council, a state agency. A rain date is scheduled for Sunday, June 27, 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. Parking will be available on Station Street. No cars or dogs will be allowed in the cemetery during this event.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF JULY 5, 2010

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Although you don't like to change plans once they're set, once again, you might find that doing so can make a big difference in your favor. Family matters dominate the weekend.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You continue to get encouragement for your proposals, including some support from unlikely sources. Use this positive flow to move forward with your plans. Good luck.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Family matters are dominant this week. It's a good time to be with those you love. It's also a good time to contact and reunite with loved ones with whom you've lost touch.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Be careful not to allow differences of opinion to create unpleasant feelings, especially in the workplace. A neutral observer could check out the situation and suggest a resolution.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) While the Lion's Den is the center of attention this week, with family matters dominating much of your time, workplace issues are also important. Try to find a balance between them.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) The future of a new relationship could depend on how much the usually impatient-to-get-things-done Virgo is willing to stop pushing and let things happen naturally.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Worry over a loved one's well-being is eased with good news from a sympathetic source. Your continued show of love and support is important. Stay with it.

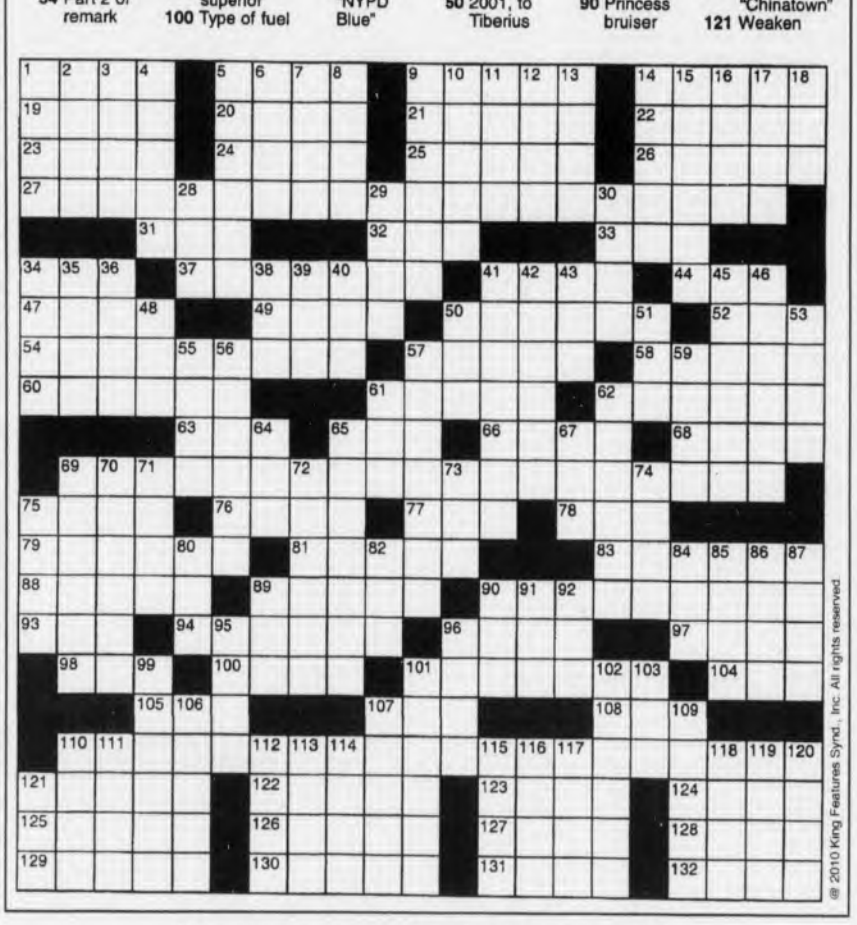
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) This is a good time to consider mending fences with someone you wish was back in your life. Forget about blame, and focus on the good things you once shared.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) This is a good week to start researching information regarding whatever changes you're considering, whether it involves a new home, a new location or a new job.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A long-anticipated job opportunity could turn out to be less than you expected. But appearances might be deceiving. Check it out before you decide it's not for you.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Good news: Adapting to a new situation might come more easily than you expected. You can look for continued support from colleagues who appreciate your contributions.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Someone you care for might need more reassurance from the typically "unemotional" Pisces. Go ahead. Open up, and you might be surprised at what you find when you do.



(c) 2010 King Features Synd., Inc.

BORN THIS WEEK: You are a romantic at heart, although you can be amazingly practical when you need to be.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Christ Church Cathedral Choir to perform at St. Stephen's

The Christ Church Cathedral Tour Choir is coming to visit the Northeast Region, and will perform a Service of Choral Evensong at St. Stephen's Church, 16 Highland Ave, Cohasset on Sunday, July 11 at 4:30 p.m.

Christ Church Cathedral in Lexington, Kentucky has an active and exciting music program that includes choirs for boys, girls and adults of all ages. The combined Boys, Girls, and Men's Choirs has recently returned from a tour of the Cathedrals of England, where their 2009 Choir Tour sang at the Cathedrals of Lincoln and Saint Albans to rave reviews.

The Service of Choral Evensong is a uniquely Anglican invention. It is based on the ancient Monastic office of Vespers and includes Psalms, Scripture readings and prayers. Since its inception in the first Anglican Prayer Book of 1549, Evensong has been a popular and satisfying service that offers many opportunities to sing. Thus the traditional Service of Choral Evensong offers choirs many opportunities to offer their singing skills within the beautiful setting of a church environment. The Service of Choral Evensong at St. Stephen's Church offers the opportunity to hear one of the premier choirs in America doing that which it does best in a truly beautiful setting.

The choir is directed by Erich Balling, who has been at Christ Church Cathedral since 2005 and was appointed Canon Musician in October of 2006. The Men and Boys Choir was founded nearly 50 years ago by the noted musician Robert Quade, and under Mr. Balling's direction the Music Program has expanded. Through active recruiting and excellent training, these choirs have grown in both size and ability and can serve as an inspiration to parents and children of all ages.

Mr. Balling is assisted by Katherine A. Balling in running a music program that also includes preparatory choral training for younger children. Brian Jones, the Emeritus Director of Music at Trinity Church in Boston, has served this past year as Visiting Artist at Christ Church cathedral.

St. Stephen's Church in Cohasset was built in the early 20th century on a design by Ralph Adams Cram, the noted Boston church architect. The church is nestled on the top of the hill that overlooks the scenic Cohasset Common, and numerous excellent restaurants in the area offer a chance to make it a night out after hearing the service in the church. Adam Thomas, the Assistant to the Rector, will officiate at the service.

Admission is free, with a Free Will Offering. This Service of Choral Evensong is offered as the final musical event of the 2009-2010 St. Stephen's Church Concert Series, which offers premier musical events to the South Shore community.

The Choral Evensong will be followed by the Sunday evening Carillon concert from 6 to 7p.m.

Comedian Jimmy Tingle headlines Winslow House fundraiser

The Historic Winslow House and Cultural Center in Marshfield may be one of the oldest and dearest homes on the South Shore, but it's certainly not stuck in the past.

On the contrary, this 1699 homestead hosts a diverse array of year-round programs for people of all ages — from infants and toddlers who attend the annual Teddy Bear Picnic, to friends and families savoring an old-fashioned summertime clam bake, to history buffs digesting every morsel at the ever-popular Shipwreck Dinner. For those who would like to take a step back in time and experience the ancestral home of Marshfield's founding family, the well-preserved house is open for guided tours, including an annual candlelight tour, and available for private functions and celebrations.

But the Winslow House wasn't always a buzzing center of community activity; in the early 1900s, the home nearly fell into ruin. Following its construction by Judge Isaac Winslow, the grandson of Mayflower passenger and three-time Governor of Plymouth Colony Edward Winslow, the Winslow House was home to a family of generals, doctors, lawyers, and judges who helped to establish Marshfield and the South Shore. The Winslow family lived there until 1822, and it was later owned by renowned orator and Massachusetts Senator Daniel Webster.

Then, in the late 1880s, a farmer named Oscar Weston took up residence in the Winslow House and, unfortunately, showed little respect for its historic heritage.

"He had goats, pigs, and chickens living outside and inside the house," explains Mark Schmidt, director of the Winslow House.

Fortuitously, three local businessmen – Edward Chandler Ford, John Harris Gutterson, and Edgar Sherrill – recognized the property's historic and community significance and intervened. In 1918, they approached Weston about purchasing the Winslow House, but he repeatedly refused, unwilling to even let them set foot inside the house.

"The story goes that the three buyers were standing in a snow bank outside the house and handed him a wad of cash through a broken window," Schmidt relates. "Only then did he let them inside, and you can only imagine what they must have been thinking as they stepped through the animal droppings and saw what they'd gotten themselves into."

The trio had paid $3,500 for a dilapidated building with a rotting roof, falling-in windows, and overgrown vines and bushes ensnaring the exterior.

"It was in ramshackle condition, a real eyesore," Schmidt continues.

They spent about a year improving the structure before opening it to the public in 1920. To subsidize the considerable cost of restoration, Ford, Gutterson, and Sherrill added a new wing, known as the Tea Room, which was used to serve fundraising turkey dinners to the public. They built the Tea Room by salvaging lumber from 14 different decrepit barns around the region. (And, today, the tradition continues with an annual Turkey Dinner catered feast each September.)

In 1925, they sold the house to the Winslow House Association, a nonprofit group comprised of local citizens, for $19,500. The property has been under the association's care ever since.

"You really have to applaud the efforts of those three men and the Winslow House Association," Schmidt adds. "Otherwise, the Winslow House wouldn't be here today, surviving as an example of how the well-to-do landed gentry, particularly those loyal to the king, lived in the years prior to the American Revolution."

This year, the Winslow House is celebrating the 90th anniversary of that fateful real estate transaction and the community stewardship that has allowed it to endure for the last nine decades.

And who better to lead the festivities than a man who enthusiastically donned full Pilgrim regalia on a recent impromptu visit to the historic Winslow House? Comedian Jimmy Tingle, a Massachusetts native, will headline a night of comedy to benefit the Winslow House at the Duxbury Performing Arts Center on June 26 at 7:30 p.m. It will be his first appearance in the area in almost 25 years.

"The last time I was here, I was performing in a pub and a fight broke out," Tingle recalls. "Who knows —maybe during this show to benefit the Winslow House, the Tories and Revolutionaries could go at it."

Tingle, who recently earned a master's degree in public administration from Harvard University's Kennedy School of Government, describes his brand of comedy as "clean, topical, relevant…and brilliant." He has appeared on The Tonight Show, Late Night with Conan O'Brien, and the Larry King Show; was a featured commentator on 60 Minutes II; and starred in his own HBO special.

Comic Chrissy Kelleher, a Marshfield resident, will open for Tingle. An educator in the Marshfield Public Schools, she took up comedy six years ago and has performed throughout New England. She's appeared with Loretta LaRoche (PBS) and Kevin Nealon (Saturday Night Live, Showtime's Weeds), and is a fixture at the Comedy Studio in Cambridge.

"There are actually a lot of similarities between comedy and teaching," she says. "Teaching is like doing five shows a day!"

General admission tickets for the June 26th event are $25 apiece and are available at www.winslowhouse.org, or by calling 781-837-5753. In addition, a special $50 package includes the performance, plus an exclusive meet-and-greet with the comedians. Tickets can also be purchased at Westwinds Bookshop in Duxbury, and Buckles & Boards, the Marshfield Business Center, and the G.A.R. Hall in Marshfield.

"Our goal is to continue to build the Winslow House's endowment to ensure that the house stays open to the community for at least another 90 years," Schmidt explains.

In fact, the Winslow House even has its own Facebook presence – a sure sign that this historic structure is planning to stick around for a long time to come.

Carpenter believes in 'Miracles'

Performer returns to stage after battling illness

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

Mary Chapin Carpenter knows something about "The Age of Miracles." Not only is that the title of the five-time Grammy Award-winner's new album, but some might even say it also describes the singer's life today.

Carpenter – who plays Boston's Berklee Performance Center on June 27 and the Cape Cod Melody Tent in Hyannis on July 1 – is on her first tour in three years after being sidelined in spring 2007 by a pulmonary embolism, a life-threatening artery blockage in the lung.

"I got very sick three years ago and I had to stop everything. One of the hardest things about becoming ill was the period that followed when I wasn't able to write and perform as I had for the past almost 30 years," explained Carpenter by telephone during a break from rehearsal last week. "The entire experience took a real toll on my life."

Her illness not only put Carpenter's career on hold, but it may also have played a role in ending her marriage to Tim Smith, a Virginia-based general contractor. Six months into her recovery, however, Carpenter felt well enough to begin writing songs for what would become "The Age of Miracles," her 10th studio album released in April on Zoe Records.

Mary Chapin Carpenter

"The songs on this album are about finding your way back from illness. The title song suggests that we may live in an age of miracles, if we're lucky enough to believe in them. When you are in a place in your life where things are so dark and so hard to figure out, if you are somehow able to reach those conclusions, then that's a pretty amazing thing. What came as I recovered was a lot of introspection and navigating the difficulties of coming through a tough process. The record also looks at the break-up of my marriage. I'm still really trying to find my way through all this."

The New Jersey-born performer acknowledges that the new album may not contain any songs just like her lively 1990s hits "Down at the Twist and Shout" or "Shut Up and Kiss Me."

"I think I knew going into the studio that this record in particular would be a fairly quiet, meditative record," says Carpenter, 52. The performer who began playing piano and guitar gigs while a student at Brown University in Providence knew that the music career she had once considered just a hobby would provide her road back.

"These three years were the longest hiatus of my career. At the same time that I was dealing with recovery, I had this parallel thinking that I had to cancel tour dates and let people down. I felt guilt about that, of course, but I also learned to appreciate having time off the road. Even though my marriage did not survive, the time still expanded my heart and enriched my life and I made some beautiful new friends."

Carpenter – whose first album, "Hometown Girl," was released in 1987 and who had 15 Top-10 singles between 1990 and 1996 alone – was still eager, however, to go back on the road which she did last month near her home in Charlottesville, Va.

"I'm back in the bosom of my friends, the musicians who have been with me for years, and a new one, Jim Henry, too. The connection between the band and us on stage and the audience has always been just one of the great rewards of my life. Their support and encouragement means a great deal to me. We have always believed that musicians who share a stage should really enjoy performing together. And, we definitely do."

Mary Chapin Carpenter will be at the Berklee Performance Center, 136 Massachusetts Avenue, Boston, on June 27. For tickets, visit the box office or call 617-747-2261. Carpenter will also be at the Cape Cod Melody Tent, 21 West Main Street, Hyannis, on July 1. For tickets and information call 1-800-745-3000 or go online at melodytent.org.

Making noise about music

Students, parents not happy with school's plan

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Parents and students came out in droves June 24 to speak their mind on the proposed changes to staffing in the music department next year.

The 90-minute discussion covered the music program from pre-K to high school, but it was the middle-high school program that caused the most distress from the audience. (For letters about the topic, see pages 10 and 11.)

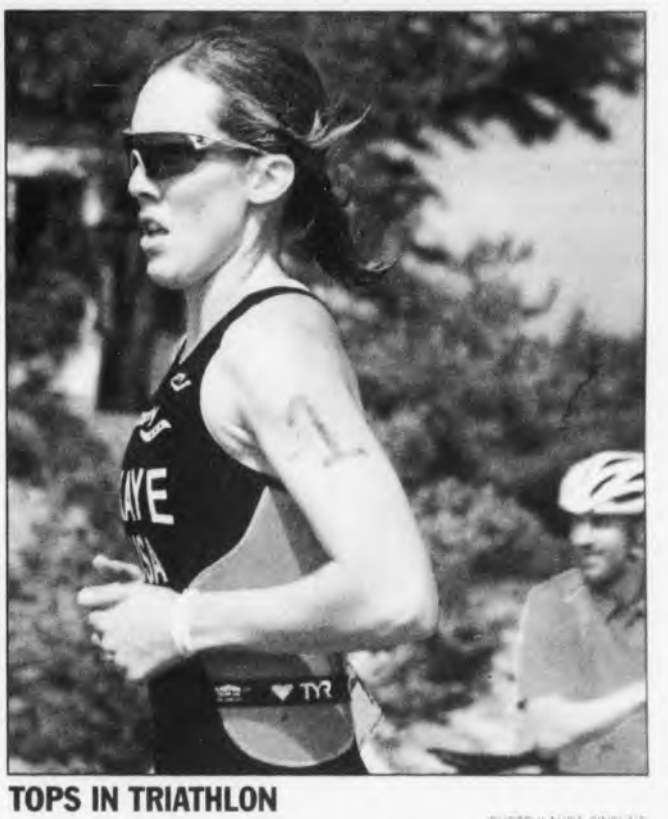
The middle school music teacher for the 2009-2010 school year will not be returning, and the school administration's plan as presented at the school committee meeting is to not have a dedicated middle-school teacher for the coming school year. Rather, the current music staff will be redeployed to cover the middle school classes.

Superintendent of Schools Denise Walsh said a dip in music enrollment at the high school, in part, allowed for the split teaching model between the schools to be proposed. The district is negotiating the plan with the teachers union.

The administrator's plan is to have high school band teacher Stephanie Moriarty and high school chorus teacher Bryan Marks split their time between the middle school and high school sections. Deer Hill music teacher Steven Biagini will teach music one period per day for the sixth -grade level.

Walsh prefaced her presentation by saying the decision was not driven by money.

"We do not bring anything to the committee that isn't in the interest of our students," she said.



School committee members did not take a position on the music program, or the proposed staffing.

"We're not an operational board," said school committee Chairwoman Helene Lieb.

Lieb said Walsh has heard the comments and will bring the sentiments back to discussion with the principals. Further comments or concerns, Lieb said, should be directed at the principals.

However, school committee members allowed an open forum for community

Treat's Pond comes back again

Commission calls for more study at Sandy Cove

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The stormwater advisory committee, revitalized earlier this year, jumped headfirst in to the debate on the Treat's Pond issue at Monday night's board of selectmen meeting.

The group, consisting of three citizens, made the recommendation that further study is warranted for a stormwater outlet at Sandy Cove.

"The committee takes the position that there is insufficient information concerning alternative engineering solutions that allow for stormwater to outlet at Sandy Cove," said Noel Collins, the committee's chairman.

Treat's Pond and its associated flooding issues have been the subject of much discussion over the past three years. A project developed by the Army Corps of Engineers that aims to restore the pond to a healthy salt marsh environment is currently on the table.

The Army Corps project comes with federally earmarked funds totaling about

PICTURE THIS/Kim Ayer

Name: Kimberly Grace Ayer (Kim).

Occupation: Director, arts and crafts, Cohasset Summer Rec.

Best day of your life: When my girls were born safe and beautiful — I know it sound corny, but it's true.

Worst vacation: When we realized why getting the last available space in a remote Vermont campground isn't cause for celebration (rocks!).

Favorite season: As with all gardeners — spring, when the world starts to renew itself.

Favorite holiday: Groundhog Day, just kidding!

Favorite meal: My Dad's macaroni and cheese.

Best book: "Bridge Across Forever."

Best movie: "Horton Hears a Who."

Best TV show: "Lost" or "The Big Bang Theory" because Sheldon reminds me of my dad.

COURTESY PHOTO

Kim Ayer is the director of arts and crafts at the Cohasset Recreation Department's Summer Playground Program.

Best music, group, or artist: Again, lots to choose so here are a few: U2, Sarah McLachlan, — wow, so many artists — Chrissie Hynde, Ella Fitzgerald.

Pet peeve: Mean people — everyone should be able to easily get along without being mean to others. I work on this constantly with my Girl Scouts and the other kids I'm involved with.

Fun fact: I can't carry a tune whistling. I can sing and dance, but the whistling ... I love it, but it doesn't come out like I think it does.

Goal: Happy, healthy family — I'd love to get my master gardner's certification.

Biggest worry: Kids, healthcare, hunger relief.

Best part of Cohasset: Right now? Cohasset Rec — I love this program! In general, Cohasset is a very sweet, small town.

POLICE BEAT

Bridge jumpers have returned for the summer

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

With school out and the hot weather here, bridge jumpers are back en masse. Police are monitoring the Border Street Bridge on a regular basis. Last week, police cleared as many as 40 kids from the Border Street bridge area.

Safety concerns are the major reason police discourage bridge jumping. In addition to the jumping itself, people congregate at the bridge, and it often disrupts traffic flow and causes a littering problem. The act of jumping off the bridge is also illegal, according to town bylaws.

Lt. Bill Quigley said the bridge doesn't just attract people from Cohasset. Youths from as far away as Brockton are coming down to jump the bridge.

Expired inspection sticker

A police officer doing traffic on King Street near Cohasset House of Pizza observed a green Ford dump truck traveling south with what appeared to be an expired inspection sticker. It turned out the inspection sticker had been expired for two years.

The officer stopped the truck in the Mobil Mart parking lot. The 26-year-old male driver, a resident of Bridgewater, had a suspended driver's license.

The man was issued a citation and summonsed to Quincy District Court for operating a vehicle with a suspended license and having an expired inspection sticker.

The passenger of the truck was allowed to take over operation of the vehicle. The inspection failure was for emissions, not for safety, which is a citable offense, but not a towable offense, Quigley said.

Stolen bike recovered

The mother of a 16-year-old boy reported her son's mountain bike valued at $400 was stolen from the harbor. The boy had left the bike unattended at the Cohasset Sailing Club. Officers responded to the house to take a report.

Later that night, around 10 p.m., officers recovered the bike (and another bike) on the lawn of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. The bikes were brought to headquarters where the family later retrieved it.

Expired registration

An officer doing traffic enforcement saw a 2006 Toyota Corolla with an expired registration sticker on the license plate. A computer check revealed the registration has expired. The owner of the vehicle was a 50-year-old Cohasset man.

Because an unregistered vehicle cannot be driven on a public road, the vehicle was towed and the owner was give a ride home. The owner registered the car later that day and the vehicle was released.

Revoked registration

An officer doing traffic enforcement near Depot Court and Pleasant Street on Wednesday (June 23) morning pulled over a 2006 Ford pickup truck. The officer recognized the business from the "revocation list," a list of revoked licenses and registrations distributed to police departments from the registry.

A computer check confirmed the registration has been revoked because of lapsed insurance. The driver, a 35-year-old male from Cohasset, was issued a summons to court for operating a vehicle with a suspended registration and operating without insurance. The truck was towed.

Disturbance

The police received a call from Tedeschi's around 10:30 p.m. on Wednesday (June 23). The caller reported a woman was in the store pretending to film her with a remote control. Police responded to the store and the 49-year-old women from Quincy, who had mental health issues, was advised not to return. The woman was turned over to friends.

Purse stolen

A walk-in party reported on Thursday (June 24) morning that her purse was stolen sometime between the hours of 8 and 11:30 p.m. from a parked car near Wadleigh Park at the foot of Forest Avenue. A 17-year-old woman reported the theft around 8:15 a.m.

The black Badgley Mischka purse, valued at $200, was stolen, along with a Sony Cyber Shot camera, a wallet with credit cards, an iPod Touch and sunglasses.

The 1997 Honda Accord was broken into through an open rear door. Police are investigating.

Just singing

A caller reported a female acting suspicious outside the Bank of America location on Route 3A. An officer responded and found a 45-year-old female from Quincy. It turned out the woman was singing in her car to pass time before her appointment in the bank.

Arrest, summons

An officer doing routine traffic enforcement ran the registration of a red Chevy Blazer driving over the speed limit Friday (June 25) at 7:17 a.m. The computer check showed the registered owner of the vehicle's license had expired. The vehicle was stopped on Forest Avenue.

Police issued a citation to the 51-year-old male of Whitman and a summons to court for operating unlicensed and speeding.

Not wanting his car towed, the driver called for his boss, a 51-year-old male from Maine, to come pick up the car. When the boss arrived, the officer ran a check on the boss, which revealed he had two outstanding warrants for two counts of larceny by check out of Plymouth District Court. The boss was arrested on those outstanding warrants and the vehicle towed.

Van smoking

A 2003 Chrysler van was smoking on Route 3A near Stop and Stop on Thursday (June 24) afternoon. What was originally thought to be a car fire turned out to be overheating brakes. Once the brakes cooled down, the vehicle was sent on its way. The 68-year-old female told police she would bring the car to her mechanic.

Lost in Wompatuck

Cohasset Police were notified by Hingham Police Friday (June 25) afternoon that a 20-year-old autistic male from Hingham had run away from his family while in Wompatuck State Park. It was believed the male was in the Cohasset portion of the park near Doane Street. Police and fire responded to the scene and entered the park. They worked with Hingham Police and park rangers to conduct a search. The male was found within an hour, uninjured, just off Doane Street.

Geyser of water

Early on Friday (June 25) morning around 5 a.m. a caller reported a "geyser of water" on North Main Street near the MBTA station. Units responded and the water department was notified. The geyser was a broken water main on Cohasset Golf Club property. The pipe was connected to the golf club's sprinkler system. The water was shut down by a golf club employee and later fixed.

Lawn furniture in the pool

A resident of Otis Avenue called to report she returned to her home last Friday (June 25) evening to find all her lawn furniture in her pool. The caller reported the same thing happened last year and believed it may be a group of youths from Scituate. The caller did not want to speak to an officer, only wanted the incident logged.

Stolen stereo system

A 21-year-old Cohasset male reported his stereo system was stolen from his 1986 Mercedes. The car was parked in the St. Anthony's parking lot overnight from Saturday (June 26) at 7 p.m. to Sunday (June 27) at 11:30 a.m. The car was not locked, and nothing else was taken from the car. The radio was an AM/FM radio with a single CD player valued at $100. The incident is under investigation.

Police department offers Mass Marketing Fraud tips

Cohasset Police Department has recently seen an increase in Mass Marketing Frauds and would like to provide residents with an overview of these types of frauds along with information on how to avoid becoming a victim.

Basic overview

Mass Marketing Frauds target individuals of all ages and walks of life. Victims are lured with false promises of significant cash prizes, goods, services or good works, in exchange for up-front fees, taxes or donations.

Costs of fraud

Mass Marketing Frauds victimize millions of Americans each year and generate losses in the hundreds of millions of dollars.

Top schemes

Foreign lotteries and sweepstakes; Nigerian letter scams; credit and loan scams; overpayment scams; and charity scams

Common scams

Foreign lotteries and sweepstakes. Foreign lottery fraud is currently one of the most prevalent consumer frauds. Victims are told that they have won a lottery or sweepstakes in a foreign drawing. To collect the winnings, victims are told they must first pay various taxes and fees.

Nigerian letter scams: Victims are asked to help illegally transfer funds out of Nigeria in return for a share of the money. Perpetrators ask victims for their bank account information under the pretext that it is needed to complete the transaction. Victims may also be asked to pay money up-front to help defray the cost of taxes, legal fees or bribes.

Credit and loan scams: Victims with poor or non-existent credit are offered credit cards/loans-for an advance fee. "Credit repair services" may offer to help those with poor credit improve their credit ratings-for an advance fee.

Overpayment scams: The victim is advertising an item for sale. A "buyer" sends the seller a counterfeit check or money order for more than the cost of the item. The victim is asked to return the difference between the payment and the cost of the item. When the payment turns out to be counterfeit, the victim is held responsible by his or her financial institution.

Charity scams: Con artists solicit donations in the name of non-existent or fraudulent charities. Most charity scams occur during the holidays or in the aftermath of disasters, when philanthropy is most common.

How to avoid becoming a victim

The hallmark of Mass Marketing Fraud offers appear "too good to be true." Payments for goods or services are required in advance. Personal information is requested over the telephone. Offers are unsolicited. Representatives use high-pressure sales techniques, claiming that immediate action is required.

What you can do

Don't believe everything you are told. If something sounds too good to be true, it probably is. Avoid being taken by high-pressure sales. Take the time to research offers before deciding whether or not to participate. Don't do business with anyone who solicits your money in advance of awarding a prize. Inspect all representatives' credentials carefully. Get all offers in writing and keep a copy for one's records.

Don't deposit checks sent by companies that claim the check is being sent to pay fees or taxes on lottery winnings.

Report scams when they occur

Don't ever be embarrassed. These frauds are perpetrated by sophisticated con artists.

File a claim with the appropriate entities.

Report the crime promptly. People will have a better chance of getting money back and bringing the perpetrators to justice when a complaint is filed soon after the crime.

Cohasset manhunt leads to arrest of wanted Scituate man

A Scituate man allegedly led police on a two-hour manhunt requiring three K-9 teams and several local police departments.

Last Friday, June 25 at 10:30 a.m., a Cohasset police officer stopped a car on Route 3A near the MBTA train station. According to police, the man driving the car appeared to be fighting with the passenger, a 73-year-old woman.

Police said the operator told them he was trying to assist his grandmother with her seatbelt and they were both on their way to the hospital. According to police, the man was unable to produce a driver's license, but gave a name and date of birth to the officer. As the officer was conducting computer checks on the man, the driver allegedly quickly exited the car and ran northbound on Route 3A, eventually running into the woods off the main byway, leaving the woman in the car.

Cohasset police, with assistance from Hingham police, established a perimeter and called for K-9s from Hull and Scituate police. Due to the hot, humid conditions, a relief K-9 was called to assist from Quincy police. A reverse-911 call went out to all residents advising them of the police activity.

Through investigation, police determined the driver to be Jonathan Davey, 44, of 41 Lawson Road, Scituate, and the passenger was his mother, not grandmother.

Police also said Davey allegedly provided a false name and date of birth to the officer. Davey was wanted on three outstanding warrants and had a revoked driver's license. The warrants were for maintaining a house of prostitution (Brighton District Court), intimidating a witness and assault and battery (Woburn District Court) and larceny over $250 (Brighton District Court).

After a nearly two-hour track by K-9s, police said Davey was found buried in mud on the Hingham-Cohasset town line on North Main Street. He was taken into custody by the Cohasset, Scituate, Hull and Hingham officers without incident.

He was booked on the following charges at Cohasset Police Headquarters: negligent operation of a motor vehicle, giving a false name to a police officer, failure to stop for a police officer, operating a motor vehicle after suspension, resisting arrest and disorderly conduct. Davey was arraigned in Quincy District Court late Friday afternoon. He was held on the default warrants.

Cohasset Police Lt. William Quigley said, "This was a great example of multiple local police departments working together and taking a wanted person off the streets."

Grant request moves ahead

Focus would be on improving village

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

"I think we're putting plans together at the 11th hour, and I don't want it to prohibit doing something being done in the area."
Wayne Sawchuk

The Town of Cohasset will move forward with a grant application that aims to bolster the economic vitality of the village.

On Monday night, selectmen voted unanimously to submit a $1.3 million request to spruce up four major areas of the village. The public works economic development (PWED) grant will fund Phase 3 of the village revitalization project.

The grant possibility was presented to selectmen last week, but a public hearing was required as part of the application. Wayne Sawchuk of Beechwood Street, owner of the Bia Bistro building at 35 South Main St., expressed concerns that the grant application may limit what can be done.

"I think we're putting plans together at the 11th hour, and I don't want it to prohibit doing something being done in the area," Sawchuk said.

Sawchuk wanted to ensure a continuous sidewalk be created facing the parking lot, which may require easements, licenses or land swaps. He also said he'd like to see the portion of James Lane where the Red Lion and recreation center is located should be targeted for improvement.

"I don't want to jeopardize the grant, but I want the town to realize even greater revenue from the (village) properties in taxes, then everyone benefits," Sawchuk said.

The grant application, which was due on June 30, focuses on four areas: an extension of the town parking lot on a currently overgrown piece of town-owned land behind the Red Lion, improvements to Ripley Road such as drainage, increased pedestrian access and better lighting; improved pedestrian and vehicular crossing at the Depot Court/Ripley Road/Pleasant Street intersection; and creating an attractive, pedestrian-friendly area on the rear side of South Main Street facing the parking lot.

Tom Gruber, the town engineer and (with Mark Brennan) the PWED grant writer, said the application only needs to present the project in concept, and the many details will be hammered out when and if the town receives the grant.

Alex Dippold of South Main Street said his concerns were with the possibility of increased noise from the additional parking lot.

"We're very excited to see an effort being made to increase the economic development in our neighborhood, but we are concerned with the visual and noise issues associated with parking," he said.

Dippold asked that the parking lot plans remain cognizant of the neighbors.

"It makes a big difference for the quality of life for neighbors," he said.

Gruber said engineers would look at all those issues and there would be many board meetings and permits needed.

"It's a difficult site to work with, but it is the only one the town has to expand the parking lot," he said.

This would not be the first PWED grant applied to the village area. In 2006, the town received a $1.5 million PWED grant to revitalize the downtown village area, which was completed with new sidewalks, paved streets, trees and enhanced pocket parks.

The area of focus was South Main Street, Depot Court and Brook and Elm streets in the center village. The roads, sidewalks and drainage were largely reconstructed, and aesthetic improvements were made throughout the village to give it a fresh look.

In 2007, another $310,000 PWED grant was awarded, this time to finish additional parking spaces in the village lot as well as improve the aesthetics and landscaping.

Contract for curriculum

School committee votes for part-time position

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

As of this week, the Cohasset schools are without a full-time curriculum coordinator. Nancy Mrzyglod, who has held the position for five years, is retiring.

However, the school committee has voted to hire someone to fill the position 18 hours per week for a period of one year with a 30-day termination clause on both sides.

Superintendent of Schools Denise Walsh told the committee there were three options on how to proceed. The first option is to fill the position using the $98,727 line item earmarked for it in the fiscal 2011 budget. The second is to not fill the position and re-evaluate in six months or a year. The third option was to hire a consultant part-time to work on key aspects of the role.

Two key functions of the curriculum coordinator are to work with faculty on nearly all grant applications and organize professional development opportunities.

School committee member Jeanne Astino said it would be irresponsible fiscally to fill the position at this time.

"Let's leave it open until fall special Town Meeting. If the work done to this time has been done properly, we should be fine (until then)," Astino said, adding that independent contractors typically have a higher rate of pay.

Walsh said there were several grants with application deadlines at the end of August and would not want the district to miss out on those opportunities.

School committee member Linda Snowdale asked what were the district's options with Mrzyglod and if she would be willing to stay on through the summer. Walsh said she has spoken with Mrzyglod and that she would be able to stay on part-time as a contract employee.

Astino said she didn't want to see contracted services beyond Aug. 31.

"I don't think it's a wise decision," she said.

From the audience, former school committee member Adrienne MacCarthy said in the past a good curriculum coordinator is able to bring in at least their salary through grants.

"A word of caution, don't be short-sighted," MacCarthy said.

School committee Chairwoman Helene Lieb wanted to be sure that if a part-time contracted curriculum coordinator is hired to complete certain aspects of the job that the other aspects are taken on by full-time employees already working in the district.

"I want to be sure there is cooperation going on. I don't want to be dropping the ball here," Lieb said.

Ellen Maher of Old Pasture Road asked, given the importance of the position for grants and curriculum development, why it was being targeted to be cut in some way.

"Isn't there another line item?" she said.

Walsh said every time a position is vacated by retirement or nonrenewal, they must evaluate the need for the position.

"Right now we're afraid of the budget issues coming down the line and this opportunity presented itself to us," Walsh said.

The school committee vote was 3-0, with Astino and Snowdale abstaining.

Cohasset Education Foundation supports CMI student boat-building program

Cohasset Maritime Institute announced receipt of a $1,500 grant from the Cohasset Education Foundation in support of CMI's boat-building program. The gift from CEF will support the purchase of lumber, fasteners and supplies associated with boat building.

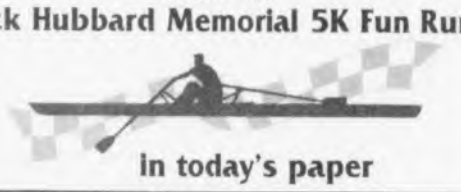
Each day and each week, students will learn how to build a boat from start to finish.

The CEF grant allows Cohasset Maritime Institute to offer a student-centered boat-building program, scheduled to begin July 12. The full six-week student program will meet 8:30 to 11:30 a.m. Monday through Friday and again from 12:30 to 3:30 p.m. Each day and each week, students will learn how to build a boat from start to finish.

The fee for the entire six-week morning or afternoon program is $550. Participation in half the program, July 12 through July 30 or Aug. 2 through Aug. 20, costs $350 for a spot in the morning session or the afternoon session. Each morning or afternoon session is limited to a maximum of six students, ages 13 through 18. Students will enjoy individual attention from boat builder Richard Wilmore.

Boat-builder Richard Wilmore admires the lines of the Swampscott Dory after completing work on the inwhales.

Program details can be found on the CMI website at rowcmi.com.



To further support the program, the newly christened Swampscott Dory will be raffled. Only 26 tickets will be sold. All participants will be able to spend a day with Wilmore, as well take a chance on owning the dory, valued at $6,500.

Cohasset Carillon recitals this summer

The 86th annual Cohasset Carillon Summer Recital Series continue at 6 p.m. each Sunday until Aug. 15. All are invited to bring lawn chairs or a blanket along with a picnic supper to enjoy on the Common while listening to the music of the bells. Free popcorn and lemonade will be available, thanks to the families of St. Stephen's Church. After each recital, a brief tour of the tower will be offered for those interested in seeing the instrument in the playing cabinet and the bells in the tower above.

Cohasset Carillon can proudly claim the oldest continuing annual recital series in North America. It is also the largest carillon by number of bells (57) in New England. The smallest bell weighs only 29 pounds, the largest 5 1/2 tons, more than 11,000 pounds. It was the second carillon to arrive in the United States; Gloucester welcomed the first carillon in 1923.

Among the guest recitalists this summer season will be carillonneurs from the Netherlands and Denmark; the United States and Canada. The last recital on Aug. 15, played by Milford Myhre, Carillonneur Emeritus from Lake Wales, Fla., will honor Sally Slade Warner, Carillonneur at St. Stephen's Church from 1985 through 2009. Slade Warner died in December 2009 after a brief illness. Internationally recognized as an accomplished organist and carillonneur, she will be remembered by her many friends in the American Guild of Organists, the Guild of Carillonneurs of North American and in the St. Stephen's Church community.

by Alan Carney, Director & Jennifer Moran, CSA, Community Liaison
DEALING WITH DIABETES
For diabetic seniors who live at home, having help managing the condition is critical. Home healthcare services can provide personnel who assist the senior client in preventing the complications of diabetes. A home healthcare medical aide can act as a liaison between the senior and his or her physician. An aide may arrange for hemoglobin tests that provide a more accurate assessment of blood sugar levels over a period of time. This ensures that medical treatments can be more specifically targeted to the senior's needs. Healthcare medical aides can coordinate visits to the ophthalmologist to check for diabetic eye conditions, as well as to the podiatrist, who can check feet for proper circulation and any nerve damage.
Diabetes is just one of the many chronic conditions that today's seniors wrestle with. But managing a disease can be complicated - your parents may forget medications or appointments - and it can be exhausting to take that whole burden on your own shoulders. Let us help. Our aides can provide the healthy diet and medication reminders that make managing diabetes a lot easier. That's better for their health and for your peace of mind. Call 781-878-2994 today to find out more about what we can do for you both. We are located at 145 Washington St., Suite 11. In-home help for Massachusetts seniors.
P.S. For seniors with advanced diabetes, a team of physicians is usually needed.
To you, it's about finding a trusted partner. To us, it's personal.

A taste of stardom

Local guitar teacher puts on concert series with rec. dept.

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Cohasset is long way from the country music capital of the world in Nashville, Tenn. But few musicians got started playing music in that famed town — most got their start playing coffeehouses and writing music in their bedroom.

To provide an outlet for young musicians to get their start, South Shore guitar teacher Jim Armstrong, with the support of the recreation department, is putting on a free concert series featuring some of Cohasset youngest musical talent.

Dubbed the Blue Jay Café, the four-session concert series will feature mini-sets by Armstrong's students. The free concerts will take place on four Friday afternoons from 3 to 5 p.m. every other week. Shows will be July 9 and 23 and Aug. 6 and 20.

The Blue Jay Café, Armstrong said, offers the young talent a performance venue and a chance to show off their talent to their family, friends and an even a greater audience.

"I hope that Cohasset residents come out to the free family-friendly concert series to see and hear the South Shore's own up-and-coming musical and song-writing talent," Armstrong said.

The most shaded part of the Cohasset Common will host the live music. The concerts will take place on the far end of the Common on the patch of shaded grass between St. Stephen's and the pond on the Common. The student performers will be backed by their teacher Armstrong and alternating members of the Armstrong Brothers Band.

The Blue Jay Café is an extension of the recreation department's standing summer concert series on Thursday evenings.

"It complements our Thursday summer concert series and highlights the youth of Cohasset — and the future performers of community," said Recreation Director Ted Carroll, adding he hopes Armstrong's students will end up on the "big stage" on Thursday evening in a few years.

The name of the concert series, Blue Jay Café, pays homage to the famous Nashville venue Bluebird Café. Armstrong said. The Bluebird Café is considered one of the most important live venues in Nashville for industry professionals to discover new performing and songwriting talent — and for those talented folks to be discovered.

According to the Bluebird Café's website, bluebirdcafe.com, country music superstars like Garth Brooks, Kenny Chesney and Taylor Swift played on their open mic and Sunday Songwriters Shows before they were discovered.

Each student will bring his or her own flavor of music and interpretation to the stage. Some prefer country tunes, while others like to rock out.

"It's exciting to perform and it's good experience," Marina Longo, 10, said. She has been playing the guitar for about nine months and is looking forward to showing off the progress she has made.

Nine-year-old Jackson Stone likes the accolades he gets after putting on a great performance.

For Sophie Stone, an 11-year-old vocalist, it's about seeing hard work pay off.

"You worked really hard to perfect those few songs then you go out there and show off what you're able to do," Sophie said.

For the young talent, sharing their ability and the hard work they have put into the art is one of the most rewarding parts of being a musician.

Sophie will perform songs from her favorite music genre — country. She plans to sing "Me and My Gang" by Rascal Flatts as one of her songs.

"I really like country music; it's fun to listen to. For some reason, country music is more meaningful to me," Sophie said.

When Armstrong's students were asked if they get nervous performing, they gave a resounding "no!"

"They're fearless," Armstrong said with a laugh.

Armstrong works with the students several weeks in advance of a performance to ensure they are ready to perform their chosen set list.

"When you look out at the audience and people are smiling and clapping, it's a really good feeling," said Katie McKeon, 11. She has been playing guitar for a year.

Sam Braun, 10, has been jamming on his guitar for three years. He has already picked the trio of song he will perform: Nickelback's "Photograph," John Denver's "Country Roads" and Taylor Swift's "Picture to Burn."

"Those are the ones I'm really good at and I've practiced the most," Sam said, who named rock as his favorite music genre.

Several of the students will play together in duos. Friends and fourth-graders Alec Durkin and Kristina Dietrich have been playing and taking guitar lessons together for a year-and-a-half.

Katie McGovern and Madison Pratt will tackle "Begin Again" by Colbie Caillat and "Hey, Soul Sister" by Train.

Several of Armstrong's teen students will perform as well, including singer/guitarist/songwriter and Cohasset High junior Anya Gruber.

For the third concert on Friday, Aug. 6, visiting performers will be The Brown Sisters Band. Abby, 16; Sarah, 15; and Audrey, 13, are former Cohasset residents who now live in Boulder, Colo. They will be visiting friends in town this summer. The trio will perform an hour-long set featuring their three-part harmonies and mix of mandolin, guitar and bass.

The Brown Sisters were Armstrong's first students.

"They got me into this business," he said.

At the concert, the sisters will perform their own original songs as well as their favorite country and contemporary pop hits.

Jim Armstrong and his students will play in the summer music series Blue Jay Cafe on Cohasset Common from 3 to 5 p.m. July 9 and 23 and Aug. 6 and 20.

Anya Gruber has been playing the guitar for four years and performs solos.

Brothers and sisters Sam and Grace Brown and Sophie and Jackson Stone sing and play guitar together.

Water that does not belong

Town combats sewer system's I and I issues

"We're never going to defeat it, but we're going to make some significant process."
John Beck

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

In Cohasset, there is a phantom sewer user.

It's an entity that can bring an additional 60,000 gallons of water into the plant every day — and on a rainy day that number jumps to hundreds of thousands of gallons.

Cohasset is not alone. This phantom sewer user plagues sewer systems everywhere.

Inflow and infiltration, more commonly referred to as "I and I," is the water that gets into the sewer system not through drains in residential bathrooms or kitchens, but through cracked pipes, improper connections and improperly sealed manholes. And it is water that the treatment plant must process.

The town of Cohasset allocated $1 million to the fight the growing I and I problem in the town sewer system back in 2006. With that funding, the town has been identifying and correcting leaks, some in the tens of thousands of gallons a day.

I and I not only affects the plant on an operational level when it rains, but also from an economic point of view.

On Monday night, sewer commission Chairman John Beck and consulting engineer Dan Coughlin came before selectmen to offer an update on the I and I progress.

"I and I reduces the capacity of the wastewater treatment plant that could be used to service more home and leaves the potential for overflows," Beck said.

On a daily basis, the sewer treatment plant processes approximately 240,000 gallons, but the water department is only showing an average consumption of 180,000 gallons per day.

"It's water we process and don't get paid for," Beck said.

To combat the problem, Coughlin Engineering Services has been doing a combination of field and desktop work. They have found some smaller leaks and believe they may have found a primary culprit in the harbor area.

During a storm this past spring, a correlation was seen in the tide levels and an increased flow rate to the water entering the plant. When the tide was high, the water flowed more and faster into the plant.

An independent study determined there was a series of openings in the manholes in Jacob's Meadow. The manholes were made watertight and the estimated savings during peak storm events is 600,000 gallons per day.

A sewer service rehabilitation and replacement around Jacob's Meadow is the next big item, with an estimated cost of $390,000.

Half of the $1 million allocation has been bonded out and about $200,000 has been spent to date.

"We're never going to defeat it, but we're going to make some significant process," Beck said.

Water Update

Cook and Avalon payments received

The town was counting on two payments from local real estate developers to close a large portion of the water department's budget gap — $435,000 to be exact.

Town Manager Bill Griffin said, as of Wednesday morning, the last day of the fiscal year, the town had received both payments. Avalon provided its $335,000 check on Tuesday, and the Cook Estate turned a $100,000 check in on Wednesday. Both developers had pledged to have the payment in by the close of the fiscal year on June 30.

Avalon was issued its building permit earlier this week as well, which was the trigger for the payment.

Water department audit

Following the water department's financial crisis this past spring, many in town made calls for a complete and thorough audit of the department's finances and past operational practices. With the help of the water planning group, Town Manager Bill Griffin has developed a request for proposals (RFP) to solicit an agency to audit the water department's finances, capital spending program and operations. An RFP is a solicitation and outline of services the town is seeking.

At Monday night's selectmen's meeting, it was determined two members of the advisory committee (Merle Brown and Tom Reardon) and a member of the water planning group (Patrick Gallagher) would evaluate the proposals.

Selectmen said they would like to see someone with a strong financial background on the evaluation committee as well. If interested in serving, contact the town manager's office at 781-383-4105.

The RFP will go out next week, Griffin said. The RFP will call for a 60-day turnaround from the date of hire, and Griffin estimates the cost to be between $30,000 and $50,000. The advisory committee has pledged a portion of its reserve funds to pay for the audit.

Celebrating 50 years of summer sailing

The Cohasset Sailing Club (CSC) is hosting its annual summer launch party and 50th anniversary celebration Saturday, July 10. The theme of this year's party harkens back to the beach party movies of Elvis, Frankie Avalon and Annette Funicello. All adult family members and friends of the CSC are cordially invited to attend — guests don't need to be active members, and past members are especially welcome. The club is extending a special free invitation to all the ex-Commodores.

The launch party is the CSC's main social and fundraising event, and features a silent auction to benefit the club. Donations for auction items are actively sought. In past years, these have ranged from handmade jewelry, gift certificates, tickets to Celtics, Patriots, and Red Sox games; golf outings; gourmet dinners; childsitting services; yard care and lawn-mowing services; desserts; sunset cruises; sailing lessons; boat services; paintings and vacation home loans. Jim Porter is the chief donation wrangler and auctioneer. Contact him at jporter@bluefishagency.net or at 781-383-2029.

The festivities, which take place at the clubhouse, begin at 6 p.m. and will carry on to 11 p.m. The dinner spread, which centers around a lobster and barbecue chicken feast, will be served between 6:30 and 8:30 p.m. Tickets are $50 per person, payable to the Cohasset Sailing Club, and are available by contacting Claudia McKeon at mckeonfam@comcast.net or at 781-383-6125.

Cohasset concert series

Cohasset Recreation Department will sponsor a summer concert series. Concerts begin at 6 p.m., except where noted, on Cohasset Common. All performances are free, open to the public and handicap accessible. It's a good idea to bring either lawn chairs or blankets to sit on, and from time to time, insect repellant is a good item to have available.

The schedule follows: Thursday, July 8, Dale and the Duds; Thursday; July 15, The Rusty Skippers; Thursday, July 22, Crossroads Blues Project; and Thursday, July 29, Nowheremen.

Concerts are funded in part through the generosity of the South Shore Playhouse Associates Inc. This program is supported in part by a grant from the Cohasset Cultural Council, a local agency, which is supported by the Massachusetts Cultural Council, a state agency. Donations are accepted and can be made out to Cohasset Recreation Department, Concert Fund, 41 Highland Ave., Cohasset, MA 02025.

GIMME SHELTER

Hull Seaside Animal Rescue would like to keep Sugar and Casper together.

Cute kittens and a proud mama need a home

Cindy recently had two kittens and is ready to be adopted.

This week, Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is looking for a home for Cindy and her two kittens. Ideally the two kittens would go together, but Cindy can be adopted separately, unless of course someone would like to adopt the three of them. Cindy resided in a warehouse and is people friendly. She was probably pregnant prior to coming to the warehouse. When she had the kittens, the people feeding and taking care of her were afraid she'd become angry if they picked up the kittens, so they didn't. Consequently the kittens are somewhat skittish, but are coming along nicely and should be ready for adoption sometime in July. They are about 9 weeks old and should be ready to go in three short weeks. Sugar, is a female and Casper is a male. It's easy to tell them apart as Casper has gray spots on his head. Sugar has them also but they aren't as noticeable.

If you're interested please call Shirl at (781) 925-3380 to make an appointment, or you can visit the shelter during open hours on Saturdays from 2-3 p.m. and Mondays, from 6:30-7:30 p.m.

SCHOOL BRIEFS

Five-year plan may wait

For some months, the school committee has been talking about beginning to establish goals and objectives for the school district for the next five years. A strategic plan has been in place for the past five years.

As of the last discussion, the school committee planned to get started on developing a new five-year plan this fall. But now that Superintendent Denise Walsh is leaving the district, some on the school committee would like to wait until the new superintendent is on board to begin.

School committee member Jeanne Astino advocated for waiting for the new superintendent. She also said she'd like to have the committee set goals and expectations for Walsh for her remaining year with the district.

Vice-chair Alfred Slanetz argued that some level of strategic planning had to be done in order to gain an understanding of what the community is looking for in a new superintendent.

Walsh recommended that the committee advertise for an executive search group — an outside consultant that will help the school committee in the process of hiring a superintendent.

From the audience, former school committee member Adrienne MacCarthy of Doane Street discouraged the committee from moving forward with strategic planning in the fall. She pointed out they had a "lame duck" superintendent and a superintendent that a majority of the committee has shown no confidence in over the past few months.

"It's a waste of everybody's time," MacCarthy said.

"Especially mine," Walsh said.

The committee will research the superintendent search, executive search group options and the strategic planning and at their next scheduled meeting, July 28.

Schools help with water financial crisis

In fiscal 2011, which began on Thursday, the water department is still facing an estimated $300,000 budget shortfall. The shortfall will have to be made up through a variety of methods yet to be determined. Cuts may need to be made in town departments and/or increased fees levied for town services.

At the annual Town Meeting, it was discussed that each department would be proportionally responsible for the debt. Since the schools make up 61 percent of the budget, 61 percent of the shortfall would need to come from the school budget.

Superintendent of Schools Denise Walsh said she was concerned with waiting until the fall to deal with this issue.

"Whatever we end up cutting in the fall for fiscal year 2011 will end up being cut twice," Walsh said. The new budget number for fiscal 2011 with the cuts will become fiscal 2012 baseline budget number.

To prevent that, Walsh proposed using some of the surplus funds from 2010 to pay the town for school's fourth-quarter health care cost. The transfer then frees up money on the town side.

"That makes total sense," said school committee Chairwoman Helene Lieb.

School committee members voted at their June 24 meeting to transfer $100,000 to pay for the school's fourth-quarter health care costs, and cover the school's portion of the water budget's expected shortfall.

With this transfer, school committee member Alfred Slanetz does not expect the town to ask for further funding, or to reduce the fiscal 2011 appropriation, in the fall.

The vote was unanimous.

OPINION

Declaration of Independence, July 4, 1776

When in the course of human events, it becomes necessary for one people to dissolve the political bands which have connected them with another, and to assume among the powers of the earth, the separate and equal station to which the laws of nature and of nature's God entitle them, a decent respect to the opinions of mankind requires that they should declare the causes which impel them to the separation.

We hold these truths to be self-evident: That all men are created equal; that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights; that among these are life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness; that, to secure these rights, governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed; that whenever any form of government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the right of the people to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new government, laying its foundation on such principles, and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their safety and happiness. Prudence, indeed, will dictate that governments long established should not be changed for light and transient causes; and accordingly all experience hath shown that mankind are more disposed to suffer, while evils are sufferable than to right themselves by abolishing the forms to which they are accustomed. But when a long train of abuses and usurpations, pursuing invariably the same object, evinces a design to reduce them under absolute despotism, it is their right, it is their duty, to throw off such government, and to provide new guards for their future security. Such has been the patient sufferance of these colonies; and such is now the necessity which constrains them to alter their former systems of government. The history of the present King of Great Britain is a history of repeated injuries and usurpations, all having in direct object the establishment of an absolute tyranny over these states. To prove this, let facts be submitted to a candid world.

He has refused his assent to laws, the most wholesome and necessary for the public good.

He has forbidden his governors to pass laws of immediate and pressing importance, unless suspended in their operation till his assent should be obtained; and, when so suspended, he has utterly neglected to attend to them.

He has refused to pass other laws for the accommodation of large districts of people, unless those people would relinquish the right of representation in the legislature, a right inestimable to them, and formidable to tyrants only.

He has called together legislative bodies at places unusual uncomfortable, and distant from the depository of their public records, for the sole purpose of fatiguing them into compliance with his measures.

He has dissolved representative houses repeatedly, for opposing, with manly firmness, his invasions on the rights of the people.

He has refused for a long time, after such dissolutions, to cause others to be elected; whereby the legislative powers, incapable of annihilation, have returned to the people at large for their exercise; the state remaining, in the mean time, exposed to all the dangers of invasions from without and convulsions within.

He has endeavored to prevent the population of these states; for that purpose obstructing the laws for naturalization of foreigners; refusing to pass others to encourage their migration hither, and raising the conditions of new appropriations of lands.

He has obstructed the administration of justice, by refusing his assent to laws for establishing judiciary powers.

He has made judges dependent on his will alone, for the tenure of their offices, and the amount and payment of their salaries.

He has erected a multitude of new offices, and sent hither swarms of officers to harass our people and eat out their substance.

He has kept among us, in times of peace, standing armies, without the consent of our legislatures.

He has affected to render the military independent of, and superior to, the civil power.

He has combined with others to subject us to a jurisdiction foreign to our Constitution and unacknowledged by our laws, giving his assent to their acts of pretended legislation:

For quartering large bodies of armed troops among us;

For protecting them, by a mock trial, from punishment for any murders which they should commit on the inhabitants of these states;

For cutting off our trade with all parts of the world;

For imposing taxes on us without our consent;

For depriving us, in many cases, of the benefits of trial by jury;

For transporting us beyond seas, to be tried for pretended offenses;

For abolishing the free system of English laws in a neighboring province, establishing therein an arbitrary government, and enlarging its boundaries, so as to render it at once an example and fit instrument for introducing the same absolute rule into these colonies;

For taking away our charters, abolishing our most valuable laws, and altering fundamentally the forms of our governments;

For suspending our own legislatures, and declaring themselves invested with power to legislate for us in all cases whatsoever.

He has abdicated government here, by declaring us out of his protection and waging war against us.

He has plundered our seas, ravaged our coasts, burned our towns, and destroyed the lives of our people.

He is at this time transporting large armies of foreign mercenaries to complete the works of death, desolation, and tyranny already begun with circumstances of cruelty and perfidy scarcely paralleled in the most barbarous ages, and totally unworthy the head of a civilized nation.

He has constrained our fellow-citizens, taken captive on the high seas, to bear arms against their country, to become the executioners of their friends and brethren, or to fall themselves by their hands.

He has excited domestic insurrection among us, and has endeavored to bring on the inhabitants of our frontiers the merciless Indian savages, whose known rule of warfare is an undistinguished destruction of all ages, sexes, and conditions.

In every stage of these oppressions we have petitioned for redress in the most humble terms; our repeated petitions have been answered only by repeated injury. A prince, whose character is thus marked by every act which may define a tyrant, is unfit to be the ruler of a free people.

Nor have we been wanting in our attentions to our British brethren. We have warned them, from time to time, of attempts by their legislature to extend an unwarrantable jurisdiction over us. We have reminded them of the circumstances of our emigration and settlement here. We have appealed to their native justice and magnanimity; and we have conjured them, by the ties of our common kindred, to disavow these usurpations which would inevitably interrupt our connections and correspondence. They too, have been deaf to the voice of justice and of consanguinity. We must, therefore, acquiesce in the necessity which denounces our separation, and hold them as we hold the rest of mankind, enemies in war, in peace friends.

We, therefore, the representatives of the United States of America, in General Congress assembled, appealing to the Supreme Judge of the world for the rectitude of our intentions, do, in the name and by the authority of the good people of these colonies solemnly publish and declare, That these United Colonies are, and of right ought to be, FREE AND INDEPENDENT STATES; that they are absolved from all allegiance to the British crown and that all political connection between them and the state of Great Britain is, and ought to be, totally dissolved; and that, as free and independent states, they have full power to levy war, conclude peace, contract alliances, establish commerce, and do all other acts and things which independent states may of right do. And for the support of this declaration, with a firm reliance on the protection of Divine Providence, we mutually pledge to each other our lives, our fortunes, and our sacred honor.

Changes would harm music program

TO THE EDITOR:

I am deeply troubled by proposed changes to the music program that were outlined by Superintendent Denise Walsh at the June 24 school committee meeting. Walsh states that the rationale for the changes is two-fold — to increase Deer Hill students' access to performance opportunities and to assure teacher continuity for students moving from one school to the next. The proposed changes including eliminating fourth grade band as we know it, reducing music faculty by 20 percent by not replacing the outgoing middle school music teacher, asking band teachers to teach chorus and chorus teachers to teach band and shuffling teachers between schools.

The Mass Curriculum Frameworks states that students should be performing on an instrument by the end of fourth grade, which students currently are. The proposed changes to the Deer Hill program will instead result in performance readiness by the end of the fifth grade. Keep the fourth grade band program as is, and add a requirement that all students join either band or chorus. Consider adding a strings program and a guitar program like so many neighboring districts have. It seems to me that adding programs, not cutting programs, is the way to increase access.

As for teacher continuity, I looked up this phrase on Google and read the first 30 articles. Most of the writing was unrelated to looping, the practice of moving teachers up a grade with their students. In the few items related to looping, urban districts were looking for ways to improve struggling math, writing or English-language learner programs. There was nothing about music and nothing that would suggest it would be important to a district like Cohasset. And frankly, if teacher continuity is so important to students making the transition from one school to the next, why wouldn't it be done in the core subjects of math, reading, etc?

The proposed changes include decreasing high school faculty from 2.0 full-time teachers to 1.2. That's a 40 percent decrease in staffing at the high school. It would also require our 10-year band teacher to teach chorus and our 30-year chorus teacher to teach band. Walsh says the teachers are certified to do so and I'm sure she's right. But isn't Walsh asking teachers to teach something they haven't done in years, if ever at all, and asking those teachers to teach it well in 40 percent less instructional time? How does that meet Walsh's definition of excellence?

The only person that seems to be in favor of the superintendent's proposed changes is the superintendent herself. This feels dangerously like the deleveling discussion. Where are the teachers, students, administrators and community members who support Walsh's ideas? They are not speaking at the school committee meeting, not writing letters to the Mariner, not circulating petitions, not speaking up around town. Where are they? As far as I can see, they don't exist.

The presented rationale for not replacing the outgoing teacher simply doesn't hold up under scrutiny. It's disingenuous at best. A full-time middle school music/band/chorus teacher is in the budget for the coming school year. The position should be posted and filled immediately, as school committee secretary Paul Schubert proposed. Our music program has always been a gem; let's keep it that way.

TO THE EDITOR:

Thank you Cohasset for a spectacular event!

Our success would not be possible if it weren't for the tremendous teamwork of my race coordinators and a volunteer staff of more than 75 people (all Cohasset residents). All of these people share the same passion as I do to deliver a great race for the athletes and spectators. They include Sigrid Burnett, Suzy Doherty, Dave Dornaus, Des Havlicek, Matthew Herndon, Mike Hughes, Joe Mahoney, Catherine O'Callaghan, Cal O'Callaghan, Donald St. Sauveur, Kate Simmons and Deb Thomas.

I am very lucky to have the highly talented Cohasset safety/medical team on my side. People like Chief Silvia, Chief DeLuca, Lt. Quigley, Lt. Dockray, Harbormaster Gibbons and their staff are first-class.

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

As advertised, the Beach Street top coat was placed on Thursday, June 24. We had promised the residents that we'd do everything in our power to get that paving top coat down by the end of that week. Of course, things never go exactly the way we expect. There is always an unsuspected curveball that comes flying over the plate, just when you don't expect it.

After we had done our phone and e-mail notifications, as is our custom prior to paving, the paving contractor showed up with a huge paving machine that is capable of paving curb to curb in one pass. The usual way we have paved the roads has been with a paver that does half of the road at a time, but not this time. So after we had notified the residents that they would have half of the road available, bingo, not true. The whole road was closed off behind the paver. We apologize to the residents who were inconvenienced by this change. The one thing we have really learned is that in construction projects, there are always surprises.

If you look carefully at the photo of the paver, you will see that it is being fed by a semi-trailer dump truck, which holds about 34 tons of asphalt. Although it sounds like a lot of asphalt, one truck will only provide enough asphalt to pave about 100 feet of Beach Street. Also, imagine each of these large semi-trailer trucks had to back all the way down Beach Street from Atlantic Avenue to meet the paving machine. That takes a really good driver to manage that maneuver around Beach Street's curves and over its hills.

You may remember that Thursday, June 24, was one of the recent really warm days. Consequently, it took a considerably long time for the hot asphalt to cool down and firm up so that it could be driven on. One of our pet peeves during the paving operation is people who feel that they have a birthright to drive on the newly paved road, even they don't live in the neighborhood. In one instance, during the Beach Street paving, a resident drove partway down on the still-soft asphalt, did a three-point turn to turn around and left a nice divot in the new road. This necessitated the paver to return to this spot and fix the road, slowing production. The road looks fine now.

We've spoken about our pavers before, who we feel do a really nice job. But we'd also like to report to you that they are very concerned about the aesthetics of their work environment. Please see the photo of the beautiful floral display on the side of their paving machine.

While we're talking about the paving contractor, we'd like you to know that they donated the paving to resurface the basketball court at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. Thanks, T L Edwards.

Revitalization Phase III

In an earlier column, we mentioned that the town was in the process of applying for a PWED grant to extend the village revitalization project. PWED stands for Public Works Economic Development and is a grant to improve town infrastructure that will ultimately improve the local business climate. The last improvement work was done in 2007. Originally, the project was to include the central village and extend down through the commercial area of Ripley Road. With our funds exhausted, we were never able to focus on the Ripley Road area.

Last Monday evening at the selectmen's meeting, a formal hearing was held to allow residents to comment on the proposed grant submission. Two residents had comments, which were duly noted. After the hearing, the selectmen voted unanimously to submit the grant request to the Commonwealth.

This past Wednesday, June 30, we submitted a grant proposal to Massachusetts Department of Transportation which would extend the revitalization project to include additional parking in the town parking lot, visual and pedestrian enhancements to the rear of South Main Street along Parking Way, redesign of the Depot Court/Ripley Road intersection to improve both pedestrian and vehicular safety and changes to the Ripley Road corridor to connect it closer to the balance of the commercial area and improve this road which is a major entrance to the village area.

We will keep you posted on the progress.

condition for the triathlon.

And, I owe a big thanks to you, my fellow neighbors, for your support in our efforts and your patience getting around town on race morning. We will continue to look for ways to seamlessly work the race around your Sunday routines and find new ways to maximize commerce to our stores during race weekend.

Over the last four years, the Cohasset Triathlon has raised more than $600,000 for the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation — a feat that exceeds my wildest expectations.

The triathlon is a fantastic example of one town pulling together to showcase the best it has to offer. I have no doubt that year after year the triathlon will continue to bring commerce to our town and build our reputation as a "must-see" stop for visitors on the South Shore.

From Canada to Cohasset

TO THE EDITOR:

My wife and I, along with our son and his partner, were the four Canadians participating in Sunday's Cohasset Triathlon. My wife and I have made a commitment to return to the Cohasset Tri for 25 years. We look forward to 22 more.

I wish it were 122. We can't get enough. Our son has just texted me from a business trip in beautiful Atlantic Canada, "I'm missing Cohasset already!"

The region, the town, the businesses, the people, the race! We love it. Each year we stay longer — next year we want to make it a month. We've made "same-time-next-year" friends. We have adopted you as our own. We think of you daily throughout the year.

Of course the focal point for this love affair is the race. I can speak with some experience having been involved with Olympic Games, world championships and huge single-day productions — the Cohasset Triathlon is one of the finest all-round events in the world today.

Nowhere else will you find the sublime combination of size, spectacle, human touch, fun and merit as the Cohasset Tri. When Gary Hall Jr. finished the awards presentation Sunday with his soaring thanks on behalf of juvenile diabetes, we were emotionally spent. Happily.

My observation, from an outside perspective, is that the Town of Cohasset has in its annual triathlon event what every community yearns for — a genuine community asset that showcases the very best its citizenry has to offer. You are to be commended. And thank you for making us feel so welcome. Our training has already begun for 2011!

Thanks for help with kids ride

TO THE EDITOR:

On Sunday June 13, 2010, I rode in the PMC Kids ride. I am a student at Derby Academy in Hingham. The ride was to help find a cure for cancer.

I am proud to say that, with the help of family and friends, I reached my goal for a total of $1,125 closer to having a cure for cancer. In total, the PMC Kids Hingham ride raised over $30,000. The ride took place in Wompatuck State Park and many people participated. Many people's lives have been affected by cancer. My grandfather died of cancer and my sister's friend Jacqueline is battling cancer. I rode for them, and I rode to make a difference. So thank you for helping me.

Don't change music program

TO THE EDITOR:

Editor's note: A copy of the following letter was provided to the Mariner for publication.

Dr. Denise Walsh, Superintendent

Mr. Joel Antolini, Principal, CMHS

Dr. Jennifer DeChiara, Principal, Deer Hill School

cc: Members, Cohasset School Committee

I am writing to once again implore, beg, plead and beg again the school administration — particularly the principals — to rethink their plan for the delivery of music education during the 2010-11 school year.

Much has already been said. Not replacing the middle school music teacher, and instead spreading thin the incredible faculty who already give it their all at the high school and Deer Hill, is undercutting the entire program and will have long-term negative consequences. If there are issues with students being removed from academic classes for fourth/fifth grade band, work on those issues within the school. If you want students "performing," change the general music class to a chorus class. Of course children should be making music! Why rework the entire music program? And why make fundamental changes without having a representation of the stakeholders at the table helping to design a plan that makes sense to all? The most significant missing ingredient in all these proposed changes is the design input and endorsement of the teachers.

In Cohasset, we talk often about 21st century learning; it is mentioned at almost every school committee and school council meeting. The foundation of P21 learning (The Partnership for 21st Century Skills, p21.org) is the following: critical thinking and problem solving, communication, collaboration and creativity and innovation — all of which have been completely absent from the design of the proposed revised music program. And I would argue that more than any other subject or program, music, by its very nature, embodies all of these critical life and learning skills.

Please hear the impassioned pleas of students, parents, teachers and community members and retain the middle school music position. It is when our students are performing for others — whether on the sports fields or in the school musical, while taking water samples in the Gulf or jamming with the jazz band at a community event — that we, as a community, can really begin to sing the praises of our schools.

Keep music staffing the same

TO THE EDITOR:

A copy of this letter was provided to the Cohasset Mariner.

Dear School Administrators and Members of the School Committee:

I am writing to express my concern about changes being made to the music programs at the Deer Hill, middle school and high school levels and to express my concern with the way this has been handled and communicated. I hope the principals will reconsider these changes and keep the current level of staffing and programs at all three levels.

Through creative problem-solving with all staff members involved, there must be ways to address the superintendent's issues about performance time and scheduling without having to cut the fourth-grade band and creating a domino effect throughout the entire music program at all three schools.

I am a proud alum of the Cohasset Public Schools music program. From the Deer Hill and junior high bands to the many ensembles that were available at the high school, I enjoyed them all. In the late 1970s, when class sizes were large and budgets were tight, we still had a thriving instrumental music program. I was in the concert band, marching band, pit orchestra, drama program, jazz/rock ensemble and jazz combo. There were only 96 kids in my graduating class, but we had strong participation in music because we had strong music teachers and an administration that valued music and made it easily accessible to all.

School bands have always been an American institution. Students can take private lessons, if their parents can afford them, but the only way they can learn to play with an ensemble is through a formal band program. And to become a strong musician and a strong ensemble, worthy of participating with other school ensembles or entering festivals and competitions, you need frequent, formal practice. A part-time band is half as good as a full-time band. Playing time matters. Quantity affects quality.

We had an especially strong jazz band in my high school years and won several competitions. I recently reconnected with some of my former bandmates on the "Cohasset High School Jazz and Concert Band Alumni" page on Facebook. Two of them went on to the New England Conservatory; one now plays with a symphony orchestra in Spain, and another is playing at Tanglewood this summer. A couple others went to Berklee College of Music. One now plays music for pleasure in New York City, while the other is an accomplished recording artist in London. I was accepted at Berklee after our jazz combo played at a competition there, but decided to go the liberal arts route instead. Thankfully, there's still a spot for me in the Rusty Skippers! The bottom line is, there's no way any of us could have been accepted to music schools if we hadn't had strong training in a strong school band.

The majority of students will not choose to go on to music schools, but they will have the skills to continue playing with others as a hobby. I could write on and on about research on music education and how it boosts achievement in other areas. But I have yet to meet a person who plays music to improve their math test scores. Most people play music because they enjoy it. Some are compelled to sing or play instrumental music and prefer it over sports and almost anything else. For those people, a school with a part-time, watered-down music program would be a dismal place indeed.

I find it ironic that after many years of talk about creativity and embracing multiple intelligences and learning styles, the school administration is about to make drastic cuts to its music program. And yes, the plans on the table are drastic. I'm not sure there's anything I can say to sway people who just don't "get it" when it comes to music education. But I have to try for the sake of my younger son in middle school who is counting the days until he can play with the CHS jazz band. I sure hope Stephanie Moriarty sticks around 'til then; she and Steve Biagini and all the music teachers deserve our utmost support and respect.

Health Notes

The brain is the ultimate machine

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

The media have been so obsessed with finger-pointing and describing the failures of BP, they have missed a crucial point — that with more than a 1,000 drilling platforms in the Gulf of Mexico, a substantial spill of a product as coveted and profitable as oil was bound to happen.

True, no one was able to predict the where, when and how, but it's just one more case of hoping for the best and not planning for the worst in preparation for the growing number of variables we must face in modern life. The first and best solution to the problem is to replace the most direct link to control of the situation. That was done by removal of the chief executive officer of BP, a clever guy when it came to finance and using prestige, but inadequate in a pinch where a new paradigm was needed to be put in place.

Fortunately, a barrier between individuals and chaos for us human beings is the ultimate controller — the human brain. Each wired differently and unique among living creatures, the human brain possesses numerous characteristics not present in other mammals, living or extinct.

What's he thinking? Medical access to the brain, that dynamo driving human activity, is only partially available in real time and only in limited form. We all remember macabre movies in which a skullcap with electrodes used to probe the brain for thoughts is switched on, but it's not possible, either in the near or far term. The only real indicators to how a person thinks are the answers to test questions. And considering how many tests are out there, it's a wonder we know as much as we believe we do.

We've talked about the printing press invented by Gutenberg and the fact that it stimulated the growth of a population having many more thoughts and words to use. We've followed that with the various gadgets for transmitting words, sounds, pictures and movies simultaneously over great distances. Who knows what other devices and concepts will be added to those already assaulting our respective psyches?

From the beginning, some 500 articles ago, the general pattern of Health Notes was to describe an ailment, provide some facts about it — how virulent, how widespread, etc. — and then describe the cure or at least something that provided relief.

Perhaps the time has come to change Health Notes approach and remark on the character of the waves of information rolling in on the beach of our consciousness. The press and other media are frantically trying to report every detail and barely keeping up with the most important listing of current events. Meanwhile, other things having a heavy bearing on our health are occurring, largely without comment by the media. For example:

- reduction of nutritive value of staple products like vegetables and fruits.
- the inclusion of additives of unknown composition for cosmetic purposes or to change the mass of a product so it will weigh more, or at least appear to.
- creation of empathy groups to champion causes that benefit a product to the detriment of more healthy alternatives, such as using egg whites to supplement the fluid within a package of frozen chicken breasts or adding salt to previously frozen fish to reduce discoloration upon thawing.

The examples of generalized changes in the composition of certain food products were discussed (off the record) with several experts in food nutrition. In general, there was some concurrence with the above topics when we casually mentioned them.

Who knows how many other concepts, stratagems or just plain products that need to be gotten rid of will be foisted upon us in the future? Health Notes issues its standard warning — read the label, think about whether you really need the product and then make your decision.

Steve Bobo is a longtime member of the Cohasset Board of Health.

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. Beacon Hill Roll Call records the votes of local representatives on three roll calls and the votes of local senators on nine roll calls from the week of June 21-26. Many of the Senate roll calls are on proposed amendments to the bill that would allow the construction of three casinos in Massachusetts.

ADOPT $27.94 BILLION FISCAL 2011 STATE BUDGET (H 4800)

House 121-28, Senate 33-7, approved and sent to Gov. Deval Patrick the conference committee version of a $27.94 billion fiscal 2011 state budget that cuts local aid by $159 million, makes many cuts in hundreds of programs, increases funding for others and uses $100 million from the State's Rainy Day Fund.

This budget does not include the provisions from the Senate version of the budget that would crack down on state benefits for illegal immigrants and punish the employers who hire them.

The Senate version would require all businesses that receive state contracts to verify that their employees are legally here in Massachusetts and ban businesses from bidding on state contracts if they are found to violate federal law that prohibits the hiring of illegal immigrants. It would also bar illegal immigrant students from receiving the benefit that would allow them to pay the same discounted in-state tuition rates and fees that legal students pay at Massachusetts colleges and universities, prohibit illegal immigrants from being placed in a public housing unit ahead of any applicant who is in the United States legally, establish a toll-free hotline for people to report the employment of illegal immigrants and create new penalties for falsifying state driver's licenses and IDs.

The conference committee version codifies into law existing regulations and practices that bar state services and benefits for illegal immigrants.

Supporters said that the budget is a fiscally responsible and balanced one that funds important programs to the best of the state's ability during this recession. They said that it does not raise taxes or fees and closes a projected $3 billion deficit.

Some opponents said that the budget is fiscally irresponsible, includes wasteful spending and omits more than $1 billion of savings proposals that were offered by the GOP. They argued that many reasonable reforms that would have saved money and funded more local aid and other important programs were rejected. Others had various reasons for voting against the budget.

(A "Yes" vote is for the $27.94 billion budget. A "No" vote is against it.)

BAN TEXTING AND REQUIRE MORE FREQUENT EYE TESTS BY DRIVERS 75 AND OLDER (H 4795)

House 154-1, Senate 37-0, approved and sent to Gov. Patrick the conference committee version of a bill banning text messaging while driving and imposing a $100 fine for a first offense, $250 for a second offense and $500 for a third violation. The measure also prohibits drivers under 18 from using any type of cell phone or mobile electronic device.

Another section requires drivers 75 and older to renew their driver's licenses in person and take an eye test at the Registry of Motor Vehicles (RMV) every five years. Current law requires all drivers, regardless of age, to renew their licenses every five years but only requires that they do it in person and take an eye test at the RMV every ten years.

Supporters said that this long overdue bill would save lives and prevent injuries. They noted the dangers of using cell phones and texting.

The lone opponent offered no arguments.

(A "Yes" vote is for the bill. A "No" vote is against it.)

Y	Y

SUPPORT RULING OF THE CHAIR ON BUDGET (H 4800)

A six-member House-Senate conference committee reported out a compromise version of a $27.94 billion fiscal 2011 state budget. The committee drafted the new version because the House and Senate had approved different drafts of the budget. The compromise version is presented to the House and Senate for a vote by each branch. Under joint House-Senate rule 11A, "Matters on which there exists no disagreement between the branches shall not be disturbed by the committee on conference."

When the conference committee version was brought before the House, Republicans charged that it was improperly before the House because the conference committee had exceeded its authority under rule 11A by changing the funding of items on which the two branches had not disagreed and by including new items that were not even before the committee.

The House 131-18, voted mostly along party lines and upheld the ruling of the chair that the conference committee version is properly before the House.

Supporters of the chair's ruling cited a 1980 case in which a conference committee was given wide latitude in crafting a compromise budget. They argued that this flexibility is especially needed this year because of the uncertainty of whether the state will receive the $600 million in federal funds that it is anticipating.

Opponents of the ruling said that the conference committee clearly exceeded its authority and broke a joint House-Senate rule. They argued that the budget should be shipped back to the conference committee and properly adjusted to follow the rules.

(A "Yes" vote is in favor of the chair's ruling and supports that the budget is properly before the House. A "No" vote is against the chair's ruling and supports that the budget is not properly before the House because the committee exceeded its authority.)

	Y

The next seven roll calls are on proposed amendments to the bill that would allow the construction of three casinos in the Bay State.

PROHIBIT SMOKING IN CASINOS (S 2495) - Senate 24-15, approved an amendment that would ban smoking in all casinos. The amendment replaced a provision in the proposed casino bill that would allow casinos to make 25 percent of the casino a designated smoking area.

(A "Yes" vote is for the smoking ban. A "No" vote is against the ban.)

Y

ALLOW SMOKING IN SENATE CHAMBER (S 2495)

Senate 0-39, rejected a motion to allow smoking on the Senate floor. Current Senate rules prohibit smoking in the Senate chamber unless two-thirds of the members vote to suspend the rule. There was no debate on the motion.

The motion was made both with tongue in cheek and to make a point that the state's workplace smoking ban is apparently flexible. Some members complained that the motion was offered in jest. They argued that the issue of a smoking ban is not a joke and is about saving lives.

(A "No" vote is against lifting the Senate smoking ban and favors the ban.)

Present

ABUTTING COMMUNITIES CAN VETO CASINO (S 2495)

Senate 9-30, rejected an amendment that would prohibit a casino from being built unless it is approved on a ballot question by the host community, any city or town abutting the host community and any community within 15 miles of the proposed casino. The amendment would have replaced a provision in the proposed casino bill that only requires the approval of the host community.

(A "Yes" vote is for requiring a ballot question in the additional communities. A "No" vote is against requiring a ballot question in the additional communities.)

N

RAISE TAX ON CASINOS FROM 25 PERCENT TO 30 PERCENT (S 2495)

Senate 8-31, rejected an amendment that would raise the tax on casinos from 25 percent to 30 percent of their daily gross income.

(A "Yes" vote is for the hike to 30 percent. A "No" vote is against the hike.)

N

EXTEND SIMULCASTING AT RACETRACKS (S 2495)

Senate 28-10, approved a bill extending until July 31, 2012 the state's simulcasting law that allows gamblers at the state's four racetracks to bet on dog and horse races broadcast from other states. The old extension is scheduled to expire in a few weeks on July 31.

Supporters of the two-year extension said that without it, the four tracks would be forced to close and hundreds of jobs and tax revenue would be lost. They said that the extension would help many families during this difficult recession. They argued that allowing simulcasting of dog racing does not go against the will of the voters who approved a ban on live dog racing in 2008.

Opponents of the two-year extension said that allowing betting on the simulcasting of dog races is against the will of the voters. They argued that the intent of the voters in 2008 was to ban all dog racing from taking place in Massachusetts or being shown from other states on television in Massachusetts. Some said that they would support the extension if it only applied to horse racing.

(A "Yes" vote is for the two-year extension. A "No" vote is against the two-year extension.)

N

INCREASE LOCAL AID TO CITIES AND TOWNS (S 2495)

Senate 13-25, rejected an amendment that would increase from 33.3 percent to 60 percent the share of casino revenues that would go back to cities and towns as local aid. The amendment also reduces from 33.3 percent to 20 percent both the share that would be used to help reduce the state's debt and the share for economic development.

(A "Yes" vote is for the increased local aid. A "No" vote is against it.)

Y

BAN TRANS FATS IN CASINOS (S 2495)

Senate 4-34, rejected an amendment that would ban the use of artificial trans fats, also known as partially hydrogenated vegetable oils, in any Massachusetts casino.

The sponsor of the amendment proposed the ban tongue-in-cheek to make the point that some senators are attempting to micromanage the casinos by prohibiting free drinks for gamblers, ATMs and the serving of alcohol between 2 a.m. and 8 a.m.

(A "Yes" vote is for the ban. A "No" vote is against the ban).

Sandy Beach Happenings

COURTESY PHOTO

Anna Roberts, one of the new guards at Sandy Beach, made the dean's list at the University of Alabama this past semester.

Meet the lifeguard staff

The summer has started on a great note, and our staff is excited to be on duty at Sandy Beach. We have many staff returning this year and some new faces joining us.

We have 18 full-time, part-time and substitute guards who regularly work at the beach. The guard staff trains and drills often, under the guidance of manager and senior lifeguard Jennifer DiSabatino. The guards are Olivia Adkins, Moira Donohue, Allie Farren, Amanda Farren, Sarah Libby, Will Lynner, Morgan McCarthy, Pat McCormack, Dean McNary, Mitch McNary, Kate O'Callahan, Thomas Pecca, Anna Roberts, Nick Secatore, Sam Spall, Sydney Waters and David (DJ) Weiss.

The staff is an accomplished and talented bunch. Here is a look at what each of them are doing in addition to their guard duties.

D.J. Weiss, Sarah Libby and Will Lynner recently graduated from Cohasset High School. D.J., who also will share acting manager duties with 2009 CHS graduate Kate O'Callahan, will start at Emmanuel College in the fall. Sarah will be a Friar at Providence College, and Will is going to Choate Rosemary Hall.

Thomas Pecca, in his third year or guarding, also graduated this year, from Boston College High School and will attend the University of Miami this year.

Anna Roberts, a 2009 CHS graduate and current student at the University of Alabama, is new to our staff this year, as is Nick Secatore, a 2008 CHS graduate and current student at Boston University.

Sam Spall, who will be a senior at Hingham High School in the fall, returns for a second year. Sam swims competitively in United States Swimming with the Weymouth Waves.

Olivia Adkins, Allie Farren, Pat McCormack, Sydney Waters, Dean and Mitch McNary have all graduated from the ranks of beach maintenance workers to join the guarding staff as part-time and substitute guards.

All Sandy Beach guards, including senior guard Jen DiSabatino, are certified in Red Cross Waterfront Lifeguard training, which requires additional training beyond the basic lifeguarding course to prevent injury and respond to emergencies in a beach environment.

We always strive for guard excellence. In addition to the preseason waterfront lifeguard training at the Weymouth Club, Jen leads the staff by doing regular dry land and water drills.

The lightning meter we have added arms the staff with the ability to clear the patrons in the event of lightning spotted. Please respect the staff when they ask to clear the water or beach. When lighting is detected, you must clear the beach; when thunder is heard you must clear the water. The rule is 30 minutes between lightning/thunder before patrons can return and the new meter clocks those intervals for our staff.

Please respect the lifeguards' judgment and training, as they are here to assist and make safety the priority for all patrons of our beautiful beach. Above all, the staff is there to prevent injury.

"If the most dramatic thing we have to do all summer is bandage a stubbed toe, we've done our job well," Jen said.

—Ted Purdy and Jen DiSabatino

Utility plan wouldn't work

COMMENTARY

GARY VANDERWAIL

I disagree with much of Tom Callahan's commentary, "Utility Management Going Forward," which appeared in the June 18 Mariner. I would like here to comment on a few main points of disagreement, leaving several others unaddressed.

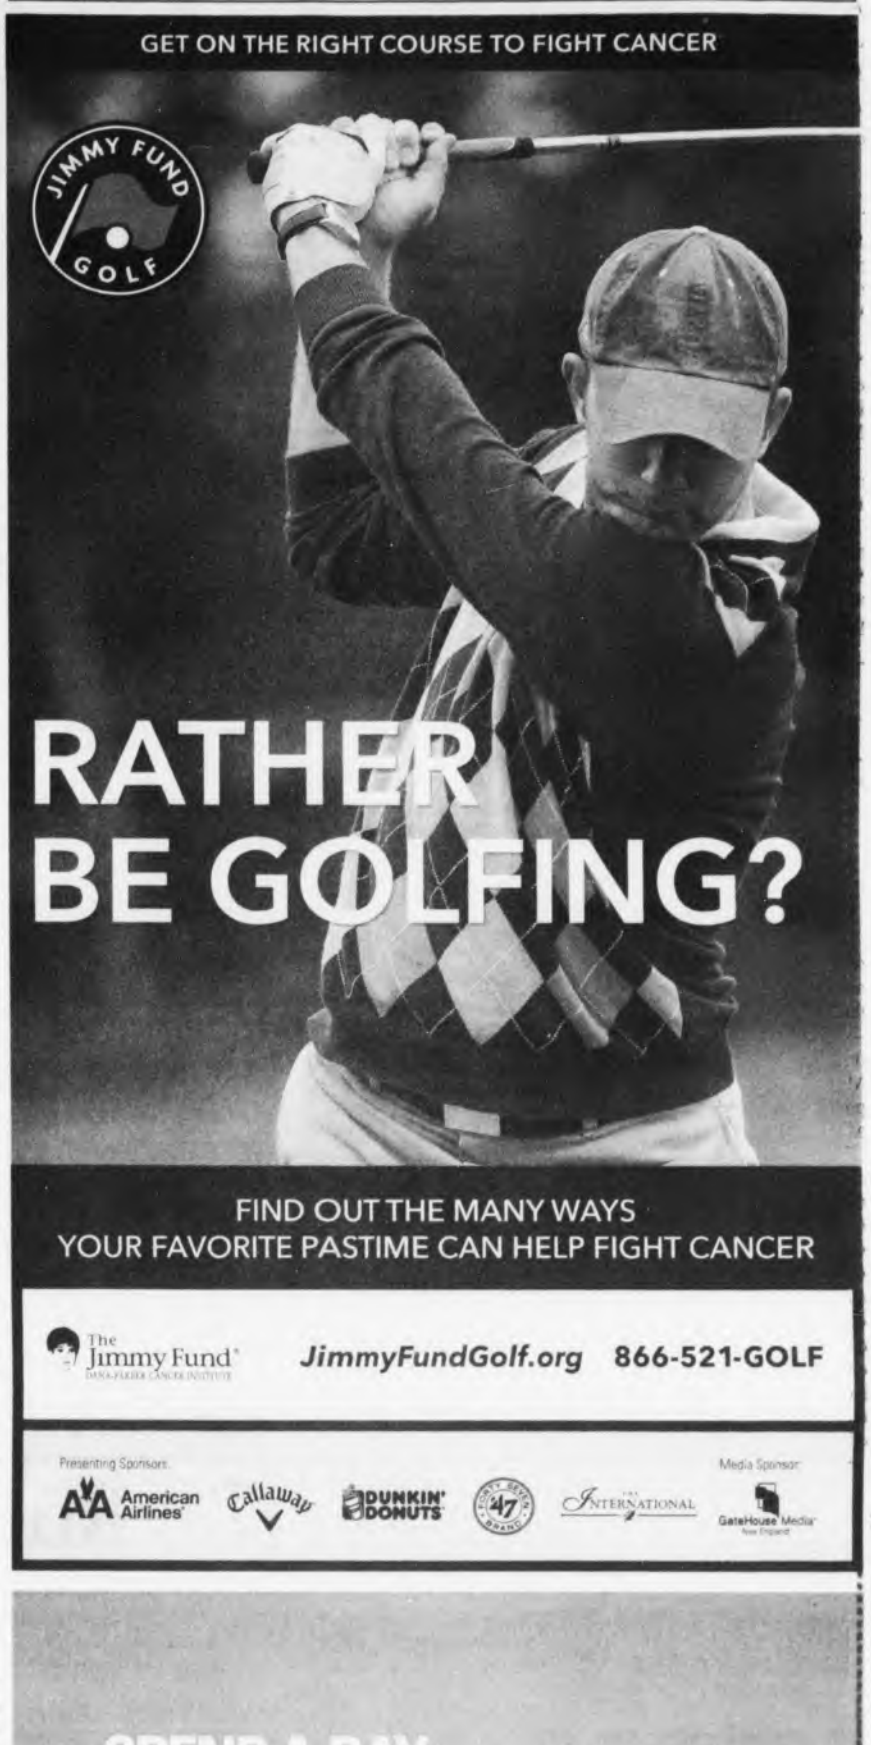
One point I disagree with is Callahan's disapproval of the process of what he calls "piecemeal" sewering of Cohasset, including the "20-year unwinnable litigation with the state." I was an active participant in all of this, and I, along with many other townspeople, are in complete opposition to his position. We fully support the town's phased approach to partial sewering; and I think the small band of people 30 years ago that rebelled against the concept of universal sewering are the town's unsung heroes. The immense Phase I cost and total cost for the proposed universal sewering project would have suffocated the town in debt, making today's water department debt crisis pale in comparison.

Another of Callahan's themes is that the town should zone by zoning, not by sewering policy. We all agree the town should do this, but it won't happen. There has not been a comprehensive zoning change for some 30 years, when the town last increased residential lot sizes, and I don't believe it will happen again for many years to come, if ever. It is true that lack of universal sewering prevents universal development, but that is not all bad. The main point is that this is only a side consequence of the sewering policy, not the driving force behind the policy. The driving force was to solve our sewer-related public health threats in a manner that won state approval and was cost-effective.

Another of Callahan's themes is that the town's sewer and water departments have the inherent problem of being "run by part-time, amateur and sometimes incapable boards." With all due respect, I think that the same thing could be said about the board of selectmen's running of the town.

The structural solution Callahan proposes is to combine the boards and have them report to the town manager. This would put the sewer and water commissions under control of a "part-time, amateur, and sometimes incapable" board of selectmen, and I don't think there would be any net gain by doing this. There is nothing about the selectmen's job that causes them to be better managers or have better judgment than the individuals serving on other elected boards. Article 9 of the June 14 Town Meeting now gives the town manager authority to approve water expenditures, and he already has the authority to approve sewer expenditures. We should leave it at that.

The selectmen have always had the persuasive power, and the opportunity, to influence water expenditures, but time after time they have failed to do so. Specifically, all the boards of selectmen in place since 1996, when the water department began its $36 million spending spree, had every opportunity to participate in shaping, scheduling, prioritizing and reducing the spending spree. The water department came before the selectmen for approval of every one of its rate increases and every one of its proposed Town Meeting spending articles, and the selectmen rubber-stamped them all, and recommended them all to Town Meeting. The town would not have the present water rate crisis if past selectmen (or, for that matter, past advisory boards) had requested and vetted water department rate projections each time the department requested spending authorization. Of course, the water department itself should have done projections before embarking on each new investment. I view our excessive water department debt as resulting from a series of failures of both the board of selectmen and advisory committee, as well as of the water commission.



I agree with Callahan that professional management of the town's water, sewer and public works departments would be a plus. But the professional management that is needed should not be provided by the selectmen or the town manager, but by a town engineer — a person with a degree in civil engineering, a PE license and a solid background of design and operational experience. Between salary and benefits, a position like this would cost the town $200,000 per year. The question is, is it worth squeezing another $200,000 into the town's budget for this, when we could continue to get along with our present boards?

In my opinion, Callahan's proposed remedies don't get to the heart of the matter, which is that Cohasset government is inherently reactionary. It does not act for the future. Town government consists of unpaid volunteers with busy careers and lives of their own, and I have rarely seen them go out and seek additional work, such as driving the planning effort for the town's future. They rise to the occasion when an issue is brought to them, but they do not proactively implement continual improvements in the town, as would be done by any company in the business sector. Some government functions involve future planning by their very nature, such as the capital budget committee, but most do not. Planning for the future of the sewer system was a reaction to a lawsuit by the state in 1980. Planning for the future of the water system was a reaction to a crisis in water pressure in the summers of 1994 and 1995.

The function of the town manager is to manage, not to plan. By its budget restrictions, the function of the planning board is limited to review of proposed site developments. It seems to me that the only way to introduce planning in general to town government would be to hire a town planner, working under an appropriate charter. But this would require that another $200,000 annually be squeezed into the town budget.

Gary Vanderweil is a past sewer commissioner and a past selectman.

Treat's Pond comes back again

$1.1 million, which will have to be matched with non-federal source funding (town or state funding) if the project was to move forward.

The primary contention with the Army Corps proposal is that it calls for establishing a connection between the degraded pond on the ocean side of Atlantic Avenue, near White Head Road, and the inner harbor. A group of residents have raised concerns about how additional freshwater being brought to the harbor will affect its ecology.

Selectmen have expressed reservations about adding more fresh water to the harbor. In a vote this past spring, the only way any of the selectmen would support the Army Corps project was if an environmental impact study done was done for Cohasset Harbor to gauge whether there would be a negative effect from the proposed project.

"Not too much needs to be discussed, more needs to be engineered. Before we translate water from one outlet to another we should look further at the outlet on Sandy Cove."
Noel Collins

For the restoration of the pond, the Army Corps looked at several possibilities, ultimately determining the route to the harbor was the most cost-effective and efficient solution. Although not the primary objective, the Army Corps has said the project could have some effect on alleviating the flooding.

The residents in the Treat's Pond area have been dealing with flooding problems during large rain events for two decades. Floods have caused vehicle damage and on several occasions restricted access, causing residents to vacate their homes.

"The (stormwater) committee finds that flooding at Treat's Pond neighborhood is serious and not a problem of their own making. The homeowners there are entitled to relief and will not be able to accomplish (that) without the participation of the town," the stormwater committee's annual report states.

"Not too much needs to be discussed, more needs to be engineered," Collins said. "Before we translate water from one outlet to another we should look further at the outlet on Sandy Cove."

Selectmen Chairwoman Karen Quigley prefaced the stormwater committee's presentation by reminding the audience that the group was only an advisory group to the selectmen and no final decisions would be made that night. About a dozen members of the community — Treat's Pond abutters, Sandy Cove residents and residents concerned with the harbor's health — turned out for the discussion.

Ralph Dormitzer of Atlantic Avenue submitted comments on behalf of 15 residents of Sandy Cove to argue against the stormwater committee's conclusion that a Sandy Cove outlet has not been thoroughly explored. He called conducting additional engineering services for a Sandy Cove outlet a "fruitless exercise."

"We support an independent analysis of the recommendations made by the Army Corps of Engineers for an outlet at Cohasset Harbor with respect to the environmental impact," Dormitzer said, offering several written opinions from engineers collected since 2006 that affirmed his stance that a Sandy Cove-Treat's Pond connection was not feasible or efficient.

"In addition to the detailed technical analyses that uniformly reject the Sandy Cove option, there is overwhelming historical and anecdotal evidence that a Sandy Cove option had not worked. Still another evaluation of that option cannot be considered a prudent investment of time or dollars," Dormitzer said.

Selectmen did not discuss the stormwater advisory committee's recommendation or Dormitzer's comments. The Treat's Pond/Army Corps project will be discussed in detail at a selectmen's meeting later this summer, date to be determined.

The town has until Sept. 1 to determine if it would like to move ahead with the project. The town's funding share of the project would need to be approved by Town Meeting.

Making noise about music

members to voice their concerns and convey the value they hold for the music department.

Senior Ashley Howard acted as the spokesperson for the band members. Ashley currently serves as a section leader in the concert band and a member of the jazz band.

"We strongly feel that the best choice for the school would be to hire another teacher in her place, one that is certified and qualified to teacher band, chorus, and general music," Ashley said.

In an informal survey of middle school and high school students performed by the section leaders of the high school band, Ashley said there were at least 30 students who had requested a high school band class but had not yet been placed in one and that the music participation estimates provided by the guidance department were inaccurate at this time.

"I believe this strongly shows that the band program is not losing numbers as the administration has suggested, but rather growing in its amount of students," Ashley said.

Ashley provided background information about the extracurricular band and chorus, the concert band's recent accolades and community involvement, and said the plan to split the teachers' time between the middle and high schools would stretch them — and the program — too thin.

"It must be realized that causing such drastic changes to the school district's music program would impact not only our school, but our community as a whole," Ashley said.

"It must be realized that causing such drastic changes to the school district's music program would impact not only our school, but our community as a whole."
Ashley Howard

Her comments garnered applause from much of the audience, including some members of the school committee.

Walsh said part of benefit of the staffing changes would be to allow more continuity of instruction in the music program.

"Right now it's fragmented and the middle school teacher is not aware of the kids' skill level," Walsh said, adding she did not see any disadvantages to the proposal. "The advantage is a stronger program."

Parent Barbara Buckley took exception to that statement. She said the issue of "continuity" is not talked about in other areas of the curriculum.

"It sounds like this is something invented to justify a 20 percent cut to the music department, because that's what this is," Buckley said. She, too, received applause from the audience.

For parent Dave Rioux, the changes mean larger classes, fewer sections and less flexibility in the scheduling possibly blocking interested students from taking music.

"We're injuring the program," Rioux said.

Parent Diane Kennedy provided an anecdote to paint a picture of the strength of the music program. On the last day of school for the seniors, a CHS alum came back to the high school, trumpet in hand. He told Kennedy he just wanted to come by and see if anyone wanted to play with him.

"That's what music education is all about," Kennedy said.

At one point, school committee member Paul Schubert called for the middle school music teaching position to be filled.

"You can't take a teacher out without something being affected," Lieb said, acknowledging the "serious concerns" brought forward from the community.

Walsh said she would verify the numbers at the high school to see how many music sections were really warranted.

Lieb asked Walsh if there should be a motion of support, one way or another, from the school committee.

"I don't think you have enough information," Walsh said.

Lieb also noted the committee's limited authority in the operation of the schools.

School committee members were set to meet with the Cohasset Teachers Association Monday to talk about the music program staffing and other issues. On Wednesday, Walsh said principals and the teachers were working on a satisfactory resolution.

'Bakes For Hunger' holds Bake Sale

"Cohasset Bakes For Hunger And Feeds The Youth" is having a bake sale from 2:30 to 4 p.m. Thursday, July 15, at the Cohasset Center where the Farmers Market is, as part of Share Our Strength's Great American Bake Sale, a national campaign that mobilizes Americans to end childhood hunger by holding bake sales in their communities with all baked goods along with free drinks and live entertainment.

Golden Living Cohasset, Sunrise of Cohasset and Cohasset Council on Aging is joining the millions of people across the country who are making a difference by joining the fight against childhood hunger in America. It's a simple as hosting a bake sale.

This year, nearly 17 million children across the country struggle with hunger. That's almost one in four kids. Funds raised through "Cohasset bakes for hunger and feeds the youth" Great American Bake Sale will be used to support Share Our Strength's efforts to end childhood hunger in America. Share Our Strength works to surround kids facing hunger with nutritious food where they live, learn and play.

Milestone season

Cohasset/Scituate Legion baseball celebrates 20th year

By William Wassersug
WWASSERS@CNC.COM

Things did not go easily for the Cohasset Post 118 American Legion baseball team in the early part of the schedule.

With the bulk of their roster gone due to high school playoffs in Cohasset, the combined Scituate/Cohasset squad struggled.

"We had a rough beginning," said coach Scott Arnold, a Scituate guy who founded the team 20 years ago. "We were missing our Cohasset kids. We only had 12."

Legion Baseball

Still, Arnold felt he had to make an effort to get going.

Last year, Post 118 was left out of the tournament because they weren't able to reschedule games that had been lost in the rainy part of the spring.

"We wanted to play," Arnold said. "We know there's no time to make up games."

The hardest part of playing the early games was a shortness in depth where five CHS players usually play.

This year that same group was working its way to a MIAA Div. 4 state title.

Arnold is thrilled to have them back.

"With those guys, we can play anybody," he said. "We have the State Champion MVP on the field."

Among the players expected to help are Brendan Doonan, who is a star pitcher and an outstanding hitter.

Jeff Cavanaro was on the mound for Cohasset's State Title Championship game.

Anders Goetz solidifies the defense in the infield (he was Cohasset's starting shortstop) and was one of the state's most consistent hitters all season.

Jamie Faber was another big contributor to the Cohasset run, and has played infield and pitched for Post 118.

Post 118 also has B.C. High's John Kearney and Pat Kearney, along with Scituate's Rob McCunney, who was B.C. High's starting shorststop.

Kevin Barber and Jordan Barry join Post 118 from Milton Academy.

Choate's John Giuggio has been excellent behind the plate.

He made a big play in a win against Quincy, catching a popped-up foul ball and

Field hockey captains run successful clinic

By William Wassersug
WWASSERS@CNC.COM

When it comes to team bonding, the Cohasset field hockey team has passed one test with flying colors.

Last week, the team captains, Emily Toomey, Natalie Dignam, Sarah Mavilia, Kelsey Erler and Eliza Kinnealey, with help from some of their teammates, hosted the Cohasset Summer Lacrosse Clinic at Milliken Fields.

The clinic was for sixth-graders through high schoolers with the combined purpose of raising funds for the field hockey boosters, teaching younger players about the game and improving skills for players who will be playing on the high school team someday.

This was completely a project by the captains, with adults only helping as advisors.

The girls really did all the work.

"They conceived it and did the whole thing by themselves," Cohasset coach Laura Guiliano said. "It was huge for them. They talked to the A.D. (Ron Ford) and Beth Gilman (Cohasset Youth Field Hockey) to work with her on registration."

Guiliano was impressed with the effort, and came out to help line the field and take a look at some of the upcoming talent.

That was the extent of her involvement.

"The girls spent hours planning activites," Guiliano said. "I'm tremendously proud of their leadership, their organization and ability to work with each other. Even after the first day they packed their stuff and went to Kelsey's to talk about what they did and what they could do better the next day."

Erler said the week was fun.

"It's fun. We're really enjoying it," she said. "I've helped coach middle schoolers before. They're very talented and open."

Welch just short in bid for trifecta

TEE TIME

PAUL HARBER

Quincy's Michael Welch's bid to win three tournaments in a row, after capturing titles at the Cape Cod and Vermont Opens, went down the tubes when James Hazen won the Massachusetts Open last Wednesday at Wellesley Country Club.

Welch shot a final-round 71 and finished tied for ninth with Brockton's Matt Parziale, who also shot a 71.

Despite being off his game all three days, Welch remained in contention until his final few holes. He eagled the par-5 15th to go to 2-under for the tournament, but bogeyed the 17th and 18th to fall back to even. Welch said that he struggled to find a rhythm with his putter.

"My speed was terrible all week," Welch told MGA officials and reporters afterward.

Parziale was 3-over through his first three holes after bogeying the par-4 second and double-bogeying the par-4 third, but he played solidly after that, making two birdies and no bogeys.

"The pins were tough, so I didn't make many (long) putts," Parziale said, "but I made a lot of four- and five-footers to keep the round going."

Putting also factored into the competition for low amateur, as it helped one local player and hindered another.

Brockton Country Club's Mike Calef had always been a "look at it and hit it" putter, but recently began using alignment aids to make him more accurate. His new practice approach translated into a very steady tournament, as he shot 70 the first two days and 71 on Wednesday to finish tied for 11th, and share low amateur honors with South Hadley's Richy Werenski. It's the second time in three years that Calef has earned at least a tie for low amateur at the Mass. Open. He won the title outright in 2008.

"(In 2008) that was one of my first events back as an amateur (after being pro)," Calef said. "I didn't know what to expect (back then), and I just went out there and played and that kind of happened. Once you do it once, you know what to expect.

"(The first time) I didn't even know there was a trophy for it."

Norwell's Ben Spitz, a former Massachusetts Amateur champion, credited his putting with his first-round 69. Despite shooting another 69 on Wednesday to finish tied for 14th, he said he wasn't able to regain his first-round form.

"The last two rounds, my putter kind of failed me," Spitz said. "In the first round it was on fire, but I couldn't get back to that."

Spitz at least won the family competition, beating older brother Brian, who shot a final-round 79 to finish 40th. Thorny Lea Golf Club's John Hadges also shot a 79 to finish tied for 38th.

Rusty wheels

Harry "Rusty" Gunnarson is 50-something and still gets a thrill every morning when he sees the sun rise.

Why? Because it's another day he can go to the golf course.

Gunnarson is one of the top professionals to come out of the region.

He was born in Duxbury ("but between you and me we were one of the two or three 'poor' families in town," he'll confess.) and for a time he and his brothers ran the golf operation at North Hills in town, after that, he ran Bay Pointe in Wareham and today he is the professional at Rochester Country Club when he isn't teeing it up in one tournament or another.

Golfing has always been in his blood.

He and his equally smitten brothers, Bob and Dick, all got the bug from his father, Harry Sr.

"He taught my two brothers and I how to play golf. He got us into it," said Rusty. "When my father was young, he used to caddie for Henry Picard at Plymouth Country Club."

His father brought them all down to Duxbury Yacht Club where they served as caddies. "My mother worked there. She had a catering service and did a lot of the cocktail parties, dinners and what have you," Gunnarson remembers.

"If you're caddie at the yacht club you could play for five days a week Monday through Friday after four o'clock. We could play all day Monday, and of course we'd go there weekends after six o'clock in the evening and sometimes my father would come out with us on weekends and play with us. But he was a worker," His father graduated from law school but never passed the test. He was a bookkeeper for MIT and later for BF Goodrich.

"I really had no instruction, you learned off the better players… You emulated their swings. I always have my brothers to help me with my game they were always much better players. When we were younger. My brother Dick was really good."

KNOW THE PRO

Nora Berard

Pembroke Country Club

What is in your bag?

I play with Callaway clubs, and my favorite club in the bag is my seven wood. It is most definitely my "go to" club. I have a lot of confidence with that club in my hand.

Describe your best round (where, when, highlights).

Interpreting "best" as being most memorable and not best score, I think the round of golf I played at Heritage in Myrtle Beach stands out. It was the first course I played in South Carolina and I was struck by the beauty of the course and impressed by the southern hospitality of the staff. The Spanish moss that drapes the trees and my first sighting of an alligator in the wild further fueled my favorable impression. Though the day was rainy it couldn't diminish the impact of a great course and great company.

If you could be in a dream foursome, who would be in it?

Bobby Jones would definitely be in my dream foursome. His phenomenal accomplishments on the course were equaled by his achievements in his personal life. I have such respect for the way he played the game and the legacy he left. My father, Tom O'Leary, would also be in that foursome. He not only taught me how to play golf, he taught me how to "live" golf. He's been gone for more than 20 years now and his words and lessons on golf and life are still vivid in my mind. Rounding out that foursome would be my partner David Pomarico. His passion and respect for the game are equal to my own...I just wish my game was equal to his!

Describe your introduction to golf (who, where, how old you were, and how the game attracted you).

I don't have any memory that pre-dates my first memories of golf. My father was the founding pro at Foxborough Country Club and I was just shy of 3 years old when he accepted that position. Golf has been a part of my whole life! My father's deep love of the game and the people who played it was contagious. The great golf teacher Harvey Penick wrote a book titled, "And if you play golf, you're my friend." That was my dad...he never met a golfer he didn't like. My love of the game sprang from his passion.

What is your favorite golf course (and why?) besides your current club?

The Kittansett Club in Marion remains one of my favorite golf courses. It's situated on a peninsula in the ocean and is subject to the weather whims of the sea. You not only play the course, you play the weather. The natural beauty of this piece of real estate is enormous. On a sunny day the whole course seems to shimmer.

What's the best golf tip you ever received?

Take up tennis . . . just kidding. The best golf tip I've ever received was to take an athletic stance when addressing the ball. The implication of this, of course, is to be well balanced and flexible – both necessary to make a good swing.

What makes your home golf course special?

There are so many things to love about Pembroke Country Club. As many times as I've been on the course, I am still awed by how lovely it is. The course is well designed (Skip Wogan) and the new owners are committed to bringing back the excellent playing conditions that were once its trademark. The course is carved out of the woods and has quite a few water features as well. Though it is a challenging course, it isn't an intimidating one. There are plenty of opportunities for birdies.

Where you can play entry-level golf

Golf isn't the easiest game to learn how to play.

Sure, it is popular.

According to the National Golf Foundation, more than a million Americans pick up the game every year.

Course of the Week

But the NGF also estimates that a million hackers quit the game every year, too, which is why the number of golfers in the United States remains about 20-something million.

Why?

Not just because it is one of the more difficult athletic pursuits to matter, it is one of the most intimidating games.

Think about it?

If you've never swung a club, but just watched the recently concluded US Open at Pebble Beach and decided you wanted to learn the game, what do you do?

For many, some well-meaning friend gives you a hand-me-down set of clubs and after a few attempts at the driving range, they take you to a golf course.

Hopefully, it isn't somewhere like The Pinehills in Plymouth or Granite Links in Quincy.

Beginners have no business playing tracks like those.

Before they finish the first round, they'd run screaming to their automobile and never try to swing a club again.

However, there are wonderful entrances to this game.

Two that come to mind – because when I first began swinging the club in earnest, they were places in the region that I learned to play and was not humiliated – are Rockland Golf Course and Strawberry Valley in Abington.

If you are familiar with Major League Baseball and its farm system, where The Pinehills and Granite Links are the Major Leagues, Rockland and Strawberry Valley are Class A ball.

Rockland is a par-3 course, which for many, many years was the longest par-3 east of the Mississippi.

Strawberry Valley is a sporty little nine-hole municipal course, owned by the town, and both are leased to a group headed by two of New England's top professionals, Charlie Lanzetta and Tony Morosco.

Lanzetta is one of the top rules officials in the United States and has officiated at many of the top major tournaments; Morosco is one of the leading and most respected professionals in the nation, having served important roles in the PGA of America.

And both are proponents of junior golf.

For many years Lanzetta's junior program at Rockland Golf Course has been lauded nationally. In 2001 the PGA of America honored Lanzetta as the recipient of the PGA's Junior Golf Leader Award.

During July and August, for the junior golfer, there is a plethora of tournaments they can compete in between the two clubs, including the Strawberry Valley and Rockland GC junior championships July 20, the Rockland Junior Open on July 29, and a Member Parent-Child Tournament Aug. 21-22.

And you can play both tracks without putting a huge dent in your wallet, too.

These courses are not only favorable for juniors and beginners, they are senior-friendly places to play.

The over 60 bunch, who have lost too many yards off their tee shot and have turned in those 3-irons and 4-irons for fairway woods, have the opportunity to reach these greens in regulation and have that joy of putting for birdies and pars again.

STAFF PHOTO / CHRIS BERNSTEIN

Golfer his tee shot on the par-4 fifth hole at Strawberry Valley Golf Course in Abington.

Strawberry Valley consists of two par-3s, a par-5 and six par 4s, and plays to about 2,500 yards from the very tips to about 2,000 yards from the front tees.

A couple of our favorite holes are the downhill par-4, the longest on the course, which measures just under 370 yards from the back tees. But it plays much shorter. The hole is all downhill so you get extra roll on your drive. The par-4 fifth is less than 300 yards, but there is a water hazard that must be negotiated.

Financially, Strawberry Valley is a bargain for seniors. It has special annual rates for those over 60, retirees who have time on their hands and are looking to keep busy. It is $900 a year for seniors to join as seven-day a week membership and it is $800 for those would rather select a five-day weekday plan for the year. Daily green fees are under $30.

Once you master these courses, you are ready to move on. But many times, these courses are enough to satisfy the average golf and they have no desire to play anywhere else.

And one more bit of advice, if you have a youngster who is going to give golf a whirl, make sure he has a buddy who is willing to try it, too. If won't be as intimidating if you have a friend playing the game with you. In fact, it is much more fun.

Williamsport Tourney team drops opener

Squad rebounds with shutout victory

The 2010 Cohasset Williamsport team lost their opener last Sunday, 3-1 to Abington.

Cohasset ran up against a talented pitcher, Brian Dwyer, who held the Cohasset squad to three hits over 5-2/3 innings. Cohasset had its chances though, leaving the bases loaded in the fourth inning and also had the tying runs on in the bottom of the sixth. Cohasset's three hits were from Ben Rice, who had a single and a double, and Brett Dooley, a single in the sixth.

Cohasset now entered the loser's bracket of the double elimination tournament of nineteen teams from District 8.

Game two saw Cohasset jump out to an early 3-0 first inning lead on a Jake Burchill bomb to left center that travelled an estimated 250 feet.

That was all the runs Brett Dooley would need, as he went all six innings throwing only 67 pitches in a complete game 6-0 shutout of Norwell. Danny Axelson went 2 for 3 with a run scored. Ben Rice had a RBI double and also scored on a Matt Montefusco ground out and Dooley had a single, a double, a walk and a run scored. Defensively Axelson was stellar at short, as was Owen Gideon-Murphy at third and Justin Fein made a nice sliding catch in centerfield for Cohasset.

Cohasset will play Weymouth National on Tuesday night July 6 at Barnes Field in Cohasset at 5:45pm.

Field hockey captains run successful clinic

The early part of the clinic was dedicated to teaching basic skills. The end of the clinic was scrimmage time for the older kids and more skill work for the younger kids.

"Most of us started in the seventh or eighth grade," Toomey said. "As freshmen, we only had a year or two experience. We want to help get them started."

Toomey said there was a plan.

"The first couple of days we broke into stations," Toomey said. "We worked on shadowing, defensive skills and different obstructions, just learning how to play. Field hockey is a picky sport. As they get older they'll get it. We're still learning things. It's a continuing process."

"We put in tons of hours preparing and organizing so there wouldn't be chaos," Mavilia said. "We had check ins in the morning so we knew who was there and what teams they'd be on. It's nice to help the younger girls.

"We went to Kelsey's house. Just thinking about the rules that come naturally to us is impossible. We decided to stick with basics, starting, stopping, handling sticks. Basics."

Toomey, as well as the rest of the captains and Guiliano are excited about the fall.

"Last year we improved so much from the year before," Toomey said. "I think we're going to have a great season. Everyone gets along really well. There's no resentment between anybody. Everyone gets along and communicates with each other."

Guiliano agrees.

"I'm looking forward to a great season," she said.

Mavilia enjoyed the week.

"It was a ton of fun," Mavilia said. "The varsity team was so great cooperating and helping us out. This was really good for the new girls going into sixth grade, the girls who have never picked up a stick before. They got to spend eight hours this week learning the sport."

Mavilia has worked with kids before.

"I work at the sailing club," she said. "I've worked with a lot of younger girls there and I have younger siblings."

With the clinic finished, next up are captains practices in August, with the season beginning in the fall.

"Coach wants us running and working with weights over the summer," Toomey said. "They say it takes about eight weeks to get into playing shape. That's about what we've got."

Cohasset field hockey captain Eliza Kinnealey works with a camper during the clinic last week.

throwing back to third on a botched suicide squeeze in an eventual 8-4 win for Cohasset/Scituate.

In the early part of the season, Scituate's Casey Burns was a big help in keeping the team in contention.

"Casey Burns carried us through our first five games," Arnold said. "He pitched a lot of innings."

Another big help was Scituate's Bob Norton.

"He's a first-year player," Arnold said. "I told him I'd put him on the team, but that he probably wouldn't play. Right after I said that I handed him the ball on opening day. He really saved us. He threw 18 innings. He gave Burns enough rest to get back. He's still out there running hard and chasing fouls. It shows his character. He's done a fantastic job."

For Arnold, he's enjoying his time with the team, and has a goal in mind.

"I have triplet 11-year old boys (Scott, Sean and Christian)," he said. "Scotty has been our batboy for five years now. I want to be here long enough for all three of them to play for me."

Arnold said this team literally was a dream-come-true.

"About 25 years ago they hand a team and they were losing every game badly," he said. "They gave up on it quickly. My dream was to play for them. When I got out of the service (Army 7th Calvalry) I started the team. It's the love of my life."

Arnold also has another long-standing member of the team.

"Greg Taylor is in his third year coaching for me," Arnold said. "He did an amazing job coaching without his stars. Greg was a former shortstop and starting pitcher for me in the 90's. He came back to coach his team. Bobby Barrow is my pinching coach. Bobby throws batting practice to the team every game and he is responsible for our success at the plate. Bobby has a rubber arm and throws to 18 batters a day. That's no easy task. Kudos to them."

Post 118 is in action at Hyde Park on Friday and then hosts Jamaica Plain on July 5 at Cohasset.

They are at Braintree July 7 and finish with a home game at Scituate High School on July 8.

Heading into Wednesday's home game against Stoughton, Post 118 was 3-7-1.

Their most recent game against Milton was called a 9-9 tie due to darkness at the beginning of the week. Both teams picked up a point for the tie.

Mastering the challenge

CONSERVATORY NOTES

GEORGE LITTLE

South Shore Conservatory

Most people know that daily practice is an essential component of being successful when learning a new skill or ability. Yet, it seems surprisingly few of us actually put this into motion in our own lives, and many children grow into adulthood without learning what it truly means to practice in order to master a new ability.

Music lessons are somewhat unique, as they make a serious attempt at developing a child's ability through measured daily practice. Some sports are able to instill the value of repetition and practice, but more often organized sports highlight individuals who already possess talent instead of developing it in those who do not.

In January, I adopted the "30 Day Challenge" with the hopes of getting my Suzuki guitar students to practice a set minimum number of minutes every day for 30 days in a row in order to develop a habit of daily practice and to demonstrate the enormous strides and improvement that this amount of effort can bring to a child's playing. The key was consistency. Students ranged from 4 to 10 years old and needed their parents' help and support to complete the task.

I expected to see some moderate improvement from my students over the course of the month. I even hoped that some students would overcome challenges that had held them back from improving. I was not fully prepared for the success of my challenge for them. My students' improvement in the first week alone was astounding. They delightfully came to lessons and played with confidence and joy because, for some of them, they had never mastered their playing so completely before. They were thrilled to show off their ability. Of 15 students to accept the challenge, 12 completed it and were awarded trophies and prizes.

One family whose son and daughter study with me were ecstatic over the self-motivation the challenge inspired. Their children no longer needed to be reminded and coaxed into practice, but instead asked to practice, sometimes even practicing more than necessary. The joy of success made practice fun. This family reports to me regularly that their children still do not wish to miss practice and are concerned when they miss. Five-year-old student Jack struggled for almost a year with posture and balance in his lessons. The challenge helped correct most of the difficulties he had been encountering.

The ultimate goal of music lessons for young children should not be creating professional musicians, nor should it be to develop higher test scores in academics (although there is a correlation between the two). Rather, music lessons should contribute to raising a well-balanced, disciplined human being. The life lesson I hoped to instill with this challenge was that consistency is essential in learning. A child who learns what is necessary to improve in any facet of life will likely be one to avoid frustration at the hands of being overwhelmed, and will enjoy greater success.
